SEIZE LIQUOR, PAY FOR IT, SENATE ORDER

Spirits to Be Used for Shooting at Germans.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Whisky is dead in the United States for the period of the war.

It went into oblivion today when the senate voted to prohibit use of foods for manufacture of distillates and adopted also an amendment by Senator Smoot of Utah directing the president to commandeer all distilled spirits now in bond and to pay owners thereof the cost of production plus not more than 10 per cent as profit.

The senate provision would limit consumption to stocks in retailers' hands or withdrawn before the law goes into effect. Stocks of distilled beverages in bond were estimated tonight at between 200,000,000 and 300,000,000 gallons and the annual normal consumption at 120,000,000 gallons.

MAY COST $1,000,000,000.

To purchase this enormous quantity of liquor, or what is left of it after withdrawals in anticipation of the legislation, it is estimated that the government would have to spend from $800,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. The probable loss in federal revenues was placed at from $200,000,000 to $400,000,000, although this as well as the cost of purchase would depend entirely on how much liquor was withdrawn tax paid before the commandeering.

Immediate and probably enormous withdrawal of distilled liquors from bonded warehouses before the senate provision could become effective was generally predicted tonight. It was estimated that manufacturers and dealers probably could raise funds enough to withdraw at least half of the existing supply, or enough to meet consumption demands for a year or more.

BLASTS FOR GERMANS.

The government is expected to use all whisky and other bonded spirits that it purchases in the manufacture of war munitions and other supplies.

The gloom of the whisky drinker was made still deeper through the adoption of another provision offered by Senator Cummins of Iowa which prohibits the importation of distillates during the war.

The vote on the Smoot amendment was 65 to 12 and on the general prohibition provision 45 to 37.

CUTS OFF BIG REVENUE.

The action of the senate in accepting the Smoot amendment served as a two edged sword, cutting into the vitals of the whisky interests with one edge and the war revenue bill with the other. Coming entirely unexpectedly to leaders on the finance committee, the Smoot provision caused Senator Simmons to ask permission to withdraw the revenue measure which he had reported early this week, inasmuch as some substitute for liquor revenues thus curtailed must be made.

Beer and wine were triumphant in the action of the senate and in all probability will maintain their advantageous position when the food bill finally passes the senate and is returned to the house for conference.

Ultimate approval of the food bill with the prohibition feature as it stands tonight will make whisky a rarity in the United States as a beverage.

BEER AND WINE MUST PAY.

Beer and wine will have to pay for their escape from death. One effect of the adoption of the Smoot amendment will have is to increase greatly the taxes on these beverages. Those liquors will have the field to themselves, and the finance committeemen feel that it would be only right to increase the taxes upon them.

The Smoot amendment will not stand the test in the courts, according to a prediction made during the debate by Senator Stone of Missouri, who insisted that to take the whisky at cost and pay for it, adding only 10 per cent to the cost price, was no more nor less than taking private property for public use without due process of law.

SENATORS CHANGE MINDS.

The Cummins amendment, adopted on Friday in the senate, which would have prohibited the withdrawal of any of the

BAR ON WHISKY AND ALL SPIRITS

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 7.—As finally adopted, the senate's prohibition substitute for the house provision reads:

"That from and after thirty days from the date of the approval of this act no person shall use any foods, fruits, food materials, or feeds in the production of distilled liquors, except for governmental, industrial, manufacturing, scientific, or medicinal purposes, nor shall there be imported into the United States during said war any distilled liquors; provided, that the president of the United States be and hereby is directed to take over for and on behalf of the government of the United States all distilled liquors that are held in bond at the time this act goes into effect, and he is hereby authorized to pay to the owners of such liquors the actual cost of the same plus a profit of not exceeding 10 per centum;

"And provided, further, that the collection of all excise taxes on distilled spirits in bond at the time of the passage of this act shall be suspended so long as this act is in force, and the distiller, in event that said distilled spirits shall be taken over by the government as herein provided, shall be discharged from all obligations for any and all taxes levied and assessed against said distilled spirits, provided, however, that the owner of the distilled spirits shall not withdraw any part thereof without the payment of the excise tax in force.

"Any person who willfully violates this section, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than two years, or both."

FEDERAL FOOD BUREAU TO OPEN BRANCH HERE

The council of national defense announces that a new branch of the national food administrator's office will be opened in Chicago within the next ten days.

The Illinois division of the council yesterday received a request from Herbert C. Hoover for permission to establish a branch food office in the building occupied by the council at 120 West Adams street. Here the latest and most approved methods for doing away with waste in the kitchens and for meeting the food shortage situation will be given out for the entire middle west.

Eighteen Thousand Freed by Charles, Is Report

AMSTERDAM, July 7.—The amnesty decree of Emperor Charles of Austria will mean the release of 18,000 persons, according to Vienna advices to the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin, a copy of which has been received here.

F. E. COMPTON TO WED A NIECE OF THE PRESIDENT

Mrs. Annie Cothran, Cousin of Miss Wilson, Clears Reports.

Frank E. Compton of Glencoe is engaged to marry a member of the president's family—though the guesses of his friends and of the newspapers, made over and over for the last two years, somehow managed not to hit on the right one.

Announcement came yesterday from Mrs. Annie Howe Cothran, now in New York, of her engagement to Mr. Compton. Mrs. Cothran is the niece of the president and a daughter of his sister, Mrs. Annie E. Howe, who died last September in New London, Conn.

Met in Concord.

She has been a frequent visitor at the White House and at the home in Cornish, N. H., which was the summer capital for a season or two. It was there that Mr. Compton met her. Repeated reports that he was engaged to Miss Margaret Wilson, the president's daughter, arose from the fact of their friendship of many years' standing.

Little Josephine Cothran, 5 years old, is said to be one of the president's favorites, and is inseparable from him when she and her mother are visiting his family. Mrs. Cothran, like her cousin, Miss Wilson—and, in fact, all the Wilson family—is an excellent musician, and has done some notable concert work as a soprano singer. She was heard last season both in St. Louis and in Pittsburgh concerts.

Has Two Children.

Mr. Compton, who has lived for many years in Glencoe, lost his first wife, who died in June, 1914. He has two children—Frank, 10 years old, and Edna, who is 7. The children are away for the summer, and Mr. Compton is now at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Booth in Glencoe.

Mrs. Cothran was divorced some time ago from Perrin Cothran. No plans have been made for the wedding, although Mr. Compton expects to bring his bride to live in Glencoe.

JOHN BRIGGS, ONE OF NOTED TWINS, DIES ON OUTING

John Briggs, one of the famous Briggs twins, is dead. Charles Briggs, the remaining twin, broken hearted and aged by the blow, brought his brother home yesterday from Eagle River, Wis., where he died. They had been on a vacation.

John Briggs was—and his brother is—56 years 4 months and 20 days old. The funeral will be tomorrow at 2 o'clock from 2701 North Clark street.

Almost from their infancy John and Charles Briggs had been inseparable. They had been boys, youths and men together. They were conspicuous for their dress, every item of which was precisely alike in each. While they were not employed in the same building, they always met after business hours and rode north to Diversey boulevard and Clark street—they lived nearby—and passed an hour. Then they went to dinner.

As usual, they went fishing together. They came home together, but it was a sorrowful journey for Charles.

FORECAST FOR THE WEEK.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—Forecast for the week beginning Sunday, July 8:

Region of the great lakes—There will be occasional showers during the week. The first half will be moderately warm, followed by cooler the latter half.

THE WAR

Petrograd reports renewal of vicious battle from Pinsk to the Carpathians and capture of various German strongholds. Berlin, however, says Russian tide has been stemmed.

Paris reports repulse of German attacks. Artillery duel along whole front. Berlin reports repulse of French surprise attacks in various sectors.

ALL RIGHT, GEN. PERSHING, WE'LL CALL 'EM SAMMY

PARIS, July 7.—Maj. Gen. Pershing likes the nickname "Sammy" for his soldiers. He said so in an interview with the United Press today.

"In my estimation," he explained, "that nickname is the best possible one for these American boys."

Pershing expressed his pleasure and gratitude for the tremendous reception which all Paris accorded him and the battalion of his troops which paraded here on July 4.

"It was one of the most impressive spectacles I ever saw," he said. "It was marvelous to see the French crowds shower flowers on our boys just as they would on their own boys. Personally the whole celebration moved me deeply."

Pershing conferred today with Marshal Joffre on a number of subjects in connection with the training of the movements.

PERSHING ARMY READY TO MOVE CLOSER TO FOE

Soldiers Spend Eight Hours Daily in Hard Drilling.

A FRENCH SEAPORT, July 7.—The American troops entered today on the final steps of the mobilization that shall prepare them to leave within a few days for a permanent training camp somewhere behind the firing line. The unloading of supplies is almost finished and rolling stock is being concentrated here preparatory to the departure of the troops.

The soldiers have been put through a vigorous grind of eight full hours each day. French officers who had seen service at the front took part in these exercises in order to give the benefit of their experience to the American soldiers.

The drills included a daily plunge into the sea, this phase of the sanitation problem being made easy by the proximity of the camp to the ocean.

Camp Extends Miles.

Groups of the more seasoned troopers have put the final touches on the camp, so that it will be in first class shape. The camp in the last few days has been expanded enormously, until today it extends for miles and can accommodate a large number of men. Water has been piped from the town and the system is equipped with every modern device.

The drill ground is not only ideal for the purpose, but has the advantage of being at a distance so that the men get a daily hike of about five miles.

For the men arriving at this and similar mobilization bases the American system of living in tents or wooden shacks will be followed, but when they arrive at a permanent camp they will be billeted among the townspeople and live in houses.

Spirits of Men Fine.

Few, if any, of the soldiers know just where they are to be sent, but all are enthusiastic over the prospect of getting nearer the scene of action. Their spirits are fine and their health is of the best, with the exception of a few cases of the mumps. The men have swamped the officers of their companies with a deluge of letters that must pass through a censorship.

A military funeral was held this morning for the only man that died since the American troops arrived here. He was Boatswain's Mate J. J. Dunn, who was drowned when he fell overboard from a launch and was carried under before his comrades could reach him.

Ashburn Aviation Field Still Has a Chance

While preparations have been completed for the opening of the government aviation field at Rantoul, Ill., it was indicated last night in a telegram from Congressman Wilson to John H. Lyle, representing Chicago business men, who are eager to keep the field at Ashburn, that while the work at Rantoul will proceed, there is every reason to believe the war department wishes to maintain a permanent plant at Ashburn, and that such steps will be taken later

Emperor of China Abdicates

LONDON, July 8.—A Reuter's limited dispatch from Peking announces that Hsuan Tung, the young emperor, has abdicated.

Hsuan Tung, the son of Prince Chun, first became emperor Dec. 2, 1908, under the regency of his father. On Dec. 6, 1911, Prince Chun abdicated as regent, and the youthful emperor abdicated the throne Feb. 12, 1912, and the Chinese republic was established. From then until last Sunday, when he was restored to the throne by Gen. Chang Hsun, military governor of Anhwei province, he had virtually been a prisoner of President Yuan Shi-Kai and Li Yuan Hung.

Hsuan Tung was born in 1906. He first bore the title of Prince Pu-Yi and took the name of Hsuan Tung when he was first enthroned as emperor in 1908.

TOKIO, July 7.—With hitherto hostile elements in the ranks of the supporters of the Chinese republic united, and with the monarchical party torn by factional strife, high Japanese circles today predicted that the monarchy cannot endure.

LONDON, July 7.—According to a Reuter's telegram from Shanghai, the leader of the bureaucratic republicans, Tuan Chi Jui, reports he attacked and routed the monarchist forces on Friday near Lang Fang.

REDUCED TO GARB OF ADAM, HE GETS A LEAF FROM EVE

When Henry Anderson, a divinity student of Northwestern university, awoke yesterday in his dormitory, he realized for the first time how Adam must have felt when autumn set in. He had no more clothes than a gold fish. His room had been entered and he had been despoiled of his garments, a wrist watch, a fountain pen and $11.

When this state of affairs reached the ears of some local co-eds they formed a first aid unit and sent relief post haste.

A string of beads,
A pair of pearl spats,
A Gainsborough hat,
A tulle bow,
A leaf.

In expectation of unfavorable comment should he issue forth as he found himself, Mr. Anderson had telephoned the police, who said they were sorry, and sent him a smock and a pair of breeks which had been the property of a plasterer, who, fancying himself to be a bird, had flown, sans garb, to the lake, into which he had vanished, being seen no more; in consequence of which the smock and the breeks became municipal property, in a manner of speaking.

LITTLE GIRL'S TIP PUTS BOASTER IN CELL AS SLACKER

Peter Wicek, a lodger at 352 West Chicago avenue, pulled the boner of his life last night when he boasted before the company of his failure to register for military service. Stella Truskolaska, 12 years old, the daughter of the landlord, heard him. She went to the telephone.

"Mister Bergeant," she said softly, so Wicek and his listeners did not hear, "I want you should come over and pinch a slacker."

She gave the address and presently two detectives arrived. Stella led them into the "front room."

"That's him," she said, indicating Wicek.

Wicek was in the middle of telling the open eyed lodgers how he'd be hornswoggled if he'd fight for the blim-blammed country when the detectives hoisted him.

DEMAND RAIDS BY AVIATORS ON GERMANY

Heart of London Is Bombed While Air Battle Rages.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, July 7.—"Avenge the innocent victims of the German aerial raids."

This was the cry which was raised all over London today almost before the hum of the twenty or more German aeroplanes which carried death to the center of London had ceased, and even while the roar of the guns further down the Thames could be heard as they fired at the fleeing raiders.

From every side there came demands that the allied airmen strike back, and that, for every attack on London or other English cities, raids be made over the centers of population in Germany.

WILL DEMAND REPRISALS.

The outcry for reprisals has become so strong that several members of parliament announce that they will make formal demand for such action as soon as the house of commons reconvenes.

The man in the street is confident the Germans would cease their slaughter of the English civilians if each raid were to be followed immediately by a counter attack on a German city. He has little sympathy with the sentiment expressed by the archbishop of Canterbury that the savage killing of women and children by the German bombs does not justify the British in adopting similar tactics.

He views the passive attitude of England as an invitation to further attacks.

....

DEMAND BETTER DEFENSE.

In the same breath the people of London demand that the aerial defenses of London be made so strong that a repetition of today's raid will not come. They point to the fact that despite the warnings when the raiders first reached the eastern shores of England, they were able to get well above London proper before any serious opposition developed.

Even after the British airmen rose to give battle the Germans were able to keep up their bomb dropping, and it was during this stage of the raid that most of the victims—thirty-four killed and 141 wounded—met their fate.

ANGERED DESPITE VICTORY.

This anger at the failure of the aerial defenses is not allayed by the fact that British flyers were victors in the fighting which followed the raid.

It is of no avail, the critics say, that the Royal Flying corps, pursuing the enemy, fought a pitched battle over the North sea and destroyed four of the raiders. Nor is the critic satisfied when they learn that British fliers, setting out from Dunkirk, accounted for seven German machines they met while searching for the fleet returning from England.

They want the raids prevented and they point to the fact that Paris no longer is subjected to attacks since the aerial defenses have been made perfect.

ATTACK GERMAN SHOPS.

One incident shows the present temper of the Londoner. While the ambulances were picking up the dead and wounded and the firemen were fighting the flames caused by the incendiary bombs, mobs gathered in the streets and attacked shops which bore German names on their door plates.

Great crowds, composed mostly of women, broke open several of the shops in the Lincoln Fields section of East London and bore the furniture into the streets, where they burned it. Police reserves were unable to stop them. The fact that the owners are in the concentration camps for alien enemies did not deter them.

FRENCH START REPRISALS.

The French already are engaged in reprisals. The official report issued in Paris tonight said attacks on Nancy and Epernay had been answered by raids on German cities. The French flyers bombed the Krupp works at Essen and threw many bombs on Treves and Ludwigshafen and many other towns.

This was only part of the fighting in the air along the line in France and Belgium.

Gen. Haig reported tonight that the British destroyed eight German aircraft and drove down crippled six others. Five British machines are missing.

DELUGE OF BOMBS.

The raid over London today lasted scarcely twenty minutes, but during that time a number of bombs were dropped on the fashionable West End and the Northwestern suburbs and a deluge of explosives was poured down on the central part of the metropolis, even on the "city" proper, the center in which lie the great banking and mercantile establishments.

The raiders first appeared above the Isle of Thanet and the coast of Essex. It is probable they then were in two or more squadrons, which joined as they sped onward toward London.

NORTHEAST HIT FIRST.

The northeast section of London was struck first. Then the raiders swung north and west over the fashionable west end and the northwestern suburbs, where the wealthy of London live.

Turning again to the south, they passed at terrific speed across London from northwest to southeast. In this flight they passed over the "city" proper.

The Germans, after passing the city, attempted to turn back to it, but were driven off and pursued over the seas.

37 KILLED; 141 WOUNDED.

When the fighting was over the toll of the raid was counted. It was found that 37 persons had been killed and 141 wounded. Of those killed 28 were men, 6 women, and 3 children. Seventy-four men, 30 women, and 37 children were wounded.

Six of those who were killed and two of the wounded were the victims of the bombs dropped on the Isle of Thanet. The remainder were residents of the metropolitan district of London.

PERFECT DAY FOR RAID.

The day could not have been better suited for the purpose of the Germans. The weather was warm and the sun shone, but there was a slight overcast hanging low in the skies, which made it almost impossible for the anti-aircraft guns to get or keep the range of the machines.

Their formation was like a flock of wild geese as they approached, and neither the British pursuers nor the guns were able to scatter them. Some observers say that a giant airplane piloted the squadron and that the bomb carriers were in the center, flanked by scouts for fighting off the British airmen.

In the suburbs the Germans dropped but few bombs. They turned back and started toward the city proper, apparently seeking some predetermined targets. Under, beside, and over them circled the British airplanes, spitting fire constantly from their machine guns.

The raiders attempted new tactics, apparently profiting from the small results of their previous raid. The squadron, which had been flying high, then began a swift toboggan downwards, its speed increasing tremendously under the assistance of gravity, the planes soon reaching a level evidently less than 1,000 feet in their swoop toward the central objectives.

GERMAN PLANS UPSET.

The plans of the raiders for an attack upon certain objectives appeared to be upset by the activity of the British airplanes, and several of the raiders in a desperate effort to lighten the load they were carrying in preparation for the retreat were compelled to drop their cargo aimlessly.

The last of their cargo of death fell on a section of workers' dwellings, where most of the victims were killed.

The attack was plainly directed against the civilian population and business and financial buildings. There is no question that the Germans knew where they were and it was no matter of scattering explosives blindly from a great height.

Why more persons were not killed is hard to explain. Thousands were in the streets in the area bombed, but probably a much larger proportion took shelter in the solid buildings, taught by the lesson of June 13.

HIDE IN BASEMENTS.

The upper story of one building, where several hundred men and girls were employed, was partly destroyed. First reports were that great loss of life had occurred in this building, but it later developed no one was even injured, as all the workers had been marshaled into the basement when the gunfire began.

The upper part of a solid office building was crushed. Large concrete blocks were thrown about the street, but no one in this building suffered injury, as refuge was early sought in the basement.

Among the places attacked was one of the most extensive metropolitan hospitals, on which the Red Cross flag was flying conspicuously and the location of which must have been known.

HAVE NARROW ESCAPE.

In one building a number of prominent business men had gathered for a conference. Above their heads was only plate glass. A bomb exploded in the lavatory, but did not even break the glass. Not one of the men was hurt.

The day's experience showed that persons in solidly constructed buildings are comparatively safe, but the windows of these buildings were today crowded with young clerks determined not to miss the spectacle at whatever cost. A bomb fell in the center of one well known street and the explosion shattered windows several hundred feet on both sides.

Workers Hardest Hit.

The fate of the humble dwellers in workmen's houses was different. They had no chance for their lives. The sight, now familiar to Londoners, of distracted, sobbing mothers rushing about the ruins of tenements, fearing to find, and sometimes finding, the mangled bodies of their children, was the most moving incident of the German victory.

A thorough investigation of the results of the battle by staff correspondents of the Associated Press showed that no military, munitions, or supply establishments were touched.

Even in basements the effect of the bombs was felt, the ground trembling as if an earthquake were in progress. Windows were shaken from frames, plaster from walls, and soot from chimneys.

Evidently there was a considerable difference in the caliber of the bombs dropped. Some of them had but slight effect, throwing up clouds of shrapnel-like debris. Others evidently were filled with a most powerful explosive.

Asquith Family Watches Raid.

Many Londoners seeking shelter from the raiders were given refuge in the basement of the American consulate.

The whole raid was observable from this point and among those who watched its progress were former Premier Asquith and his wife, whose home is nearby, and Robert P. Skinner, the American consul general.

The women secretaries of the consulate, most of whom belong to Red Cross societies, immediately donned their uniforms and proceeded to report themselves for duty in other sections.

An admirable feature of the air raid was the prompt, cool work of voluntary organizations, both men and women. Hundreds of special constables got quickly to work. The women's volunteer aid organizations immediately assembled at their various headquarters and motored to the scene, where they could help the wounded.

Crowds Jam Streets.

Five minutes after the explosion ceased the streets of the district attacked were jammed with masses of humanity. Fire engines, ambulances, patrol wagons, motors with nurses and doctors seemed to spring from the earth. The police were everywhere. Hundreds of special civilian constables were running to their stations, tying on their arm bands as they ran.

Meanwhile the Germans were being pursued by members of the Royal Flying corps, and a pitched battle was fought over the North sea. One German machine was brought down near the mouth of the Thames. Two others were smashed and sank into the waves of the North Sea, and a fourth, winged, fell in Dutch waters at the mouth of the Scheldt river.

The British naval flyers stationed at Dunkirk were flashed the news of the attack and set out to intercept the Germans on their return. They did not find the raiding fleet, but met other enemy aircraft. They destroyed four, drove two into the sea, and a seventh was forced to land damaged near Ostend.

The official reports giving the details of these battles say all of the British machines returned to their bases without damage.

Official Report on Raid.

The chronological story of the attack is given in the official reports which were issued by the war office during the day. The first report, in the form of a message from a southeast coast town, says:

"Eight enemy airplanes passed over here at 9:35, en route to London. It is believed here that one of the raiders was damaged by local anti-aircraft guns, because it turned back seaward. The remaining seven, proceeding inland, were presumably joined later by another squadron, which crossed the coast at different points."

Bombs Sent on Island.

A little later this official report was issued:

"Lord French reports that at about 9:30 o'clock this morning hostile aircraft in considerable numbers, probably in two parties, appeared over the Isle of Thanet and the east coast of Essex.

"After dropping some bombs in Thanet the raiders proceeded in the direction of London. Moving roughly parallel to the north bank of the Thames, they approached London from the northeast. Then changing their course, they proceeded north and west and crossed London from the northwest to the southeast. Bombs were dropped in various places in the metropolitan area.

"The number of raiding airplanes is at present uncertain, but was probably about twenty. They were attacked by artillery and by large numbers of our own airplanes, but reports as to the results of the engagements and as to damage and casualties have not yet been received."

Reports On the Pursuit.

Then the admiralty issued this report, which describes the pursuit by the British airmen:

"The enemy raiding squadron was chased by the royal naval air service machines from this country and engaged forty miles out at sea off the east coast.

"Two enemy machines were observed to crash into the sea and the third enemy machine was seen to fall in flames off the mouth of the Scheldt. All our machines returned safely."

Tells of Casualties.

Following this came the report in regard to casualties, which was as follows:

"Lord French reports that the total casualties reported by the police up to the present follow:

"Killed—Metropolitan area, men, 27; women, 4; children, 3; total, 34. Isle of Thanet, men, 1; women, 2; total, 3; total killed, 37.

"Injured—Metropolitan area, men, 74; women, 29; children, 36; total, 139. Isle of Thanet, women, 1; children, 1; total, 2; total injured, 141.

"One enemy machine downed by the royal flying corps fell into the sea off the mouth of the Thames."

Late in the evening sorrowing London received a more cheering message. It was this official report:

"The vice admiral at Dover has reports from Dunkirk that information was received that enemy aircraft were attacking England. Five flights were sent up to intercept them as they returned. The raiding enemy aircraft were not seen, but three enemy seaplanes were encountered and destroyed and one enemy airplane driven down into the sea. Another enemy airplane was driven down.

"The machines returned to replenish their petrol and left again immediately. In the course of this patrol one enemy airplane was brought down in flames and another, damaged, forced to land on the beach near Ostend.

"During their operations none of the raiding enemy airplanes was encountered, and it is thought highly probable they returned near the Scheldt and over Dutch territory."

RAID GERMAN TOWNS

PARIS, July 7.—The ministry of war issued the following report dealing with aerial raids on German cities as reprisals:

"In the course of a bombardment yesterday by enemy airplanes in the region of Nancy several bombs fell on a hospital. Three persons were killed, one of them a child, and four wounded. It is also reported that several were wounded at Epernay.

"On the night of July 6 eighty-four machines took to the air. Several of these raids had as their objectives towns situated very far in the interior of the enemy territory in reprisal for bombardments against our open towns.

Start Reprisal Trip.

"Eleven of our airplanes flew over Treves, on which they showered 2,650 kilos of shells. Seven fires broke out, one of great violence in the central station. Six other machines bombarded Ludwigshafen, doing considerable damage. Among other buildings the important Badische aniline factory was devoured by flames.

"Another of our airplanes, piloted by Marechal des Logis Gallois, pushed as far as Essen and dropped projectiles on the buildings of the Krupp factory.

"Military installations in the environs of Coblenz, the Hirson station, the railroad west of Pfalzburg, and the Thionville station were likewise bombarded. Another series of operations over the enemy lines gave excellent results.

"A fire started in the station at Dun-sur-Meuse; a munitions depot exploded at Bantheville; the railroad station at Machault and establishments at Cauroy were burned.

"In all 30,455 kilos of projectiles were used. Two of our airplanes have not returned."

AIR FIGHTS OVER BELGUIM

LONDON, July 7.—Fourteen German airplanes were swept from the air by the British in fighting over Belgium today. Eight German aircraft were shot down by British flyers and six others were forced to the ground behind their own lines out of control. Five British machines are missing.

"Between Lens and Ypres there was much aerial fighting," the British commander's statement said. "Yesterday hostile airplanes were encountered in large numbers, thirty composing one formation.

"We bombarded the enemy and enemy airdromes, carrying out successfully artillery photography. The enemy dropped 144 bombs on our side of the line. We dropped three times that many on the German side."

DON'T WASTE FOOD; SAVE IT

Mr. Hoover Gives Out List of Rules of Special Interest to American Women. Paste It in the Kitchen.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 17.—[Special.]—With the food control bill destined to become a law within a few days, Food Administrator Hoover made public tonight the outline of his vast undertaking to conserve and marshal the sustenance supplies necessary to the successful prosecution of the war.

If Herbert C. Hoover, the man who won fame feeding the starving Belgians, succeeds in carrying out his plans the United States will be a nation in arms and every loyal man, woman, and child will be serving the cause as effectually as the American soldiers on the firing line.

To do his duty in the conservation army the average American must revise his diet to some extent—eat less wheat, milk, fats, and sugar and more vegetables and other foods that are not suitable to be sent to the training camps and firing line. Hoover makes you realize that overeating is a crime and will be until the war is won and the world is made "safe for democracy."

More than 1,000,000 persons already have signed pledges to help conserve the food supply as their bit in the war. The rules and regulation of the home army of food conservationists have been formulated by Mr. Hoover and printed on a card which he aims to hang in every kitchen in the land for the guidance of the loyal housewife.

WIN THE WAR BY GIVING YOUR OWN DAILY SERVICE!

SAVE THE WHEAT.—One wheatless meal a day. Use corn, oatmeal, rye, or barley bread and nonwheat breakfast foods. Order bread twenty-four hours in advance so your baker will not bake beyond his needs. Cut the loaf on the table and only as required. Use stale bread for cooking, toast, etc. Eat less cake and pastry.

Our wheat harvest is far below normal. If each person weekly saves one pound of wheat flour that means 150,000,000 more bushels of wheat for the allies to mix in their bread. This will help them to save democracy.

SAVE THE MEAT.—Beef, mutton, or pork not more than once daily. Use freely vegetables and fish. At the meat meal serve smaller portions, and stews instead of steaks. Make made dishes of all leftovers. Do this and there will be meat enough for every one at a reasonable price.

We are today killing the dairy cows and female calves as the result of high prices. Therefore eat less and no young meat. If we save an ounce of meat each day per person we will have additional supply equal to 2,200,000 cattle.

SAVE THE MILK.—The children must have milk. Use buttermilk and sour milk for cooking and making cottage cheese. Use less cream.

SAVE THE FATS.—We are the world's greatest fat wasters. Fat is food. Butter is essential for the growth and health of children. Use butter on the table as usual but not in cooking. Other fats are as good. Reduce use of fried foods. Soap contains fats. Do not waste it. Make your own washing soap at home out of saved fats.

Use one-third ounce less per day of animal fat and 375,000 tons will be saved yearly.

SAVE THE SUGAR.—Sugar is scarcer. We use today three times as much a person as our allies. So there may be enough for all at reasonable price, use less candy and sweet drinks. Do not stint sugar in putting up fruit and jams. They will save butter.

If every one in America saves one ounce of sugar daily it means 1,100,000 tons for the year.

SAVE THE FUEL.—Coal comes from a distance and our railways are overburdened hauling war material. Help relieve them by burning fewer fires. Use wood when you can get it.

USE PERISHABLE FOODS.—Fruits and vegetables we have in abundance. As a nation we eat too little green stuffs. Double their use and improve your health. Store potatoes and other roots properly and they will keep. Begin now to can or dry all surplus garden products.

USE LOCAL SUPPLIES.—Patronize your local producer. Distance means money. Buy perishable food from the neighborhood nearest you and thus save.

GENERAL HINTS.

Buy less, serve smaller portions.

Preach the "gospel of the clean plate."

Don't eat a fourth meal.

The more fortunate of our people will avoid waste and eat no more than they need; the high cost of living problem of the less fortunate will be solved.

distilled spirits from bond for beverage purposes during the period of the war without making any provision for recompensing the owners of these spirits, was finally defeated today.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, announcing that he had reached the conclusion that the food control bill was not the proper place for prohibition legislation if it threatened to delay the passage of the bill, moved to reconsider the vote by which the Cummins amendment was adopted.

This was carried by 44 to 39, and then the senate rejected the Cummins amendment, 43 to 39.

Five Senators Witch.

Five senators switched their votes from Friday. They were Senators McCumber, Pheland, Ransdell, Smith [Ga.], and Tillman. All had previously voted for the Cummins amendment.

Senator Pittman of Nevada made an effort to have added to the senate compromise substitute for the house prohibition section that part of the amendment proposed by the committee on agriculture, which would have authorized the president to prohibit in the future the use of foodstuffs in the manufacture of beer and wine. His motion was defeated, 46 to 34.

Vote on Lighter Liquors.

The final test on the beer and wine proposition came when the amended senate substitute for the house provision was voted on. The vote on the adoption of the senate substitute was as follows:

Wilson's Power Felt.

The appeal of the president that the prohibition of the manufacture of beer and wine be not insisted upon in connection with the food control bill, in order not to delay further that measure, had its effect, for many of the dry senators who ordinarily would have been found supporting the house provision voted against it. Among them were Senators Sheppard of Texas, a leading prohibitionist; Martin of Virginia, Simmons, Smith of Georgia, Swanson, and others.

Before the substitute was adopted Senator James of Kentucky obtained an amendment to the Smoot amendment, which would suspend the collection of taxes upon distilled spirits in bond during the life of the act. He explained that it would not be fair to make the owners pay the tax when the liquor was to be taken for the government.

Halls Vote on Wednesday.

After the Smoot amendment had been adopted by a vote of 65 to 12 and after the senate had voted to reconsider the vote by which the Cummins amendment was adopted Senator Jones of New Mexico moved to reconsider the vote by which the Smoot amendment had been agreed to. But this effort failed, the vote being 52 to 25 against reconsideration, although arguments were made to the senate to the effect that the government could ill afford to pay for the distilled liquor while every dollar was needed for the successful prosecution of the war.

When the prohibition section had been disposed of Senator Chamberlain, in charge of the bill, asked unanimous consent that a final vote on the food control bill and all amendments be taken at 5 o'clock on Wednesday. Senator Wadsworth of New York promptly objected, saying that so many amendments to other sections of the bill were still to be acted upon that he did not believe the senate could act intelligently upon them and vote by Wednesday.

Uses Cloture Petition.

Senator Chamberlain asked Senator Wadsworth to set a date for a final vote. But Senator Wadsworth said he could not at this time. The Oregon senator then sent to the clerk's desk the petition for a cloture rule, to end debate on the food control bill.

Senator Reed of Missouri interposed an objection to the request for cloture on the ground that Senator Chamberlain had agreed not to ask for cloture at this time when he, Senator Reed, two days ago agreed to fix a limit to the debate on the prohibition section.

Rather than have any imputation of unfairness put upon him Senator Chamberlain agreed to withhold the petition until Monday evening. Later Senator Chamberlain expressed the opinion that it would be possible to get a final vote on the bill before the close of next week.

Just to Keep Record Straight, T. R. Prints Story of His Army

New York, July 7.—[Special.]—"Not merely for their intrinsic interest but in order that the record should be kept straight regarding one of the most important decisions of the United States government in the early period of the war," as the editor explains, Col Theodore Roosevelt publishes in the August issue of the Metropolitan Magazine the correspondence that passed between him and Secretary Baker concerning the colonel's desire to raise a volunteer force for fighting in France.

In his letters and telegrams Col. Roosevelt gave a list of regular army officers, both active and retired, whom he hoped to have with him, and expressed willingness to serve as commander of a brigade "under any man of the type of Gen. Wood, Gen. Pershing, or Gen. Kuhn."

"Red Tape" Military Men.

But when Secretary Baker replied that his advisers, the general staff, were opposed to the volunteer plan and to sending a small expeditionary force, but that "should any such force be sent, I should feel obliged to urge that it be placed under the command of the ablest and most experienced professional man in our country," the colonel retorted:

"If we follow the advice of the military men you quote we shall shirk our duty. I earnestly hope we refuse this advice and play the part of men." He also referred to them as "of the red tape and clap pipe school."

Col. Roosevelt also criticised the national guard, a great part of which, he said, was not capable of service abroad.

His First Application.

The correspondence began with a letter under date of Feb. 2, 1917, from Col. Roosevelt to Secretary Baker, calling attention to the fact that there was on file in the war department an application by the colonel for permission to raise a division of infantry, with a divisional brigade of cavalry, in the event of war. The colonel pointed out that he was planning to go to Jamaica for a short vacation and he requested that "when it becomes certain that we shall have war and that there will be a call for volunteers" Mr. Baker let him know by cable and he would immediately return.

In reply Secretary Baker advised the colonel that "no situation has arisen which would justify my suggesting a postponement of the trip you propose," and that Mr. Roosevelt's letter would be filed for consideration. To this Col. Roosevelt replied on Feb. 7 that in view of the president having broken off diplomatic relations with Germany he had already abandoned his trip and he again urged that he be permitted to raise a force of volunteers.

Fails to Discourage Letters.

Two days later Secretary Baker, expressing appreciation of Col. Roosevelt's "patriotic suggestion," said that no action could be taken on it without the sanction of congress. Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt continued to send letters and telegrams to the secretary of war.

On May 23 Col. Roosevelt wrote a letter pointing to his record in the Spanish-American war as evidence of his fitness to command troops. To this Mr. Baker replied in a telegram to "My Dear Mr. President" that "the military record to which you call my attention is, of course, a part of the permanent records of this department and is available in detail for consideration."

Not a Hindenburg, He Admits.

Col. Roosevelt's next letter, written on April 12, refers to a conversation he had had with Secretary Baker, evidently in Washington, and adds:

"If I were a younger man I would be entirely content to go in any position, as a second lieutenant or as a private in the force. With my age I cannot do good service, however, unless as a general officer. I am not a Hindenburg, but I can raise and handle this division in a way that will do credit to the American people and to you and to the president."

Secretary Baker, replying, said that the war college division of the general staff had repeaetdly reaffirmed to him a recommendation in the following language:

"The war college division earnestly recommends that no American troops be employed in active service in any European theater until after an adequate period of training. . . ."

Purely Military Turndown.

Mr. Baker added that this policy, which he approved, was of course a purely military policy, and did not undertake to estimate what, if any, "sentimental value would attach to a representation of the United States in France by a former president of the United States, but there are doubtless other ways in which that value could be contributed apart from a military expedition."

The secretary of war said further that an expeditionary force if sent should be "placed under the command of the ablest and most experienced professional military man in our country."

"My dear Mr. Secretary," the colonel retorted, "the proposal you outline and adopt must come from doubtless well meaning military men of the red tape and pipe clay school, who are hidebound in the pedantry of that kind of wooden militarism which is only one degree worse than its extreme opposite, the folly which believes that an army can be improvised between sunrise and sunset."

To the President Direct.

Again Mr. Roosevelt pressed his claim and again Mr. Baker rejected it. Then the colonel appealed in a telegram direct to the president. And to this plea came on May 19 a telegram from the White House saying:

"I very much regret that I cannot comply with the request. The reasons I have stated in a public statement this morning, and I need not assure you that my conclusions were based entirely upon imperative considerations of public policy and not upon personal or private choice."

MILLIONAIRES AND THEIR COOKS TO STUDY FOOD

Lake Forest to Turn Out to Conservation Meeting.

Food conservation meetings are getting to be the most popular form of indoor sport. There has been a meeting scheduled for almost every day this week. In Lake Forest Mrs. Cyrus McCormick will preside on Wednesday at one of the largest meetings, to be held at Durand institute under the auspices of the woman's committee. Mrs. Arthur Aldis, chairman of the food conservation committee of the Lake Forest War Emergency union, has, in addition to this, sent out 887 postcards containing "Hints to Housewives," and asking them to sign up a member of the conservation army.

In forwarding a copy of the "hints" to THE TRIBUNE, Mrs. Aldis wrote:

"Food Saving Editor: Dear Sir—Your pledge idea is a fine one. I hope there has been a wide response. I thought the inclosed would interest you, showing work along this line in Lake Forest."

At the same hour as the Lake Forest meeting there will be another one in River Forest at the River Forest Woman's club, in which the Oak Park Nineteenth Century club is also coöperating. Hinsdale and Evanston also are falling into line and are planning meetings for next week.

At the Hotel Sherman meeting in Chicago next Thursday evening food conservationists will listen to Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, and Miss Harriet Vittum, director of the Illinois division of the woman's defense committee. Albert Stalle, president of the Chicago Progressive Culinary association, will preside.

A municipal cannery is to be opened next week in Lake Forest, the War Emergency union announces, and the conservation department of the woman's committee is calling special attention to methods of canning and drying fruits and vegetables.

RESERVE BREAD AS YOU RESERVE THEATER SEATS

One after another crisp little notions are emanating from the national food conservation council, of which Herbert Hoover is chief.

The latest: Housewives will have to reserve bread at grocers' very much as theater tickets are reserved.

This goes into effect on Tuesday. It is caused by a suggestion made to master bakers to refuse to take back old bread from groceries and delicatessen stores. Paul Schulze, chairman of the Chicago division of the war emergency council of the baking industry, said yesterday that this would mean a loss of business to master bakers because it would tedn to make the retailer more conservative in his purchases.

Mr. Schulze estimated there was a "return" of from 4 per cent to 6 per cent of the 3,000,000 to 4,500,000 loaves purchased by retailers weekly.

WILSON BACKS ROSENWALD ON WAR PURCHASES

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—President Wilson is opposed to the amendment by Senator McKellar of Tennessee to the pending food legislation prohibiting members of the advisory committee of the council of national defense from selling to the government, a provision openly criticized by Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, chairman of the committee on supplies.

The president, it is understood, has written a letter to Senator McKellar requesting him to withdraw his amendment. He argues that passage of such a law practically would break up the instrumentalities for mobilizing the industries of the country at this crisis.

The president further points out, it is said, that not one of these men who are members of the advisory committee sells to the government in any way which gives him control of the terms upon which he shall sell.

UNIONS TRAINING TO FIGHT DRYS, PASTOR CHARGES

Workers Assessed for Fund, Plans Made, He Asserts.

Union labor, represented chiefly by brewery workers and allied interests with many thousands of dollars to back the campaign, is preparing for a fight to a finish with the Dry Chicago federation on the issue of making Illinois dry in 1918, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Rev. Philip Yarrow.

The federation has accepted the gage of battle thrown down by the Brewery Workers' unions of Illinois, the pastor asserted, and is in to win.

The challenge on the part of the unions, according to the Rev. Mr. Yarrow, was in the form of an alleged statement said by the Rev. Mr. Yarrow to have been made by Martin McGraw, international secretary.

Workers Assessed, Report.

"Every union brewery worker in Illinois, most of whom live in Chicago, has been assessed a dollar to finance a fight against the dry Chicago federation, the minister quotes McGraw as saying. "This will give us a fund of many thousands of dollars. We are aided in this fight by the Union Liberty League of Illinois, which now has more than 180,000 members, representing a great many labor unions. More than 50,000 in Chicago already have voluntarily contributed to the fund."

Expect Legal Fight.

McGraw is secretary of the "Liberty league." The Rev. Mr. Yarrow stated that McGraw threatened organized opposition on the part of his forces when the federation begins its campaign this fall for signatures to a petition for the election in April to settle the liquor question in Illinois.

"We shall contest the legality of every signature on the petition," the Rev. Mr. Yarrow alleges McGraw said.

It was as representative of the brewery workers that McGraw, with four others, presented a petition against the prohibition of beer and wines, bearing the names of 2,500,000 union laborers to President Wilson.

An effort to locate McGraw last night was unsuccessful.

T. R. DRAWS IRE OF LOCAL "YOUNG REPUBLICANS"

The Roosevelt-Gompers incident drew the fire of the "Young Republicans" at a meeting yesterday in the Unity building. Lin William Price, president of the National Young Men's Republican league, said:

"No loyal Republican, white or black, can subcribe to Col. Roosevelt's utterances in his controversy with President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor regarding the East St. Louis race riots.

"Union men as well as members of the Negro race should discriminate between Col. Roosevelt's utterances as a private citizen and as a supposed Republican leader. To make utterances in advance of a fair and impartial hearing is unwarranted and should be so regarded yb all members of all political parties."

RUSSIANS POUND GERMANS' FRONT IN PINSK SECTOR

Gen. Brussiloff Extends Offensive, Occupying Villages.

[BY THE UNITED PRESS.]

LONDON, July 7.—While Germany hurried reserves to repair the break in the Teutonic lines around Br[illegible] Gen. Brusiloff today hurled his Russian legions in another drive at a far distant point on the northern front. Official reports tonight showed complete victory there.

The newest of the Russian offensive drives is in the Pinsk sector, [illegible] miles north of where the first drive, that against Lemberg, was started last Sunday.

Petrograd reported tonight that the fortified forest of Sianka, Hill [illegible], and the villages of Lakhovtzy and Svenich-chi had all been swept into the Russian possession. Moreover, the important town of Godev had been penetrated by the drive. There the Germans were desperately massing their resistance, and tonight fierce fighting was in progress there.

Drive Carefully Timed.

The new drive was a coördinated, comprehensive, and carefully timed effort, judging from all reports received here. Not only did the Russian artillery and infantry coöperate to the fullest extent, but a naval flotilla creeping down the Pina river toward Pinsk destroyed mine barriers.

Elsewhere on the whole Russian fighting front, the official statement said, three lines of Teutonic trenches had been occupied in the region of Bali-maniauv, but that relinquishment was compelled by the enemy's counter attacks.

Of the fighting around Godov the statement said:

"The heights northwest of Presovce and the villages of Lavrikow and Travelki, east of Godov, remained in our hands after a stubborn battle throughout yesterday. Our prisoners yesterday were 689."

Petrograd Reports Success.

PETROGRAD, July 7.—Russian troops have occupied the heights northwest of Presovce on the Galician front, the villages of Lavrikovce and Travelski, and the heights east of Godov.

They have also occupied Dzvinatch and pressed back the enemy in the Jamnica-Pasechna sector northwest of the Stanislau region. The war office made this announcement today.

Workman Dies from Fall.

James Vistein, 58 years old, [illegible] West Seventeenth street, who fell from a ladder April 11 while working in the [illegible] works, 2622 West Eighteenth place, died yesterday of his injuries.

THEY TALKED AND THEY TALKED AT THAT PEACE MEET

Gamut of Topics Run and New National Party Formed.

In an orgy of anti-war oratory about 200 pacifists, Socialists, and professional pro-Germans spent yesterday at the Auditorium recital hall in an attempt to argue the country out of war. It was the "second American conference for democracy and terms of peace," and it will continue today.

"Peace without punitive indemnities and without forcible annexations" were the terms they offered to Germany. A message was sent to the council of workmen's and soldiers' delegates of Russia to the effect that the conference backed it in those same terms of peace.

Presto! A New Party.

A good time was had by all. They criticised the government, the president, the American soldier, and the newspapers with undiminished lung power. Advocates of various hobbies—single tax, socialism, credit systems, and the referendum and the recall—got in their work. A new national political party offering $3,000 jobs to all the faithful ones was introduced. The presidential candidate was to be the man who secured the most signatures to a petition.

There were men with bobbed hair and sport shirts disclosing long, angular necks. Foreign looking individuals with hanging jowls and bull necks spoke in broken English. A few college youths with dreamy eyes and bulging foreheads decorated the audience. Whiskers and German dialect prevailed.

St. John Tucker Indignant.

The program went quietly enough until Irving St. John Tucker stopped the proceedings to deny that he had called President Wilson a "black moral traitor." He called a statement to that effect in an afternoon newspaper "an infamous and scurrilous lie" and read from the text of his speech.

Some one had been called a "black moral traitor" in the speech, but it was vague as to who it was. Mr. Tucker made it clear that he meant "forces including bought newspapers and the moneyed powers which are attempting to overthrow the democracy of the American people," and not the president of the United States.

A woman, who said she represented 900 miners of southern Illinois, said the conference must stand behind those miners when they refused to accept conscription. She was heartily cheered.

When she had finished, a man with an undisguised German accent not to mention a German name, was given the floor to shout that there is no law that can force the American boy to fight on foreign soil. If there should be such a law, he said, he demanded its repeal at once.

Another man with a foreign accent, who was apparently within the age for conscription, said:

"All we have is our lives, and who is going to guarantee us those now?"

A Rap at Gompers.

After that Mr. Blumenberg of the Socialist party in Grand Rapids defied the government. J. Deutelbaum "from Detroit" told those present what he thought of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, for lending his assistance to the government in its time of need.

"He did not consult the rank and file of the labor people when he coöperated with the government," Deutelbaum affirmed.

Mr. Kruse of Chicago was next, his black flowing tie mixing with his blonde locks. He was followed by Mr. Langer of Milwaukee, who spoke in a German-English mixture. Mr. Bobinsky of Chicago followed, and Mr. Gray, also of Chicago, spoke and said that he had been twice warned by the government that if he did not stop speaking and writing against conscription he would be either interned or sent to Fort Leavenworth.

"But I'm here, speaking again," he said.

"Good for you!" shouted the audience.

"I'm going back to the miners of southern Illinois," said Mrs. Ella Reeve Bloor. "I want to tell them that you will stand behind them if they resist the draft."

There was wild cheering.

"You will have to support them when they resist conscription," she concluded, amid cheers.

Feels for American Poy.

"Don't let our American poys go to fight for English plutocracy," said Frank Friedersdorf. "There is no law on the land that can force the American poy to fight on foreign soil. If there is, let us go and repeal it so quick as we can."

William H. Holly was one of the speakers, and he admitted that he did not agree with most of the audience on all subjects.

"I feel," he said, "that President Wilson has done as much to deserve the confidence of the American people as any president we have ever had."

There were cries of "No, no."

"If any war is justifiable," he concluded, when they had finished, "this one is justifiable."

He was interrupted again with shouts of "no," and boos.

"That's all right," he said. "I don't expect you to agree with me."

DEFENSE BOARD URGES BIG USERS TO STORE COAL

Prevention of coal famine next winter is urged by the Illinois state council of defense in an appeal to all large users of coal that they begin at once to supply themselves.

It is urged that if their premises are not capacious enough to store a winter's supply, a point near that of consumption should be found and coal stored there until used.

The council has pointed out that Illinois coalfields must produce in the coming twelve months more than 25,000,000 tons over the normal supply and that if consumers wait until winter there will be neither production nor railroad facilities sufficient to supply the demand and famine will be the result.

BRIDE

Remarks to the Contrary Notwithstanding, Miss Frances Callan Is Now the Bride of Howard Capper.

Mrs. Howard Capper

THERE is no doubt about it, it is Capper and Capper.

Mrs. Howard Capper may still insist that she is Miss Frances Callan. Her mother, Mrs. M. R. Callan, may say that she is not quite sure whether her daughter is Miss Callan or Mrs. Capper. Howard, son of John S. Capper, may make mysterious admissions on top of equally mysterious denials.

Yet the bellhops, porters, chambermaids, elevator boys, and other attachés at the Edgewater Beach hotel who are said to have been given dimes and quarters to keep it a "dark secret" all aver it is Capper and Capper—Mr. and Mrs. Howard Capper. And thus the matrimonial mystery at the Edgewater Beach hotel has been solved.

The bride and groom left their apartment at the north shore hotel early yesterday, giving as their destination "somewhere in Michigan." This is the summer home of the groom's parents.

Capper presented himself at the marriage license clerk's office in the county building on Thursday and obtained a license. He gave his age as 24 years and Miss Callan's at 22. They were married on Friday and the hotel attachés were implored to keep it a secret. Young Capper was formerly married to Miss Josephine Kiernan, who divorced him on April 29, 1916.

BERLIN AWAITS POLITICAL MOVE OF GREAT IMPORT

Hollweg and Others to Tell Program for the Future.

LONDON, July 7.—The report that political developments of exceptional importance are being awaited in Berlin in connection with the session of the reichstag now in progress is reiterated in a Berlin dispatch to Amsterdam, as forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph.

The dispatch says that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg will deliver his speech to the reichstag on Monday and that addresses will be delivered on the same day by Foreign Secretary Zimmermann, Vice Chancellor Helfferich, and Vice Admiral von Capelle, minister of the navy. The vote of credit will then be taken.

Says England Is Doomed.

AMSTERDAM, Thursday, July 5.—In the main committee of the reichstag, according to a Berlin dispatch, a progressive speaker declared the food difficulties of England were clearly becoming daily greater because of the U-boat war.

It was technically impossible for the United States to increase its shipbuilding enormously in a short time, he asserted, and the program to build a thousand wooden ships had proved an "American bluff."

Feels Lack of Iron.

The lack of iron was being felt in Great Britain, he continued, and would be increasingly felt the more America increased her construction of steel ships.

The world's new construction for the current year, he assumed, would be 2,000,000 tons, and therefore, he held, the continued U-boat warfare would necessarily fatally reduce the total tonnage.

GERMANY AND VATICAN SPLIT OVER MERCIER?

ROME, July 7.—Germany has demanded of the vatican the recall of Cardinal Mercier of Belgium, and the vatican has refused, bringing about strained relations between the Catholic church and Berlin, according to a story printed today in the newspaper Informazione.

Because of his intense pro-Belgian sympathies and his fearlessness in espousing the cause of the invaded monarchy Cardinal Mercier has long been under disapproval of the German authorities.

His pastoral letters have invariably been suppressed by the German military governors of Belgium but nevertheless have gained wide circulation. Several times the Belgian cardinal has been reported as detained, a prisoner in his cardinal's palace at Brussels.

Union Hatters' Property Will Be Foreclosed

Danbury, Conn., July 7.—The total valuation of the property of the union hatters attached to satisfy judgment for D. E. Loewe & Co. in the famous Danbury hatters' case is $362,916, according to the report of the appraisers to the federal court. The court award to the Loewe company was a little more than $250,000. Foreclosure on the property is to be made this month.

BRITISH SHIP OF 9,000 TONS REPORTED SUNK

Boston, Mass., July 7.—The Leyland liner Cestrian, long in the Boston-Liverpool service, has been sunk by a German submarine, according to cable advices. The Cestrian was taken over by the British government early in the war and had not been in this port in nearly two years.

The Cestrian, a sister ship of the Armenian, sunk off the coast of Africa in 1915, was built at Belfast in 1896 and registered 8,912 tons gross.

TWO NORSE CRAFT SUNK.

LONDON, July 7.—The Norwegian steamers Havorfs (697 tons) and Bjerko (1,872 tons) have been sunk, a Central News dispatch from Copenhagen reports. Fourteen members of the Bjerko's crew are missing.

French Ship Loss for Week.

PARIS, July 7.—The losses among French merchant vessels, due to submarines or mines, during the week ending July 1, included four vessels of more than 1,600 tons, according to the official statement issued today. The list of ships under 1,600 tons is given likewise as four, with one rightfully belonging to the preceding week's report.

Submarines unsuccessfully attacked three merchantmen, and no fishing boats were sunk. Last week's report announced the loss of two vessels of more than 1,600 tons and three of a less tonnage.

SCHOOLS' PART IN WAR DISCUSSED BY EDUCATORS

Portland, Ore., July 7.—Members of the National Council of Education discussed obligations of the schools during the war at today's session.

Arthur H. Chamberlain of San Francisco said that inasmuch as the United States must feed the allied countries as well as our own, the grammar and high schools of this country are taking part in the crop production and food conservation.

"A tremendous struggle will follow the close of the war," said Mr. Chamberlain. "The place of the school in the coming new order of things cannot be overestimated. Agricultural courses must be introduced in all schools. Domestic science courses must emphasize economy."

S. W. Straus of Chicago, president of the American Society for Thrift, pronounced thrift the first patriotic duty for the masses and said that "the thrift which must be taught our children consists above all else in the elimination of waste."

Ella Flagg Young, former superintendent of the schools of Chicago, was guest of honor tonight at a dinner given by the Oregon Civic league. Mrs. Young spoke on "Our Ideals of Universal Education."

Washington, D. C., July 7.—The famous old cruiser Olympia, beached recently in Block Island sound after striking an uncharted rock, was floated today and anchored safely in a sheltered position.

Teach Wireless to Girls of U. S.

New York, July 7.—Nationalization of the work of training young women in wireless telegraphy so they may be ready to take the places of operators called to war duty was announced here tonight by Mrs. Herbert Sumner Owen, who has been conducting a class in wireless telegraphy at Hunter college.

15 GERMANS IN EMBASSIES TO BE OUSTED BY U.S.

Austrians to Be Weeded Out Also in Hunt for Spies.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Fifteen German subjects employed by neutral legations and consulates are on the state department's blacklist. Within a few days they will wind up their affairs and start for Germany. The government has decided that it cannot tolerate longer the presence of these alien enemies in positions where they might render valuable service to the kaiser.

As announced in THE TRIBUNE this morning, Heinrich Schaafhausen, who was formerly employed by Count von Bernstorff and was turned over to the Swiss legation when the United States severed relations with Germany, was the first of this class of alien enemies to fall under the government's ruling.

The state department has arranged safe conduct for Schaafhausen. The British government has agreed to allow him to pass through the patrol into one of the Scandinavian countries, from which he will go to Germany. It is believed that similar arrangements will be made for the safe conduct of the other men and women in his class.

Will Weed Out Austrians.

The allied governments will take every precaution to see that they carry no documents of military value from the United States.

As soon as the Germans are all rounded up the government will weed out the Austrian subjects who are now employed in neutral legations and consulates. The government has felt some hesitancy about compelling these men and women to leave because the United States is not actually at war with Austria.

The policy of the government has been to do nothing that would offend the Vienna government because it is believed there is still hope—although very slight—that the United States may yet alienate Austria from the kaiser. For this reason the administration has been desirous of treating individual Austrians with all possible leniency.

Ask Neutral Envoys to Act.

Within a few days, however, some of the neutral ministers will receive polite suggestions that the United States will be pleased to have them dispense with the services of men who owe allegiance to the enemy's ally.

The department has not decided whether the Austrians shall be deported. If they can support themselves in the United States and desire to remain here the government may decide to allow them to pick their own future course as far as residence is concerned.

State Department Explains.

The state department made the following official statement:

"At the request of the department of state made two weeks ago the Swiss legation is requiring all German subjects in its employ or the employ of the various Swiss consulates throughout the United States to resign. These resignations have been received.

"In this connection it may be said that the Swiss legation in temporarily retaining the services of these German subjects was acting with the approval of the department and under a reciprocal arrangement whereby certain American citizens were enabled to remain with the Spanish embassy in Berlin to assist that embassy in caring for American interests in Germany.

Temporary Arrangement.

"This reciprocal arrangement, which was of a temporary nature, is now canceled by the prompt and complete compliance of the Swiss legation with the department's wishes."

New York, July 7.—The United States government sent Heinrich Schaafhausen, a former German embassy attaché in Washington, out of the country today. The departure of the Norwegian steamship, on which secret service agents placed him, was delayed by their actions in arresting a German, Berg von Linde, under the espionage act. This prisoner was charged with passing money and three packages of letters to the ship's steward. Von Linde said he was engaged in the import and export business with offices in Wall street.

Von Linde was released tonight. Eric Lindstrom, the steward, who was brought ashore with Von Linde, also was released.

GERMAN-HINDU PLOT BEGAN YEAR BEFORE THE WAR

Indictment of 139 Men Bares Plan for Big Revolt.

San Francisco, Cal., July 7.—Preparations for war with England were being made in the United States by German agents and Hindu agitators more than a year prior to the outbreak of the European war, according to a statement made here today by United States District Attorney John W. Preston.

This assertion was made in connection with the filing of 139 indictments in the United States court here today in connection with the alleged violation of American neutrality. Two separate sets of indictments were returned, ninety-eight bearing on a world-wide plot to foment revolution in India, and forty-one on the so-called steamship Sacramento case in which it is charged an effort was made to provision German warships at sea. Several of the defendants are mentioned in each set of indictments.

Describes Hindu Plot.

The so-called Hindu revolution plot was summarized in a statement by Preston, in which he says:

"For more than a year prior to the outbreak of the European war certain Hindus in San Francisco and German agents were preparing openly for war with England.

"Hindus on the Pacific coast were canvassed and those willing to take part in the revolution were registered. Emissaries were financed by the German agents here and immediately dispatched to Germany. Shortly thereafter what is known as the India committee, an adjunct of the German foreign office, was created in Berlin. Among them was Har Dayal, a fugitive from the United States in 1914. This India committee had the personal attention of Alfred Zimmermann."

Alfred Zimmermann, referred to in Preston's statement, is foreign secretary of Germany.

Enemy agents were sent to China and Japan to attempt to bribe the press of those nations and to procure secret treaties between the German empire and those governments in aid of the Hindu revolutionary plot, Preston added.

Capt. Von Papen Named.

The list of those indicted in the Sacramento case includes Robert Capelle, local agent of the North German Steamship company; Henry C. Kaufman, former chancellor of the San Francisco German consulate; Frederick Jebson, a San Francisco shipping man, now supposed to be abroad; A. H. Von Schaak, former vice consul of the San Francisco German consulate; Capt. F. Von Papen, former military attaché of the German embassy in Washington; and J. L. Bley, customs broker.

The Nation's Need

Mr. Hoover and his aids are confronted with the problem of eliminating useless waste during war time. The call to the American people has been to sustain the government's efforts by promoting the use of food that strengthens the people without needless waste in handling and distribution.

Carl Sulzer has for years advocated the elimination of waste—bodily waste—refuse food. He has nationalized the use of Bran Bread as a wholesome food and as a means of

Elimination of Waste
From the Human Body

Mr. Hoover's problem is to save useless waste in the nation. Carl Sulzer's problem has been the elimination of waste for the individual.

What Mr. Hoover must do in general for the country Carl Sulzer has been accomplishing for the families who have recognized the advantages of Sulzer's Bran Bread.

Just as waste impairs the workings of the national organization, so does waste hinder and clog the functions of the human body.

Sulzer's Bran Bread is a natural means of elimination. The healthy body can not stay in good condition unless there is roughage to aid in throwing off waste. To insure proper cleansing of waste from the body, to dispel impurities, to promote bodily health and an abundance of energy and vitality, eat Sulzer's Bran Bread. You will have a good, flavory, nourishing food with every meal.

CAMP ROCKFORD "BUSIEST SPOT" IN ALL ILLINOIS

City, to House 28,000 Troops, Growing Up Like Mushroom.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Rockford, Ill., July 7.—[Special.]—Six miles south of this town there is a city in the making. Like a mushroom, it has sprung up overnight. It is the Rockford cantonment camp, which is being built at breakneck speed for Illinois' quota of the national draft army, and when completed it will accommodate over 1,000 officers, 28,000 men, and will stable 12,000 horses and mules.

Despite the fact that work on the camp started only on June 25, just thirteen days ago, fifty-five buildings of the camp proper, in addition to dozens of temporary structures for the working force, have been constructed or are under construction.

Must Be Done Sept. 1.

The task before the contractors, which is a Chicago concern, that of Bates & Rogers, is a stupendous one. The contract let by the government to this firm calls for the completion of the entire work by Sept. 1, and Vice Presidents E. Stanley Holland and E. P. Lenahan of the contracting firm are on the ground and feel confident that they will be able to turn over the cantonment, fully completed, to the government by that day. A city of 1,800 buildings is to be erected.

A visit to the camp shows the speed being used in the work, for no hive of bees was ever busier than the men now engaged in the work of putting up "Camp Rockford." A glance at the following approximate figures of some of the material necessary to erect this military city, which will cover an area of 1,000 acres and will be one of the largest of all the sixteen draft cantonment camps in the United States, will give an idea of the hugeness of the government undertaking.

The material will include:

Lumber, 30,000,000 feet.

Piping for water, 20 miles, or 100,000 feet.

Electric lighting wires, 250 miles.

Piping for water, 27 miles.

Nails, 1,000 tons.

Streets, 22 miles of macadamized road.

Water capacity, maximum of 4,000 gallons per minute.

Wells to supply this water, 8.

Roofing felt, 150 acres.

Plumbing supplies, 170 carloads.

Two-thirds of the building for the standard infantry cantonment will contain: 37,000 windows, 1,000 glazed doors, 1,500 solid doors.

And many hundreds of minor essential materials.

Five Roads Lead to Camp.

The camp, which is situated just six miles direct south of Rockford, will be accessible by five roads, two of which, Eleventh street and the main road, the Kishwaukee road, are already completed. The three others, not yet named, are in course of construction and will be open by the time the camp is ready for occupancy by the troops.

The city of Rockford has acquiesced to each request by Maj. Donald Sawyer, contracting quartermaster, representing the war department, who is in full charge of the building of the cantonment. An appeal sent out last week by John H. Camlin, president of the Rockford chamber of commerce, resulted in the raising in four days of a fund of $100,000 for the purpose of building new roads to the camp and indemnifying the farmers whose land the camp occupies against all crop losses.

Citizens of Rockford realize the enormous help given them by the establishing of the cantonment in their midst and are willing to go the limit to show their appreciation.

Sprung Up Over Night.

The camp virtually sprung up over night. On Monday, June 25, at 6 in the morning the first carload of lumber was shipped to the campsite. By dusk that evening eight buildings had already been erected for the housing of the army of workmen, and when the sun set on the following Wednesday thirty-three buildings, all to accommodate those engaged on the work of the camp, stood on the site where only seventy-two hours before was a field just beginning to sprout with a promising crop of corn. On the same day 200 workmen were on the grounds building their own quarters which will house them during the building of the cantonment.

That night all were fed and the pup tents in which they had slept for two nights had been replaced by commodious sleeping quarters of lumber foundation and canvas covering, containing single deck iron cots with spring mattresses and blankets. The work on these quarters for the workers continued, and by the end of the week accommodations for 5,000 men, the amount necessary for the completion of the camp, were finished.

Busiest Spot in State.

Fifty-five buildings are now almost completed. Camp Rockford is without a doubt the busiest spot in Illinois today. From sunrise to sunset, without cessation, hundreds of hammers are pounding thousands of nails into thousands of feet of lumber. Hundreds of carpenters are perched upon the buildings of wood under erection—the continuous "tap-tap" of their hammers as they drive in the nails growing louder and louder as one approaches this particular scene of activity which eventually will develop into one of the two main streets of the cantonment camp.

Seven miles of railroad tracks, hastily laid through virgin fields of oats and corn, groan under the weight of hundreds of freight cars from which daily arrive and depart over five railroads which directly connect this scene of never ending activity with the large manufacturing cities of the continent. Telephone and telegraph offices connecting the camp which just thirteen days ago was a typical quiet country spot, disturbed only during the day by the farmer's "Gee" and "Haw" to his horses, with the outside world have "sprouted up," and a postoffice, in which all postal business from the mailing of letters to the buying of money orders and the banking of money is conducted, has already opened its doors.

NOW DENY THEY KILLED CRIPPLE

St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 7.—A day's search of the wooded hills in the outskirts of the city for the body of little Olive Bradshaw, who is believed to have been murdered, was without result today.

Meanwhile, Etta May Hicks, the child's caretaker, and Mrs. Alvin Kenniston, who are alleged to have confessed they killed the girl by beating and choking her, because she was a cripple and troublesome, repudiated their alleged admissions, asserting the statements they made last night were due to terror and confusion.

According to State's Attorney Campbell, both women last night, without undue insistence, told of the alleged manner of the child's death, but later when the story of one of them that the body was placed under a rock pile had been found to be incorrect, they are said to have refused to talk further.

"How to Can" Manuals on Way to Chicago Women

Washington, D. C., July 7.—W. M. Roberts, district superintendent of the Chicago schools, today wired to the national emergency food garden commission for a supply of canning and drying manuals for use by the classes of women in the summer schools of Chicago.

The data was sent at once. The canning campaign which the commission is conducting supplements its spring campaign for a million food gardens.

Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman of Chicago, who is chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and a member of the commission, is directing the canning campaign of the 2,000,000 women who are members of the federation.

RECRUITED FROM "BIG BUSINESS" TO SERVE NATION

Seventh Regiment U. S. Engineers Ready to Aid in War.

Atlanta, Ga., July 7.—The Seventh regiment of the United States engineers, which has been in training here for a number of weeks, is now ready for service in France.

This regiment, made up of business and professional men, is perhaps one of the most remarkable military organizations that have ever been assembled by the government.

The method which has been adopted by the government for the creation of the division of engineer regiments from the nature of the case makes it an exceptional organization. The men and officers are all volunteers. The selection of officers is made by military authority, with the first consideration the efficiency of the officers selected for the special work to be performed by the regiment when on duty. This plan, put into effect by the government, has insured the selection of this division without political or outside interference and on the ground of efficiency alone.

Felton and Sewell.

The first selection of colonels for the regiment confirmed by the war department was made by Samuel M. Felton, a railroad executive of wide experience and high ability, who was appointed consulting engineer and adviser of the chief of engineers, United States army, upon the recommendation of a joint committee of five national engineer societies and of a commission appointed by the American Railway association to confer with the secretary of war on railway matters.

The man to be commissioned as a major in the engineers officers' reserve corps was Maj. John Stephen Sewell, a graduate of West Point, and who up to ten years ago was a well known officer of the corps of engineers, United States army. While in the engineer service of the government he built the great war college at Washington, the government printing office, and other large public buildings.

Primarily Railroad Work.

All appointments by Mr. Felton of officers for the Seventh regiment were made upon the recommendation of Col. Sewell, and the regiment is therefore the result of his best judgment upon the qualifications of the practical railroad men from whom he made his selection. Since the regiment is primarily a railroad organization for the accomplishment of specific railroad work, Col. Sewell was guided by the same policy in the selection of his staff as was Mr. Felton in the selection of a colonel for the regiment.

The selection of Charles G. Dawes of Chicago as lieutenant colonel was made by Col. Sewell because of Col. Dawes' broad experience and great executive ability, especially also as he had had the necessary engineering experience to qualify him for appointment. He is a banker, a former controller of the currency, and in general business.

In nearly every kind of engineering and railroad work Maj. William G. Atwood has held an eminent position. He has been chief engineer of the Lake Erie and Western railroad and was locating engineer exploring the line between the Pacific ocean and the Yukon river, and superintendent of construction and assistant engineer of construction of the Alaska Central railway, which is now the railroad being built by the government into the interior of Alaska.

Maj. Cushing and Capt. Causey.

Maj. H. B. Cushing is the assistant general manager of the Southern Pacific railroad and a man eminent in the American Railway Engineering association. He has not as yet joined the regiment.

The list of railroads and responsible positions with which Capt. William B. Causey has been connected is long. He has been general superintendent of construction and division superintendent of the Chicago Great Western railroad, engineer maintenance of way and division superintendent of the Chicago and Alton, chief engineer Elgin, Joliet and Eastern and Chicago, Lake Shore and Eastern railways.

Capt. William Bedford Ryan came to the regiment fresh from Mexico and all the difficulties attendant upon a vice president and general manager of the Tehuantepec National railroad in time of revolution.

Experience on Big Roads.

While Capt. Clarence S. Coe has been a railroad man with wide experience on the large railroads of the central west, the exceptional work for which he will always be remembered was that of the engineer in charge of the Florida East Coast seagoing railroad, in which position he acted for nine years from the beginning of its construction to its completion.

Serving among its enlisted men are men who have given up positions of executive responsibility and large salaries.

ILLINOIS GUARD TO BE CALLED BY U. S. ON JULY 25

Neighboring States, All Except Indiana, Ten Days Earlier.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Official announcement was made today that the national guard of Illinois would be called into the federal service to make ready for action "outside the United States," on July 25, two weeks from next Wednesday.

Indiana's national guard will be called on Aug. 5, while the guard of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa will be called in on July 15.

A plan to maintain the present relative rank of national guard officers after they have been sworn into federal service is under advisement, but has not yet been officially approved. This plan takes advantage of the legal distinction between "calling" and "drafting" into federal service.

The three dates originally announced —July 15, July 25, and August 5—will be utilized in bringing the guard into national service. All units will, according to the suggestion, be "drafted" into service on the last date, and on the first two dates units in two groups of states will be "called" into service.

Head Troops from Own States.

The adjutant general's office announces that, in choosing officers from the training camps to go into the new national army, the men selected will be commissioned to command troops from their own states. This is in accordance with the policy aimed to secure the greatest possible teamwork among that of the million men soon to be put in the field. The officers graduated from the training camps will serve under the leadership of regular army officers in superior command.

Regarding Ages.

To overcome the prevalent belief that only older men who have already been trained as soldiers will be admitted to the second series of camps, the war department wishes to lay stress on the fact that previous military experience, even under the most favorable circumstances, will count for only one-sixth among the points which will recommend the successful student for a commission.

The war department is campaigning vigorously for young blood to fill the ranks of the new series of training camps to open on Aug. 27. They have put out a definite call for more men between the ages of 25 and 31—and even younger.

ARMY OFFICIALS DISCUSS FINAL PLANS FOR DRAFT

Efforts Made to Speed Up the Local Boards and Make Drawing.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 7.—[Special.]—Conference among army officials on the final arrangements for the big lottery that will select the manhood of the country to fill the national army continued today, but no definite announcement was made that would throw further light on the method of procedure to be followed. Every effort is being made to speed up organization of the local boards. Members of the army general staff are anxious to complete the most important step in the selective conscription act—the draft—and this cannot be done until the boards are organized and have sent copies of their lists of eligibles to Washington.

Plans Somewhat in Doubt.

Until arrangements have been completed down to the last detail, the army will not give out the plan of draft. Several major provisions of the lottery have not been settled, and these are said to be largely to blame for holding back announcements.

Among these are the question of whether only enough men will be drawn to fill the national army call and bring the army and national guard ranks up to war strength, or whether the order in which every man in the 9,600,000 registered will be responsible for service will be determined.

Another troublesome question is how many men will be needed to bring the army and guard services up to war strength. This must be decided before the quotas for the different states can be assigned.

Public or Private Drawing?

The third question is where the draft shall be made. Suggestions that it may be made in the rotunda of the capitol or the Supreme court chamber are ridiculed here, and whether it will even be given the formality of being performed in the office of the secretary of war is doubtful. Officers in charge of the lottery are anxious to avoid gallery play as much as possible.

If officials have their way the drafting will probably be done in the provost marshal's offices or some other place of military atmosphere. While they are perfectly willing that all witnesses who are thought necessary be allowed to attend, they would much prefer carrying the draft out in a thoroughly military manner, without frils and with disciplined precision.

Equal Chance for All.

Reports that young men throughout the country were uneasy lest they should be assigned low numbers in the sorting of their cards were set at rest today with the statement by officials that whatever number is assigned to eligibles they will all have an even chance under the system of lottery to be employed, and those with high numbers will stand as much chance of being drawn as those with lower numbers.

The provost marshal general is particularly anxious to provide against any board making the mistake of assorting the cards before copying and numbering them. The cards should be numbered indiscriminately and without any regard to alphabetical or any other order.

The work of numbering the little slips of paper that are to be inserted in the gelatin capsules and will bear the fate of each eligible, continued today. As far as can be learned only one series of these numbers is being made, and that series runs as high as the numeral 5,000.

CAPT. MOFFETT WANTS SIMPLE EVENING DRESS

Away with the decollette! Raus mit the low necked gown! Good night and farewell, expansive and brightly gleaming shirt front! Adieu, fine feathers!

Capt. W. A. Moffett, commandant of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, following an order along the same lines issued by the navy department, yesterday notified all officers that he will wear only the service uniform on all occasions when evening dress would ordinarily be worn, and all members of his household will wear informal dress where they ordinarily would wear evening dress. This will apply not only at the naval station but elsewhere.

The commandant's action is based on his idea that the wearing of evening clothes is not conducive to national economy. It is his earnest hope, he said, that the men and women of the north shore will likewise enter into the spirit of the times and wear inexpensive evening dress.

A PICTURE OF LIFE'S OTHER SIDE

Sick Mother and Children Starving as the Father Tramps the Streets for Work in Vain.

Standing:—Lorine and Howard.
Mrs. Owen Morris and baby Charles

No work, no money, an absent, despairing father, and a sick mother—that means no food, no clothes, no way to pay the rent or the doctor's bill—only starvation for four little children.

All they had to eat yesterday was boiled cabbage. All they had to eat the day before was boiled cabbage; tomorrow there may be some boiled cabbage left, maybe not.

Raymond Morris, 7 years old; Howard, 5; Lorine, 4, and baby Charles, 7 months, are waiting penniless for their father, Owen Morris, to find work and come home to them and their sick mother. They have not seen him since he went out on his daily search for a job the morning of July 3.

The family comes from Mulberry, Kas., where Mr. Morris, aged 28, was a coal miner. He has walked the streets day after day looking for work ever since they came to Chicago a few months ago.

"We are country people and don't know the city or city ways," Mrs. Morris said yesterday. "But other people find work and we need it so desperately."

The frail little woman is heart broken over her husband's failure to return home.

"But I know why," she said. "It is because he can't bear to come back and say again he has no job, and find four hungry babies waiting for him."

Every cent they had saved to start the new little Chicago home is gone. Sick as she is, Mrs. Morris is willing to take in washing or do sewing to help along.

CADGER TO BE DRIVEN FROM SHERIDAN CAMP

BY PARKE BROWN.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., July 7.—[Special.]—An order discharging a cadger in disgrace from the reserve officers' training camp awaits only the signature of Col. W. J. Nicholson, the commandant. No doubt is felt that he will sign it as soon as it reaches his desk.

A cadger, in camp slang, is a man who entered the camp solely for the purpose of spending a "vacation on salary, with free board and lodging," and with no thought of entering the army. He counts with certainty upon his ability to flunk out, so that no commission will be offered him.

This man—whose name is withheld on the theory that he will be sufficiently punished by his expulsion—is a student at one of the three state universities represented here.

The company captain then recommended the man's discharge. A board of officers heard the case and forwarded the recommendation to headquarters. The case was heard on Friday and the news of the board's decision spread through the cadger's company yesterday.

A. A. CARPENTERS ENTERTAIN 30 MEN FROM FORT

Thirty members of the officers' reserve camp at Fort Sheridan and their commanding officer, Col. W. J. Nicholson, were given a dinner last night by Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Carpenter at their home in Huron road, Lake Forest.

John V. Farwell made a short address, the theme of his talk being on the art of being a gentleman as pertaining to an army officer. He said that being a gentleman was one of the most needed requirements of an officer. Col. Nicholson, on behalf of the student officers, confirmed Mr. Farwell's statements and extended the officers' thanks.

This dinner is the first of a series that will be given to Fort Sheridan students by prominent Lake Forest people. At least one man from every company is to be picked to attend the Saturday night affairs and it is planned to have every soldier at the fort attend such an affair before the school closes.

British Destroyer Sunk by Submarine; Eight Die

LONDON, July 7.—A British torpedo boat destroyer was torpedoed by an enemy submarine yesterday in the North sea and sunk, says an official statement tonight. Eight men were killed.

SOCIALISTS BACK CONVENTION'S ANTI-WAR VIEW

The executive committee of the Socialist party, which met in Chicago yesterday, announced that members of the party had by vote indorsed the attitude of the majority in the Socialist convention in St. Louis last April. The vote was given out as 21,639 to 2,752.

The convention condemned the war as "the most unjustified war in the history of the world." Leaders of this faction were Morris Hillquit, here for the "terms of peace" council; Victor L. Berger, and Algernon Lee. They were refused passports when they wanted to go to Stockholm for the international conference.

The minority faction was led by Allan L. Benson, nominee for president in 1916, and John Spargo. The party went on record also, now that the war is declared, as favoring the conscription of wealth as well as men and the public ownership of all industries vital to the prosecution of the war.

SUCCESSOR TO ELLER ON DRAFT BOARD NAMED

Substitute for Dr. Stahl Appointed; Work Being Rushed.

Morris Eller, city sealer, is officially out of the forty-fourth Chicago exemption board. His successor and the successor to Dr. Frank A. Stahl, the other member of the board who refused to serve, have been appointed and appeared yesterday at the election commissioner's for their supplies.

The new exemption officers are Henry Ostrowsky, 1236 South Halsted street, who displaces Mr. Eller, and Dr. A. M. Oberman, 826 West Fourteenth street, who fills Dr. Stahl's vacancy. Jacob Bernheim, 1235 Newberry avenue, the sole member of the old board who agreed to serve, was appointed chairman of the new board.

The appointment of a successor to Mr. Eller disproves a statement appearing in a morning paper to the effect that the city sealer had magnanimously decided he might reconsider his refusal to serve.

Eller Delays Draft.

Mr. Eller's refusal to act has delayed the operation of the draft machinery in this state. The only exemption board which has not started on its work is the forty-fourth, due to the delay occasioned by the city sealer's action.

In other districts the work is proceeding with dispatch. It was announced by Chief Clerk Dennis J. Egan of the election board yesterday that six of the exemption boards have completed their work and that Assistant Corporation Counsel Martin L. Cressy is sending the cards to Springfield as fast as they are finished.

Seven Boards Finished.

The boards which have finished their work are the Thirteenth, Seventeenth, Thirty-third, Forty-seventh, Seventy-second, and Seventy-seventh. The Eighty-sixth exemption board district also sent in word that its work is completed. The Forty-third district, operation of which was embarrassed by the refusal of Louis J. Marschak and Dr. John Vitullo to serve, has started to work, the two having reconsidered their refusals.

ALL OF U. S. MAY OBSERVE JULY 14 AS "FRANCE DAY"

"France day," being the anniversary of the fall of the bastile, July 14, is to be made a day of state and national observance if it is found possible by President Wilson and Gov. Lowden. The committee in charge of the celebration has sent telegrams to both the president and the governor asking official proclamations. There will be celebrations in Lincoln, Washington, and Garfield parks in Chicago, and Capt. Franklin R. Kenney has arranged to make the day a blue letter occasion in recruiting.

JAIL BELGIANS AS CLUB TO FREE TEUTON CAPTIVES

20 Arrested on Orders from Berlin; Allies Talk Reprisals.

LONDON, July 7.—The events leading up to the arrest in Brussels by the German authorities of twenty prominent officials of the Belgian colonial offices and directors of the colonial societies were related by a prominent Belgian in London to the Associated Press today.

"When the Belgians and the British captured German East Africa they took prisoner among others the German governor, Dr. Schnee," he said. "Dr. Schnee's wife, who was found to have compromising papers in her possession, also was arrested.

"All the prisoners, including the governor and his wife, were sent to France and treated with the utmost consideration.

Proposes Prisoner Exchange.

"Some time ago the Belgian government proposed to the German government through the vatican that Gov. Schnee be exchanged for Burgomaster Max of Brussels.

"The Belgian authorities also offered to exchange Mme. Schnee for Mme. Bosl, wife of a prominent member of the Belgian legislature.

"They further proposed to exchange other Germans held prisoner in East Africa by the Belgians for Belgians who are interned in Germany.

Demands by Germany.

"The German government sent to the Belgian authorities a most insolent reply, demanding that all the German prisoners be released within three days on the Swiss frontier or wherever the prisoners wished to be taken. The penalty, if the Germans were not released, was to be the arrest of twenty Belgians.

"The Belgian government protested against this ultimatum, and the next move of Germany was to make the arrests in Brussels, which included Count Jean d'Oultremont, formerly grand marshal of the court of King Leopold; Count Hippolyte de Ursel, director of the National bank; and Baron de Cuvelier.

"Since this action was taken Germany issued a statement accusing the Belgian government of ill treating German civilians in East Africa. This accusation is emphatically denied by the Belgian government."

REPRISAL IS TALKED.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—Presentation to the state department today by Belgian Minister de Cartier of a report on the deportation by German officials of twenty prominent Belgians, in retaliation for alleged inhuman treatment of German civilian prisoners taken in German Southwest Africa, aroused discussion in official and diplomatic circles of the possibility of the allies inflicting retaliatory punishment on Germans.

Thousands of German civilians, it was pointed out, are in allied territory, and it would be easy to mete out to them the same punishment accorded Belgian captives in an effort to compel Germany to respect rights due Belgian civilians by international law and the laws of humanity.

Thus far no retaliatory steps have been taken toward alien enemies by the allies.

'REPUBLICAN' SAYS:

You Can Read, Think, Talk, and Vote as You Please.

PROCLAIMING the ethical discovery that "people have the right to read, think, talk, and vote," the city call newspaper, called the Republican, stamped by Mayor Thompson as the only paper which tells the truth about him, though sparingly, lambastes, in its most recent issue, the federal administration and resents the present military measures.

". . . We do not admit that because, wisely or unwisely, congress saw fit to exercise its constitutional power to declare war, we must, therefore, refrain from any discussion thereof," it is stated.

That undue and reproachful methods were used by the president is suggested here:

"Did congress yield to pressure?"

"If it is a fact, as we suspect, that a large number of congressmen voted for war in violation of their own convictions and because they had not sufficient moral courage to withstand the newspaper and presidential pressure, that does not change either the moral or legal consequences of their vote.

". . . There is no law, military or civil, which prevents you from discussing the situation . . . and at the next congressional election you will doubtless be able to find candidates for congress who will represent your views."

O'CONNOR SAYS IRISH FREEDOM IS MUCH NEARER

Asserts That America Will Have Influence Upon British.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C.—[Special.]—"Ireland could never be the foe for us," T. P. O'Connor declared today in what he himself said was the most important interview he had given since his arrival in the United States. "Ireland," he said, "should be supreme within her own household."

Mr. O'Connor stated that he had strong reason to believe that "neither Mr. Balfour nor the British statesmen at home were left in any doubt as to the ardent support of home rule by the people and by the government of the United States." He hoped Irish blood in America would not give their support to the "impracticable" demand for an Irish republic and help to keep Ireland in disorder and chaos.

"Will the Orangemen still hold out for the separation of the Ulster Orange counties from the rest of Ireland and from the control of the Dublin parliament?" he was asked.

"I cannot say," he replied. "If you had asked me that question some months ago I would say they probably would; now I cannot say. Orangeism may prove more tractable in this convention than they have hitherto been."

WAR ACTIONS ON VARIOUS FRONTS OFFICIALLY TOLD

Terrific Battle Raging in East; Russians Claim Successes.

RUSSIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, July 7.—In the region of the town of Pinsk our naval flotilla destroyed mined barriers on the bank of the River Pina.

In the direction of the Geischeff region, at Bakovmanaiuv, after artillery preparation, our infantry attacked strongly fortified positions of the enemy. We occupied three lines of his trenches, but later he succeeded by a series of counter attacks in pressing back our detachments.

In the sector of the heights northwest of Presovce, Lavrikovce, Travotloki, and Godov, and in the wood west of Koniuchy our detachments conducted an offensive and engaged in a stubborn battle throughout yesterday.

Six fortified positions constantly changed hands, but the enemy, by bringing up fresh reserves, executed a series of counter attacks, the more formidable of these being from the direction of the village of Uriov and the woods west of Koniuchy and at certain places he succeeded in pressing back our detachments.

Toward evening, however, there remained in our hands the heights northwest of Presovce and the villages of Lavrikovce and Travotloki and the heights east of Godov. We captured seventeen officers and 672 men.

In the direction of Dolin, in the region northwest of Stanislau, after artillery preparations, our advance detachments pressed back the enemy in the Jamnica-Pasechna sector and occupied his trenches.

South of Bohorodczany our advance detachments defeated an advanced post of the enemy that had moved forward in the direction of Liakhovitsy and Svinjuchy. We occupied the latter place and repulsed the enemy's counter attack.

An enemy advanced post in the Jablonitsa-Porokhi region also was overcome. Altogether in the engagement yesterday in the direction of Dolin we took 300 prisoners.

In the region of the town of Brevo one of our companies attacked an enemy barrier guard and, after bayoneting seventeen Austrians, took four prisoners.

AVIATION.

An enemy air squadron bombed Oesel island (Gulf of Riga), but did no damage. Three fast Russian cutters raided Lake Rayin (Rassein), south of the mouth of the Danube, and landed under fire, capturing a machine gun, the breach of a field gun, and two Bulgarian soldiers, bayoneting twelve others. The cutters were attacked by a seaplane on their return.

A Russian balloon and airplane and German airplane have been brought down.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, July 7.—Front of Prince Leopold—Group of Gen. Bon Boehm-Ermolli—The battle in eastern Galicia yesterday led to an exceedingly sanguinary defeat of the Russians.

After strong destructive fire, which lasted several hours, a Russian attack was delivered early this morning between Konichuy and Lawrymowce. Russian divisions rushed against our front with deeply ranked fresh forces being constantly brought forward.

The enemy repeated his attacks until the afternoon. All of them broke down with heavy losses.

The employment of armored motor cars by the Russians was futile. They were shot to pieces. Our pursuit echelons attacked the retreating Russian masses from the air and cavalry which had been held in preparing was dispersed by our long range fire.

Later on the enemy attacked, regardless of all losses, farther north to the Zlochoff-Tarnopol railway and between Batkow and Zwyzyn. Here also he made no advance, but was defeated everywhere.

At Brzezany and Stanislau and at some points in the Carpathian foothills strong Russian attacks also failed with heavy losses.

Captured orders in the French language reveal by whom the Russian army has been driven to an attack which brought it no success of any kind, but resulted in the most sanguinary sacrifices.

Rhineland, Baden, Thuringian, Saxon, and Austro-Hungarian troops shared the honors of the day's battle.

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, July 7.—At several points on the Carpathian front yesterday the enemy artillery resumed its activity and ours replied effectively. At Kirlibaba the enemy evacuated his positions, group after group.

At Stanislau the Russians delivered several strong but fruitless attacks. Late in the afternoon the Russian attacks at Solotvina, on the Bystritsa, also failed.

In the region around Brzezany only one short enemy advance developed, but was repulsed. The success of our defense of this region in the preceding days is shown by the number of enemy dead, estimated at about 18,000.

The enemy yesterday obtained a decision southwest of Zborow by massed attacks, at some points fifteen waves deep, on a front of fifteen kilometers, lasting several hours. All were repulsed with heavy losses. Renewed Russian attacks this evening (Friday) similarly failed.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, July 7.—Reconnoitering parties attempted to reach our lines in the Pasubio area, on the slopes of Piccolo-Lagazuol and in the Vodil-Tolmino district.

On the Carso our reconnaissance patrols were able to carry out their work effectively in spite of the enemy artillery and patrols.

Our artillery dispersed enemy columns marching toward Monte Seluccio and traffic in the Galmasara valley; shelled workers and troops in the upper valleys of the Fella and Seebach; silenced a violent enemy bombardment concentrated on the Vodice positions, and kept under fire enemy lines east of Falta and west of Selo.

THE NEW RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE

Russia re-entered the war last week as an active belligerent. Beginning on July 1, they smashed the Austro-German lines east of Lemberg on a front of more than eighteen miles and captured not less than 10,000 prisoners and a number of guns before they were stopped.

Minister of War Kerensky is reported to have led the advance in person and by his enthusiasm overcame the last obstacles which were holding back Gen. Brussiloff's forces from taking the offensive. It was not until the close of the week that the Austro-Germans were able to bring up enough reserves to stem the advance.

This offensive gradually widened during the week until it took in the greater part of the Galician front from Stanislau on the south to the positions north on the Stokhod river east of Kovel.

As the week closed, Petrograd reported the beginning of a new offensive in the region of Pinsk.

The fighting as reported yesterday follows:

1—Petrograd says violent fighting has begun by the Russians west of Pinsk. In the Pina river their naval flotilla cleared the stream of mine barriers.

2—In region of Zlochoff Petrograd says Russians occupied three lines of enemy trenches, but were forced back by counter attacks. West of Koniuchy heavy fighting took place and despite counter attacks at the close of the battle several villages and heights remained in Russian hands.

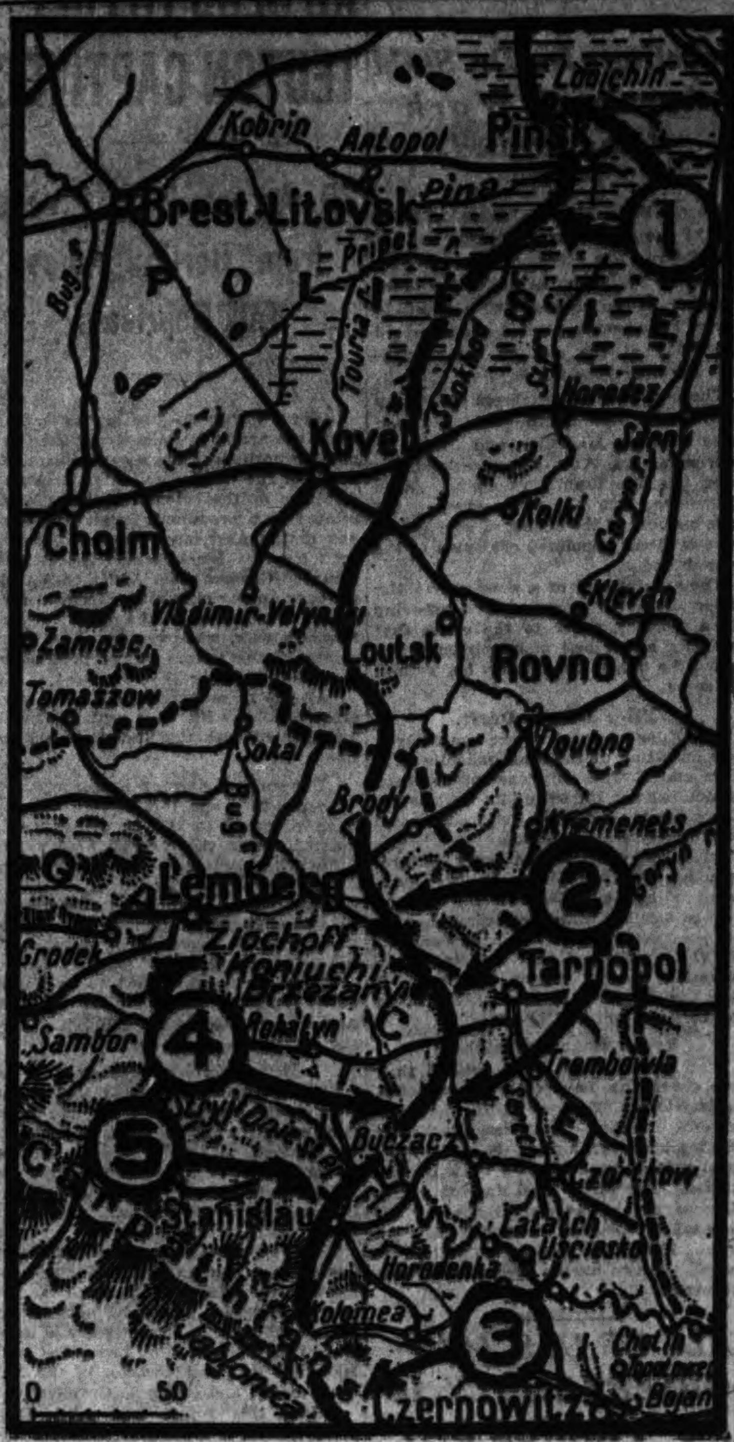
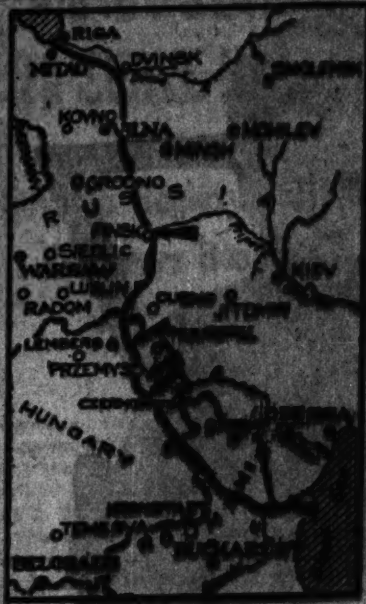
4—Berlin reports defeat of Russian attacks between Konichuy and Lawrymowce. Further north to the Zlochoff-Tarnopol railway and between Bat Kow and Zwyzyn Russian attacks also were thrown back. At Brzezany, Stanislau, and in Carpathian foothills all attacks were repulsed.

5—Petrograd reports Russians have taken Devinatch in the Jamnica-Pashechna sector northwest of Stanislau.





FRENCH FRONT

FRENCH.

PARIS, July 7.—Our artillery was particularly active today in the sector of Cerny-Ailles, the region of Hill 304, Le Mort Homme, and south of Moronvilliers, near the Rhone-Rhine canal, and the Carspach wood. Several attempts against our small posts cost the enemy losses without result.

DAY STATEMENT.

There was pronounced activity of the artillery on the front between La Royere and Pantheon and in the Champagne, in the region south of Moronvilliers. A surprise attack by the Germans near Massiges was repulsed. Elsewhere the night was calm.

AVIATION.

Between June 21 and June 30 nineteen enemy airplanes and one captive balloon were brought down by our aviators.

Our airmen also bombarded effectively in the same period the railway stations of Hochicourt and Avricourt and enemy establishments in the region of Beine, in the Suippes valley. Last night enemy aviators threw down several bombs near Epernay and in the region south of Nancy.

BRITISH.

LONDON, July 7.—After a heavy bombardment the enemy attempted to raid our trenches east of Loos, but was driven off with loss.

DAY STATEMENT.

East of Wytschaete our line has again been slightly advanced.

The enemy attempted to raid our trenches in the vicinity of Acheville, but was repulsed. Elsewhere there were no events of special importance.

BELGIAN.

PARIS, July 7.—During the night the enemy artillery was active in the region of Het Sas and Woesten. A German detachment attempted a surprise against one of our posts near St. Jacques Capelle, but was repulsed with losses. During the day there was artillery fighting in the neighborhood of Ramscapelle, Lizerne, and Het Sas.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, July 7.—Army group of Prince Rupprecht—Conditions being favorable for observation yesterday the artillery fighting increased to a point of considerable severity in some sectors of the Flanders and Artois fronts.

Army group of the German crown prince—The artillery fighting, spirited all along the front, was intensified, particularly at Cerny, on the Aisne-Marne canal and in the western Champagne.

After artillery preparation the French attacked with strong forces from Mont Carnillet to the Hochberg, southeast of Nauroy. The attack was repulsed by our fire, and in hand to hand engagements by our guard troops.

On the Hochberg the enemy, who had penetrated parts of our first line trenches, was driven out again by the energetic counter attack of a Hanoverian regiment.

At this stage the French again advanced and penetrated our trenches for the second time, but they were again completely repulsed by counter attacks and in bitter man to man engagements.

Reconnoitering advances on Brimont and at Cernay-En-Dormois resulted in a large number of prisoners being taken.

Front of the Grand Duke Albrecht—The artillery fire was frequently revived on this front, but there were no fighting actions of importance.

AVIATION.

The aerial activity was very lively throughout the day and the night and three enemy airplanes and one captive balloon were brought down.

ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, July 7.—The situation is unchanged.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, July 7.—On the Danube river we destroyed an enemy ship that was armed with guns.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, July 7.—The situation is unchanged.

ITALIAN.

ROME, July 7.—In Albania last night enemy airplanes which attempted a raid on Avlona were repulsed by our anti-aircraft guns and had to leave without doing damage.

FRENCH.

PARIS, July 7.—There have been patrol encounters on the left bank of the Struma. The artillery activity has been moderate along the whole front.

TURKISH FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, July 7.—In the Caucasus the situation is unchanged.

SUPPLEMENTARY

GERMAN.

BERLIN, July 7.—In the western theater there is nothing of importance to report.

On the Galician battlefield the heavy losses sustained by the Russians forced them to make pause in the fighting. At Stanislau minor enemy attacks failed.

Alien Enemy Held.

Dietrich Tiegler is being held by the federal authorities as an alien enemy. Nothing was given out as to the charges against him beyond that he is a German.

RUSSIAN CROWD TO HONOR ENVOYS NEAR A WAR RIOT

Cheer Hero Names, but Hiss Proposal to Fight for Liberty.

New York, July 7.—The blood red flag of the Russian revolution was waved wildly by thousands of the 10,000 men and women who packed Madison Square Garden tonight to attend a massmeeting in honor of Boris Bakhmetieff, Russian ambassador to the United States, and his fellow members of the mission to this country. Most of those who cheered themselves hoarse were men and women who fled to America to escape the oppression of the Romanoff régime.

The flag of the Jews was given a place of honor in front of the speakers' stand. C. M. Ruthenberg, head of the Russian social revolutionists in this country, presided and stirred his hearers to a frenzy of cheers as he called the roll of honor of the revolution. The name of Katharine Breshkovskya, "the grandmother of the revolution," brought the loudest din until he mentioned Kerensky, the minister of war, who has sent the armies of free Russia into battle with a new spirit. The roar which greeted mention of the Muscovite "man of the hour" lasted many minutes.

Hiss "Fight for Freedom" Idea.

The meeting was well under way when a fresh tumult was caused by A. Reutovich, representing the Russian workers in the United States, who declared the only way "to make the world safe for democracy" was to carry the war to a victorious end.

But it was evident there were many pacifists in the throng, for this battle cry brought a storm of hisses which steadily increased. The situation was saved by a delegation of Russian sailors, who leaped to their feet and wildly applauded Reutovich's sentiments. The chairman called upon the band to play the "Hymn of New Russia." This was something every one was willing to cheer, and finally order was restored after detectives had ejected four persons.

Disapproves Acts in Greece.

PETROGRAD, July 6.—[Delayed.]—The official news agency today printed a declaration of the provisional government concerning the proposed conference of the entente allies on the Balkan question. The declaration states that Russia's representatives will be instructed to insist on the general principles applying to foreign politics that have been proclaimed by Russia's democracy.

In part these instructions refer to the recent events in Greece. The declaration says the provisional government cannot but take an unfavorable view of the methods applied to enforce a change in the sovereigns of Greece. Although the Russian provisional government condemned former King Constantine's personal policy, it nevertheless regarded as not permissible any interference in the internal affairs of Greece. Thus Russia was compelled to lodge objections to the change in rulers and to refuse participation of Russian troops in the entente expedition in southern Greece.

In her relations with the allies Russia has defended the standpoint that the form of the government and the state organizations in Greece are exclusively the affair of the Greek people. The declaration concludes with the assertion that the military activity of Russia's army now has increased the importance of the democracy's views in international affairs.

G. J. GOULD AND BRIDE

Boston, Mass., July 7.—[Special.]—Mrs. Margaret Carter, mother of the youthful bride of George J. Gould Jr., is broken hearted because her daughter declared her parents were dead when she applied for a license to marry the heir to the Gould millions in Philadelphia.

"I'm going to quit Boston right away," said Mrs. Carter today. "I am going to New York to see Laura, and if there is anything strange about this wedding I want to know it.

"Perhaps I won't fit with the Gould crowd. My hands may be a little rough. Yes, I'm a little wrinkled and there are a few gray hairs, but I'm going to make the trip just the same."

The mother shows records which state that Laura was born on Colorado street, Butte, Mont., Nov. 22, 1896. Laura's father is Stuart Carter, formerly in the liquor business at Woonsocket, R. I., but last heard from in Reno, Nev.

Mrs. Carter is well known in the south end, where she has kept lodging houses for some time. She was divorced from her husband many years ago.

WOMEN TROOPS START TO FRONT

PETROGRAD, July 7.—Russia's death regiment of women started for the front from here today. Open air farewell services were held in front of Kazan cathedral. Lady Buchanan, wife of the British ambassador to Russia, was among those wishing Russia's fighting women "Godspeed."

Beatea Harrington, 11 years old and a pupil of the Calhoun school, has not hung back for a chance to give her mite to the nation. Yesterday she opened a lemonade stand at Lake Shore drive and Elm street in aid of the Red Cross, and she's doing a rushing business.

Gary, Ind., July 7.—Morris Bohele, 35 years old, a commission merchant of Gary, was instantly killed today at McCool when a Baltimore and Ohio train hit an auto in which he was riding.

'BIG BILL' TELLS MILWAUKEE HE'S A WRONGED MAN

They "Lied" About Him in That Liberty Bond "Plot" in City Hall.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Milwaukee, Wis., July 7.—[Special.]—Mayor Thompson, who accompanied the Chicago Aldermen here today, took local newspaper men into his confidence and told them he was a much misjudged man. The mayor repeated that he had been criticized because he was too pro-American, but he took pains to let the people of this city hear his side of the case.

"I am intensely American," said the mayor solemnly. "I believe in protection for America and Americans. I believe Americans should be cared for first. I am not pro-foreign. I believe in being prepared to resist invasion. I am more American than those who would rush over and take care of Europe."

"Plain Lie" in This "Plot."

To this the mayor added an explanation of the "Liberty bond case," as the question was put to him in this form.

"Just a conspiracy," he said, with a touch of mournfulness in his voice as if he regretted the subject being brought up. "Because I would not issue a letter coercing the employés in the city hall into purchasing Liberty bonds that story was tacked on me. As a matter of fact, Liberty bonds were sold in the city hall two weeks before I was asked to write the letter.

"I have never coerced the employés to purchase anything. I do not believe in it. There has been too much of that in Chicago."

"Then they simply tacked the story on to you as a matter of politics?" he was asked.

"Put it that they just plain lied," replied the mayor.

The mayor fell back on Abraham Lincoln again in telling how he favored woman suffrage.

"I believe with Abraham Lincoln," he said, "that government can best be maintained through parties. Therefore on every occasion I have urged the women to vote at the primaries, ally themselves with parties, and have a decisive voice in politics."

We Won the Ball Game.

O, yes, the reason the mayor came to Milwaukee was to witness the Chicago aldermen trounce members of the local city council by 15 to 6 in a baseball game for the benefit of the Red Cross. There was a big turnout for the festivities and the mayor remained until the sixth inning. Then he was compelled to leave to keep an engagement with Mrs. Thompson this evening in Lake Forest.

Ald. Klaus pitched a rip snorting game and Milwaukee never had a chance. More than 150 city officials and aldermen accompanied the team here.

BOY PULLS LEVER AND AUTO TRUCK CRUSHES BABY

Two Others Dead and 15 Injured in Day by Motors.

When a boy of 5, who has not been seen since, found the motor of an automobile truck in front of 5007 South Paulina street still in operation while the driver, Joseph Gondek, was delivering some goods, he climbed aboard and pulled something. Out in front of the truck Samuel Hooker, 3 years old, was playing. The machine leaped forward, crushing young Samuel, who died on the way to a hospital.

Joseph J. Wilson, 432 East Twenty-fourth street, a chauffeur, was fatally injured when the automobile he was driving collided with a truck owned by the Harvey Motor Truck company. Wilson's chest was crushed against the steering gear. The accident happened at Thirty-fourth street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Jerry Horan, 5008 Fulton street, was thrown to the pavement and his skull fractured when the machine of Carl Glass, with whom he was driving, cast a wheel and was wrecked at Diversey and Logan boulevards.

Peter J. Long Killed.

Peter J. Long, a Chicago commission merchant, residing at 410 East Forty-eighth place, was instantly killed and six persons accompanying him on an automobile trip to Ottawa, Ill., were seriously hurt early yesterday near Serena, Ill. The car struck a rock and turned turtle. Mrs. Long, Patrick J. Carr of the sanitary board and Mrs. Carr, Joseph McCauley and Miss Harriet McCauley, and William Paschke, the chauffeur, were taken to an Ottawa hospital.

John Kerr of 2031 Darrow avenue, a bicyclist, was run down and badly hurt at Simpson street and Dewey avenue, Evanston, by an automobile driven by Edward Button, 2150 Ashland avenue, Evanston.

Save Chauffeur from Mob.

Mrs. Bertha Hanneman of 2039 West Twenty-first place was seriously injured and six other persons were shaken up and bruised when two automobiles collided at Oak Park and Harvard avenues, Oak Park, last night. The injured: William Hanneman, her son; Bertha Hanneman, her daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Huebner, 2200 South California avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Landwehr, 2230 South California avenue, and Louise Hoehm, 2219 South California avenue.

Samuel Schultz of 1732 North Hermitage avenue, a chauffeur employed by Hillman's, was threatened with violence by residents in the vicinity of Bauwans and Paulina streets at night after his auto truck had knocked down Frank Parma, 5 years old, 1619 Blackhawk street. But for the arrival of police Schultz would have been beaten by the crowd.

Twelve persons were arrested in Chicago yesterday for failure to obey the parking ordinance.

MARY PICKFORD FILM TO BE SHOWN PRIVATELY TODAY

The owners of Mary Pickford's newest film play, "The Little American," have arranged for a private showing of the film, and Maj. Funkhouser, the critical second deputy, wasn't invited.

Yesterday telegrams were sent to various well known Chicagoans asking them to attend the private showing, which is to be held at the Studebaker theater at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Among those invited are: President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago, Bishop Samuel Fallows, Jacob M. Dickinson, Harriet Vittum, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Charles J. Vopicka, Prof. Shailer Matthews, Prof. James Weber Linn, Emil C. Wetten, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Maj. Abel Davis, First Assistant State's Attorney Frank Johnston, Dr. Frank Gunsaulus, Angus Hibbard, and others, including newspaper movie critics.

A ballot will be taken and the result submitted in the hearing the next day before Judge Sabath, who is to decide whether the film may be shown in the sixth German city of the world, Chicago.

The major's objection to the picture, as stated, is that it may arouse unwarranted hatred of the Germans, as Germans perform sundry barbarous acts.

Sanitarium Patient Had Merely Gone Home

Chicago police were asked yesterday by Dr. Oscar King, proprietor of a sanitarium at Lake Geneva, Wis., to search for Mrs. Margaret Byrne, a patient, who he said had been missing for two days. Later in the day Dr. King received a wire from her father, Hugh McCaffrey, a business man of Peru, Ind., which stated that Mrs. Byrne had arrived home.

SHE'S TOO YOUNG AND SO THE COURT FREES BOOK MAN

Albert H. McQuilken, secretary of the Henry Shepard company, 634 Sherman street, bookbinders and printers, was granted a divorce yesterday from Mrs. Carmen McQuilken of La Grange. McQuilken said the difference in their ages was the cause of their trouble. He is nearly 45 and she is only 26.

"My wife said she made a big mistake when she married," McQuilken testified. "She was very young compared to me. This letter she wrote will explain the whole thing, I think."

The letter he showed Judge Sullivan reads:

"Dear Albert: It is very hard for me to say what I must in this letter, but further delay is useless.

"Now I have the highest regard for you as a man, but we should never have married. I was too young and too utterly inexperienced in every way, and it was a great, miserable mistake, as events have proved.

"It is unfortunate, but I simply cannot feel that it is anything but a great moral wrong for a woman to live with a man toward whom she cannot feel as a wife should. I cannot put in my heart what is not there.

"So please go ahead and get it all over as soon as possible. CARMEN."

Thomas H. Carmichael Killed by Street Car

Thomas H. Carmichael, president of the Carmichael Range company until that concern went into bankruptcy four years ago, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon when he was struck by a south bound Cottage Grove avenue car at East Thirty-fifth street and Cottage Grove avenue. He died in the Lakeside hospital.

RIOT GUARDSMEN HAD NO BULLETS TO CURB THE MOB

Official Report on East St. Louis Outrages Defends Troops.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

East St. Louis, Ill., July 7.—[Special.]—The Illinois national guard—eight officers and 103 men—on duty here Monday, July 2, didn't fire into the mob that was lynching and burning Negroes, because it didn't have anything to shoot.

Not until after the arrival of company F, Fourth infantry, at 7 o'clock that night was any ammunition issued to the troops. At that time the situation largely was under control.

This will be the outstanding feature of the official report that will be made to Gov. Lowden Monday by Col. S. O. Tripp, assistant quartermaster general, who was in personal command of the national guard as Gov. Lowden's representative until the arrival of Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson at Monday midnight.

No Orders to Fire.

The report will say further that no orders were issued at any time that the troops should not fire, but that commanding officers were directed to use their own discretion in attempting to restore peace. It will hold that company officers in following these directions acted properly, for the reason that any firing of rifles would have meant the killing and wounding of many women and children and other noncombatants.

Investigation made by THE TRIBUNE as to why there was no ammunition with the companies that first responded to the call discloses that all the ammunition that had been issued through the war department—and all of it had been secured through that source since the federal government assumed actual control of the national guard of the nation—was called into Springfield last June at the time of the Mexican border mobilization. Since then the state of Illinois has been unable to secure either arms or ammunition from the war department.

However, 12,000 rounds were received by express on the night of July 3, and every soldier now on duty on the east side is ready for business.

Few Troops a Handicap.

The Tripp report, furthermore, will represent to Gov. Lowden that the 103 soldiers representing the entire strength available all through the Monday rioting, were scattered on patrol duty over seventy city blocks, with an average of less than two to a block; that it was practically impossible to operate them in mass or as a unit; and that the way in which the many different parties of rioters, whites and blacks, were operating, stopped the troops from effectual work against the mobs.

The report will deny that the national guardsmen participated in anyway in the rioting—one of the charges made directly by the resolutions adopted yesterday by the East St. Louis business men. It will say that the sole basis for the story that rifles were taken away from the national guard by the rioters rests on the single incident where Col. Tripp himself took a rifle from a soldier and pressed back the mob when a Negro was about to be hanged. Col. Tripp was not in uniform at any time during the riots.

Missouri Troops Spectators.

The report will add that at least one officer of the medical department of the First Missouri national guard regiment and several Missouri guardsmen who crossed the bridge during the excitement and watched the proceedings and were not on duty in any way in suppressing the riots may have led to the repeated assertions that the Illinois national guard was not performing its duty.

The report will go to Gov. Lowden Monday and it is believed prompt orders will follow for a general and sweeping investigation of the conduct of the troops.

Gov. Lowden today summoned Adj. Gen. Dickson to the state capitol. Brig. Gen. Henry C. Hill of Quincy, commanding the Second brigade, will assume command of the 2,000 troops now on duty.

St. Louis this morning sent over a committee headed by Charles Nagel, former secretary of commerce and labor, demanding that prompt measures be taken to stop the hegira of Negroes to Missouri and to reimport those who are now living on Red Cross and municipal funds in St. Louis. The Negroes refuse to go back and St. Louis served notice that it will stop feeding them on Tuesday.

An East St. Louis committee consisting of former State Representative John L. Flannigan, Edward C. Kramer, and Edmund Goedde, will be in Springfield Monday morning to confer with Gov. Lowden and Attorney General Brundage over the immediate executive and legal steps deemed necessary to straighten out the Negro problem.

The military court, that may be invoked to get at the bottom of the charges of national guard inefficiency, probably will be the first to get under way at Springfield. Present indications are that some of the higher officers who were on duty during the first day of the rioting will be brought before this tribunal.

Plan Police Shakeup.

Plans for the reorganization of the East St. Louis police force, which has been demanded by business men as a result of the race rioting, began to take definite form today.

Banks of this city, it is announced, will advance the funds necessary for a doubling of the police force. The banks will make a long term loan to the city.

The suggestion has been made that Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis of Chicago be called here to take charge of the federal grand jury, should a federal investigation be made of conditions here. Judge Landis, while holding federal court in East St. Louis last winter, lectured Mayor Mollman and other city officials for not enforcing the Sunday closing law against saloons; and soon after that lecture the mayor ordered the saloons closed on Sundays.

It was recognized today that neither rioting nor the quelling of riots has removed the race antagonism that brought on the recent bloodshed.

Assistant Attorney General Middlekauf of Illinois will arrive here tomorrow to take charge of the collection of evidence against rioters for presentation to the grand jury, which meets Monday.

Half a Million Darkies from Dixie Swarm the North to Better Themselves

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Half a million Negroes have come north in the last two years.

This great movement is not primarily or even largely due to the efforts of northern employers and labor agents.

Speaking broadly, the Negroes have come north for the same reasons that, before the great war in Europe, led 1,000,000 immigrants a year to cross the seas from Europe. The black men have left the south because they have been led to believe they can better their living conditions and make more money in the north.

Persuaded by Own People.

The chief agents in persuading the Negroes to come north have been their own newspapers and magazines, national associations of Negroes already living in the north, and letters written back home by Negro laborers who are now working in northern cities.

Big corporations, through advertisements and labor agents, have given impetus to the movement, but they have not been the controlling or even a very large factor.

In the first place the Negro race has finally found a voice and has become race conscious on a large scale. It will surprise many people to learn that Negroes own and edit more than 500 newspapers and magazines, which circulate almost exclusively among members of their own race.

Almost every issue of these Negro papers which are published in the south contains articles telling how black men and women from their own localities have gone north, where they are earning from $15 to $25 a week, as opposed to from 60 cents to $1.25 a day, which are prevailing wages on southern farms.

Back with Pockets Full.

In almost every issue, also, will appear the story of some individual Negro who has come back from his northern job, on a visit, with his pockets full of money.

To every southern Negro settlement, also, come letters from the men who have gone out from it to better paid work in the north. These letters also tell that there are no Jim Crow railroad cars in the north and that Negroes are not compelled to sit in the rear seats of the street cars.

"Up here in the north they let us vote and the politicians—white and black—are mighty nice to us."

So Others Come North.

So other Negroes come north. And they will continue to come so long as the war bars the flood of immigration. Some southern states have attempted to stop the drain of Negro labor by passing various restrictive laws. They might as well attempt to stop the rising tide by legislation. The only way they can stop it is by paying the Negro better wages and by, at least, giving him decent accommodations in his separate street and railroad cars and in the schools for his children.

Union labor leaders, who strongly object to the incoming of the Negro, are also likely to find that he will continue to come and, probably, in increasing numbers as more and more northern men are withdrawn from industry to fill the ranks of the army. From the purely union standpoint it would seem wiser to attempt the organization of the colored laborers rather than to stir up bitter feeling in attempting to fight the inevitable.

In All Northern States.

The fact that the Negro invasion covers all the northern states from the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi river in a single wave of almost equal density is an indirect proof of the fact that it is really the result of a great natural economic movement, no matter how much it may have been stimulated by the efforts of employers to get labor to fill their otherwise empty shops.

In Pennsylvania, chiefly employed on the railroads and in the great steel plants, more than 100,000 southern darkies are working. In Ohio there are at least 35,000 more Negro voters than there were a couple of years ago. Illinois, New York, and all the other states between have their proportionate share.

Almost all of the Negroes who have come north are men who were born and bred to farm labor. They come from remote cotton plantations and farms and most of them know no trade other than that of the farm laborer. Nine-tenths of them have never lived in a city or even a large town. They come from a country where prohibition—so far, at least, as the Negro is concerned—is strictly enforced.

At home they have never voted and they know nothing of politics or of political affairs. Down south they have practically lived out of doors or in little cabins open to the winds and the sunshine, under conditions which do not make necessary the strict observance of the laws of sanitation and health.

Then He Loses His Head.

In a northern city they suddenly find themselves earning twice as much money as they ever earned before; they are compelled to live crowded together in dark and insanitary rooms; they are surrounded by constant temptations in the way of wide open saloons and other worse resorts; they find a complete absence of all restrictions as to their use of street and railroad cars; they are courted by both black and white politicians.

No wonder that in a vast number of instances the recent Negro immigrant loses his head completely.

One result of the great war in Europe is that the Negro problem has moved north with a vengeance. And the north does not yet begin to realize it—even with the outrage at East St. Louis still sounding its terrible warning.

William Donahey Starts Fund for Riot Sufferers

William Donahey has sent THE TRIBUNE a check for $5 to be applied to the relief of the sufferers in the East St. Louis riots. Mr. Donahey has uttered the hope that a fund may receive immediate contributions. The check has been sent by THE TRIBUNE to the Red Cross.

NEGROES OBJECT TO INDORSEMENT OF SEGREGATION

"An interview in this morning's TRIBUNE credited to a member of the committee to present a memorial to Gov. Lowden on the East St. Louis riot does not represent our views when it approves segregation, separate schools, or anything else but equal rights for all citizens," says a telegram from members of the committee in Springfield.

It is signed by Edward H. Wright, Louis B. Anderson, R. R. Jackson, R. H. Abbott, and B. H. Lucas. Another member of the committee, the Rev. Archibald J. Carey, called up THE TRIBUNE and said: "We have been fighting segregation for twenty years. Many, reading hurriedly, think the interview with an individual member of the race came as the voice of the committee."

The article said, in effect, that the Negroes were gradually segregating themselves "without any act of law." The impression intended was that they were living in their own communities, attending their own theaters, eating at their own restaurants, and planning a playground for colored children. The interview, which was with a member of the committee, did not indorse segregation by law, and it seems to have been misread or at least its intent misunderstood.

DRY BLACK BELT AND CLEANUP OF VICE URGED

Deneen and Gemmill Both Suggest Safeguards Against Riots.

Closing of the saloons, vicious cabarets, resorts, disorderly houses, and the blotting out of "notorious vice lords" in the Chicago "black belt" was suggested yesterday as a safeguard against riots and mobs. Charles S. Deneen, former governor, who was in St. Louis when the recent race war broke out, said:

"The occurrences in East St. Louis have cast a sad reproach upon the administration of our laws. Excuses and explanations can furnish no justification for the denial to citizens of their constitutional rights. Conditions in East St. Louis were not unlike those prevailing in Chicago and some other cities.

Duties of Citizens Emphasized.

"At this time the duties of citizens are being emphasized. Among them is the duty of eliminating the autocracy of crime and vice that is corrupting and lowering our community morals and making merchandise of our laws. For the good of all we cannot begin this work too soon or pursue it too vigorously, fearlessly, and impartially."

Judge William N. Gemmill of the Municipal court said yesterday:

"Many more Negroes have been brought into my court lately than ever before. They are arrested mostly in fights and stabbing affairs. Many are newcomers from the south, unaccustomed to carrying weapons. The situation seems to be constantly growing worse.

Urges Dry Black Belt.

"Measures should be taken at once. All the saloons in the Negro district, most of them vicious, the cabarets, disorderly houses, and similar places should be closed and the police force in the 'black belt' strengthened. The city is responsible for these people coming here and these steps are vital for their own protection as for the city at large.

"From the multitude of cases coming up in my court I would say that 90 per cent or more of the trouble in which Negroes are involved owes its origin to the saloons."

FADE-OUTS

Judge Rules That Wife's Demands for Money After She Deserted Gave Husband Right to Divorce.

MILFORD STRAUSS, 2956 Howe street, told Judge Thomson yesterday that his wife, Fredericka, refused to do any housework. She wanted a maid, he said. And after she had deserted she wrote to him every time she changed addresses. Why? So he could send her money, and he did, too. He was granted a decree.

Lottie Defoss complained that her husband, George, had said a man in the army couldn't be bothered with a wife. He called her a nuisance, she said. Judge Thomson removed the burden.

Hattie Sennwardt, 2830 North Halsted street, testified that her husband, William, deserted her because he couldn't go to cabarets after they were married. Decree.

Emily Taylor, 2836 North Maplewood avenue, said George was married twice in one week and that he stole $200 from her. Judge Thomson fixed it up with a decree.

CAR STRIKERS IN BLOOMINGTON TAKE OLD JOBS

Bloomington, Ill., July 7.—[Special.]—All of the striking street railway employés went back on the company payrolls today. There was no formal declaration that the Illinois Traction company had accepted them as a union body.

The arbitration committee will meet in the city hall on Monday. The labor men will demand recognition of the car men's union, an eight hour day, and a pay increase that amounts to 1 cent an hour. The traction men are expected to grant the second and third demands.

The 1,200 Chicago and Alton men who struck Friday afternoon in sympathy with the car men were back at work today.

Col. Foreman's Second artillerymen are still camped in courthouse square. Since the troops arrived there has not been a single report of violence or disorder. The regiment will probably start back to Chicago on Tuesday night.

Tell U. S. About Job You Want.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—Persons seeking commissions in the military service were urged in a war department statement today to facilitate handling of their applications by stating specifically the nature of the appointment desired and in what branch of the service.

YOU CAN OWN AN AMERICAN HOME

BEFORE the summer is over you can be the possessor of an American Home, built for YOU from the plan YOU select. You and your family can be enjoying its unique, beautiful design, its convenient arrangement, its enduring construction.

You can occupy it late this summer or early this coming fall. The price will be guaranteed in advance. The arrangement for payment will meet your convenience.

People in Chicago are just beginning to realize that American Homes are not high priced. Because American Homes look better and have the air of being out of the class of ordinary houses, many home builders have hesitated even to investigate them.

Now that they understand that an American Home costs no more, or even less than others, they are buying rapidly.

We want you, if you are contemplating owning a home now or in the future, to talk to us. All we ask is the opportunity to place before you the facts regarding the moderate prices and our special arrangements which will allow your American Home to be built NOW instead of in the distant future. But first may we remind you of the special advantages of American Homes, which would make you buy even if the price were much higher.

This Is Distinctly American Architecture

American Homes reflect American spirit. They are the most recent triumph of Frank Lloyd Wright, recognized at home and abroad as America's greatest architect. His fame is world-wide, though his most important work has been to teach the American people how they can live in houses that are beautiful, convenient, and enduring.

An American Home is as truly the product of the country and as thoroughly national as a French chateau or an Italian villa.

Homes With Personality and Beauty

American Homes have character. They command recognition. Their dignity, their quiet lines, their strength and their individuality, make them stand forth from the mass of ordinary designs.

These houses are the one, new, stirring note in this oldest and most important of all the arts—the art of home building. As a great writer has said: "They have music and meaning in them."

Convenient, Practical Enduring

When you first see an American Home, either the actual structure or the drawing which we show you, you will be struck by its beauty, its cheery, homelike appearance.

When you enter an American Home you will marvel at the skill which could so perfectly combine charm of outline and effect with absolute convenience and practicability for everyday use.

American Homes are "livable" places for you and your family to spend your lives in. They seem "home" to you from the day you take possession. They make for cheer and comfort and happiness.

Cross-lighting and cross-ventilation make them healthful. Scientific designing gives ample space where it is needed and saves steps. Every woman will be delighted with these plans. They reduce her responsibilities, whether she executes personally or merely supervises household duties. All the little extras and advantages that mean so much in the daily routine of home maintenance are found in American Homes.

The Home You Would Plan

American Homes are the kind you yourself would plan. In fact, you will plan yours, for you will choose, from among the many, exactly the one that suits your every need as to space and the number and arrangement of rooms. All the faults of the ordinary house plan are eliminated. No waste space, no dark corners. Every square foot of an American Home has its use and its value to you.

And you have the choice of so many designs that you are sure to find one that is essentially YOUR home, the home you have sought but never before found.

A Guaranteed Price No "Extras"

If you have ever built for yourself, or if your friends have, you know that the bugbear of home-building is the long list of "extras" that mount up as the construction goes forward.

These "extras" can not worry you when you purchase an American Home. The price is guaranteed. You know in advance exactly what your American Home will cost. And the quality of material and workmanship is guaranteed.

Built by Established Contractors

The American System does not alter present building conditions. American Homes are being erected by established contractors and builders who are enthusiastic over the practical character of the construction, and beauty and permanence of the finished edifice.

Come to Our Office—Learn How YOU Can Own An American Home

To you who live in apartments or in a house not your own, decide now to have a beautiful home of your own. Learn how easily you can become the owner of an American Home—within the next few months. Our arrangement will surprise you. You will find the terms suited to your convenience. Payments can be made monthly. American Homes range in price from $3,000 up.

And see the plans of American Homes. They are different and more complete. Some drawings show not only the walls, doors and windows, but the position of the furniture. It is as if the roof were lifted off. You look into your future home as it will be when you occupy it.

You can study the specifications that protect you at every stage of construction. You will be quoted the guaranteed price—no "extras"—on your completed home ready for occupancy, with quality guaranteed and no building worries.

A visit to our office places you under no obligations whatever. So come at your earliest opportunity. Let us prove every advantage of American Homes. You are to be the judge. We gladly place the facts before you and leave the decision to you. But act at once. For your American Home can be built this summer if you wish, under this broad, generous plan.

Or Write for Suggestions Suiting Your Requirements

If you cannot conveniently meet with us at our office, we will send you a number of beautiful illustrations, together with interesting facts about American Homes.

JOIN OFFICERS' RESERVE CAMP, LOWDEN'S CALL

Asks State's Young Men Not to Fail in Crisis Nation Faces.

Springfield, Ill., July 7.—[Special.]—Gov. Lowden tonight received the following telegram from the commander of the central department of the army at Chicago:

"Eleven hundred and twenty-four applicants from your state for admission to the second officers' training camp have been selected for personal examination as to their qualifications for training. Your state's quota for the second training camp is 971. Several times this number is necessary to insure a full quota of officers best qualified to lead Illinois' portion of the new national armies.

"Will you give publicity to these facts through the Sunday press tomorrow and urge your state's properly qualified men to file applications for second training camps?

"Applications close July 15. Quick action is necessary. Application blanks are obtainbble from the examining officer at Fort Sheridan and from Military Training Camps association branches in all large cities."

Illinois Must Not Fail.

In commenting on this telegram the governor said that to officer properly our new national armies would require the immediate intensive training of thousands of men in the officers' training camps.

"If Illinois in this crisis were to fail to furnish its full quota of competent officers required to lead Illinois' portion of the new armies," he said, "it would be the first time in our history that our military lagged behind the men in the ranks. I know that among the young men of Illinois there is as large a number possessing qualities of leadership as we have had in the past.

Urges Men to Join.

"I now urge upon these young men to file promptly their applications for the second training camp. We have never been in a war the issue of which was of so vital concern as in the war in which we are now engaged.

"In our former wars Illinois has not been compelled to apologize either for the rank and file of our soldiery or for those who have led them. Shall this, the greatest of all our wars, be an exception?"

GOOSE ISLAND SITE FOR GARBAGE PLANT PROVIDED

A stroke of war economy was accomplished by City Controller Pike yesterday when he closed an agreement for the purchase of 100,000 square feet of property in Goose island, to be used for garbage disposal purposes, at a cost of $82,000. The council had voted a fund of $240,000 for the purchase of such a parcel, but Mr. Pike, after investigating several sites, decided an economy could be effected in Goose Island, and he thus saved $150,000 to the city.

NO CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS OVER WHALEBACK

There will be no criminal prosecutions because of the disaster to the steamer Christopher Columbus, in which sixteen lives were lost, it was announced yesterday by District Attorney Zabel of Milwaukee. Mr. Zabel declared that while the captains of the steamer and the tugs were negligent, they were not criminally so.

BETTER HOUSING FOR DOCTORS IN FRANCE URGED

Dr. Besley's Letter Says Best Service Thus Can Be Gained.

An appeal for better living conditions for the doctors who sailed with Red Cross unit No. 12 for the war zone was received yesterday in the first letter received from the unit. Dr. Frederick A. Besley of Chicago, now somewhere in France, wrote to John W. Champion, executive secretary of the Chicago chapter. After describing the cordial reception in England, Dr. Besley continues:

"We are now here and ready for work, and hard work it will be, I am sure. Our new address is United States Army, Base Hospital No. 12, care General Hospital No. 18, A. P. O. S. No. 18, B. E. F., France.

"Our understanding of the size of the hospital was wrong. We were equipped in personnel to care for about 600 or 700 patients, and I find that we have at least three times that many.

"The doctors are living in tents, but the nurses are comfortably housed in huts and are happy in their work. The ration for the nurses' mess is provided by the English government.

"It will be necessary, however, for us to purchase a mess equipment for them.

Best Service the Aim.

"I feel very strongly about providing my doctors with better quarters for the winter. It is rather hard to get efficient work from men who are not properly housed, and a small conical tent without sides will not be a comfortable place to spend a cold winter.

"Please do not misunderstand me. I am not complaining and the spirit of every individual in the organization is splendid; we are willing all to do our best under any circumstances or conditions. My thought is that the more efficient we can make each member of the organization with good food and proper housing, the better they will be able to serve the wounded and sick soldier, which work of course is the fundamental."

Maj. Besley inclosed a complete list of the nearest of kin of the men and women in his unit, with addresses, and this will enable the Chicago Red Cross to inform these relations from time to time of the welfare of the 108 serving in Europe.

Break News of Casualties.

The headquarters of the American National Red Cross at Washington is preparing to collect and distribute in the United States information of casualties to come when the American forces go into action.

ARMY TO INVADE FOX RIVER REGION TO WIN RECRUITS

Capt. Franklin R. Kenney, head of the recruiting forces for the Chicago district, will carry his campaign for recruits to the Fox River valley today. With seventy of his men he will invade the valley at Geneva, Ill. The program will include speeches by the captain, Col. Fabyan, and several others. A sham battle will be staged in model trenches on the Fabyan estate.

Speed Up Naval Station.

The naval training station in Grant park is beginning to show real progress. The mess hall is almost complete. The hospital corps have tents up and equipment in place. About 150 men of the navy are engaged in the work of construction.

Machinists, cooks, stewards, etc., are wanted for the navy at once. The naval recruiting office, under the command of Ensign H. D. Childs, at 619 South State street, is about to start a week's drive for 25,000 recruits.

Eighth Seeks Recruits.

A special effort to get recruits will be made tomorrow by the Eighth Illinois infantry. Four companies, one machine gun company, and the band will march in south side streets and will give an exhibition drill in the Sox baseball park.

A recruiting campaign of three days to obtain fifty recruits for the Second Illinois infantry will be launched today in west side parks.

IRATE WIFE DOES A CARRIE NATION TO TRAIL SPOUSE

Mrs. Nellie McDonough of 1606 North Francisco avenue called yesterday at the establishment of McGinty & O'Brien, 37 West Adams street, to ask after her husband, Charles. The number mentioned is a saloon.

A moment after Mrs. McDonough arrived a bartender hurdled the bar and gained the street in nothing flat. He was closely followed by glasses, bottles, and other saloon incidentals. A moment later came Charles. Then came Mrs. McDonough. In her hand she bore a stout stick.

Policemen arrived. "He's here too much," said Mrs. McDonough. "He has a home."

VISITORS BARRED FROM ALL PHONE EXCHANGES NOW

The opening of the new South Chicago telephone exchange at Eighty-ninth street and Marquette avenue at midnight last night brought out the fact that all visitors have been barred from viewing the operation of telephone exchanges since the war started.

In the past it has been the delight and pride of officials of the local telephone company to invite the general public to view the inner workings of their system, and especially on such an occasion as took place last night, when 6,000 telephones, connecting that many subscribers, were "cut in" from the old exchange to the new without a moment's loss of time or interruption of service.

President B. E. Sunny admitted last night that since the war situation arose he issued orders to all exchanges forbidding visitors access to any of the company's exchanges.

"My action," he said, "was not prompted by any government order, but I thought it was for the best, under the circumstances.

"We give the government precedence in every matter in regard to telephone service and are working closely with it."

No Wonder Kaiser Was Peeved.

Washington, D. C., July 7.—America's tremendous growth in explosives manufacture is shown by exports of $5,521,077 in 1913, compared with $717,144,649 in 1916, according to official figures announced today.

NEW INDUSTRIAL BOARD AVERTS ICE MEN'S STRIKE

The Illinois industrial board yesterday scored its first victory in arbitrating strikes or troubles between unions and employers when the threatened walkout of ice manufacturing engineers was called off by the men. This is the initial venture of the board acting under the powers granted them by the code act which was recently passed and which does away with the old state arbitration board, giving the industrial board power to intervene in labor troubles.

The strike of the ice employés was set for tomorrow. In the settlement the employés were granted 55½ cents an hour, which is an increase of 7½ cents. The employers only won a fixed date for the annual hiring of men. The former date was July 1, in the middle of their busy season, and the new date is fixed for May 1.

The unions were represented at the thirty-six hour conference by Charles Peterson and the ice company's committee was headed by Joseph T. Connery.

Charles Andrus of the industrial board announced that Robert Osborn, also of the board, has been sent to Bloomington to offer the board's help in arbitrating the street car trouble there.

How War May Deprive You of a Hudson Super-Six

	The Cost in 1916	The Cost Now	Increase in Pct.
250 lbs. frame steel	$ 1.35 per cwt.	$5.25 per cwt.	289
335 lbs. sheet metal	2.75 per cwt.	8.15 per cwt.	279
110 lbs. aluminum castings	.28 per lb.	.50 per lb.	179
210 lbs. cast iron	13.25 per ton	43.00 per ton	325

Our leather increase, which is one of the most important items, is 40%. Other upholstery items have advanced 100%. Our wheels have advanced 80% in price; our front and rear axles 80%; the components of our tires, rubber and cotton, have advanced 75% and 150% respectively. We use 60 lbs. of copper in each Super-Six; it costs 100% more than a year ago.

(All prices f. o. b. Detroit)

These are times when no one who will want an automobile within the next twelve months can afford to put off buying.

The only certain way of getting a Hudson at all, or to obtain it at present prices, is to buy now.

War conditions so greatly affect material supply and costs that future car production is uncertain.

Note how costs have increased in the essential materials as shown in the above table.

All materials have gone up in price at an unprecedented rate.

All automobile manufacturers have or soon will make new price advances. They have had to on account of increased costs. On cars selling at $1,100 and above, the increase has been as much as $200.

Cars which have made no record for performance or endurance and which have sold in the $1,000 to $1,300 class are now priced in the Hudson Super-Six class.

Increased costs are similarly affecting all makers. None can permanently escape them.

Hudson Prices Not To Advance Now

The Hudson factory is now in production with materials bought at last year's material prices. When they are all gone then Hudson cars, too, must go up in price.

The number unsold and in production is limited. All dealers know the amounts of their allotments and so far as we are able they will get their full supply.

Dealers who have not made arrangements in the way of stocks and rely upon factory supply to meet their wants will have to take their chances in getting cars along with the men who put off buying.

Buy Hudsons for Less Now Than Later

As long as the present supply lasts, Hudson Super-Six cars can be bought at present prices.

Compare them with the prices now asked for cars which have shown no such proofs of endurance.

Go minutely over the claims and recommendations made for any car; check its price with that of the Super-Six and then take into consideration the character of dealer representation and service offered by the different cars and decide.

Who has made such demonstrations of endurance?

No other manufacturer has established important records as an indication of the performance capabilities of his cars. In fact, since Hudson first began to make records for speed, acceleration, power and endurance, there have been no other interesting tests announced by other makers.

Before Hudson began to make new records, it was the custom of many makers to use the speedway and the cross country run to prove their cars. We did not resort to a new method to prove Hudson performance. But what the Super-Six has done has apparently proved how hopeless it is for any to attempt to equal its records. At any rate, no one now disputes Hudson supremacy with any proof that any car equals or excels it.

By deciding now you can get a Hudson Super-Six at a price not much above what is asked for cars which formerly sold at a much lower price.

If you wait, the inevitable adjustment of prices will again force you to pay the true difference.

It is needless with most buyers to explain the greater value of the Super-Six. You no doubt have long preferred to own a Hudson. Now the question of its costing more than some other car should not deter you. But your decision must be made soon if you want to get a Hudson Super-Six. Other cars haven't even a price advantage now.

SOCIOLOGY PUT TO TEST STIRS SAVANT'S HOME

Prof. Scott E. Bedford Explains Repudiation of Debts.

Scott E. Bedford is a professor of sociology at the University of Chicago. Best authorities define sociology as "the study of the development of society." One of Prof. Bedford's sociological theories contains the belief that debts contracted by any one other than himself do not contribute to the welfare of society.

He so expressed his views on this particular point yesterday through a "personal" advertisement inserted in an afternoon newspaper. The brief notice, inconspicuous as it appeared, caused the professor no end of explaining. His young wife, a graduate of the Chicago Musical college, encountered a similar experience. Chatter among their circle of friends and acquaintances was rife with such expressions as "I can't believe it," "And such an ideal couple," "You don't mean it?"

Prof. and Mrs. Bedford were seen at night at the home of Mrs. Cass M. Shaw, 6135 Greenwood avenue, where they are spending the summer. Prof. Bedford admitted inserting the article, but denied it was intended as a rebuke toward his wife.

Mrs. Bedford was equally insistent on that point. That she had previously discussed the action of her husband was evident by a remark, "I told you not to do it." His reply was, "Well, I am going to tell the facts." As recited by Prof. Bedford they are:

"My wife has a woman friend who is not in as fortunate circumstances as we are. Mrs. Bedford permitted her to use our charge account at one of the loop department stores. When I got my bill recently I found that out of a total of nearly $75 this woman had used nearly all of the amount. I then decided to close all of my charge accounts. She is a good friend of ours. Her husband works for a large corporation. She has two grown sons. I do not care to disclose her name. It was not intended for my wife. Why, I even closed my own personal haberdasher account."

Mrs. Bedford acquiesced throughout her husband's recital, he frequently addressing her with, "Is not that right, Elizabeth?" She supplemented her husband's explanation by adding to the inquiry as to why she gave her woman friend permission to use the account by saying, "I know many women that do this same thing. Sometimes a woman runs out of money and needs little things. My husband knows that."

When it was suggested to Prof. Bedford that a verbal or written request was a sufficient notification to his creditors he responded by saying, "Well, I am not a lawyer. And you know when one has a charge account they spend more." And the Bedfords are now "charging it" to an inconspicuous ad.

FISHHOOK SNAGS BODY IN LAKE; BARES MURDER

Farmer and Son Locked Up as Slayers in Michigan.

Because two fishermen snagged their hooks in Crystal lake, near Beulah, Mich., yesterday, August Natezell, a wealthy retired farmer, and Carl Natezell, his son, 19 years old, both of Frankfort, Mich., have been locked up, accused of murder.

Theodore Anderson, the "odd job man" about Frankfort, was last seen on June 23 in the vicinity of the Natezell house. Yesterday when two railroad men were trolling their lines a hook caught. The men pulled hard and brought to the surface the body of Anderson, bound round with baling wire.

Claim Admissions.

The discovery was reported to the local authorities and the arrests of the Natezells followed. The father was locked up in Frankfort and his son in Manistee.

While the older man has refused to make a statement, it was said by the officers last night that the son made enough admissions to indicate that Anderson was slain and that his killing was deliberate.

Two Stories Told.

Two stories have been told. One is that Anderson had been suspected of committing petty thefts and that the Natezells constructed a shotgun trap in their cellar which killed Anderson. Another story is that the Natezells bought a horse from Anderson which Anderson subsequently stole, enraging the Natezells, who lured the "odd job man" into the cellar, where he was shot.

It is charged that after the slaying the Natezells bound the victim with wire, placed the body in a wheelbarrow, and wheeled it to the lake, where it was thrown.

Loophole for the "Wets."

Duluth, Minn., July 7.—Booze lovers have found a loophole in Duluth's dry ordinance and the oasis is threatened with inundation. Duluth breweries have opened branch houses in Superior, Wis., nearby, and evade the law by shipping goods first to Superior, then hauling it back across the Wisconsin line to Duluth consumers. State authorities say they are helpless.

THE ACQUIRING OF WIVES SEEMS TO BE HIS FORTE

Two Already His, Mr. Hyde Gained 'Yes' of a Third.

A diamond ring that turned up missing, put the first suspicion in Mrs. Clarice Eleanor Hyde's mind, and the thought grew until she had made a complete and successful investigation into her husband's history and learned something of his intended future.

Her husband's name is Charles Benjamin Hyde and it developed that he not only had been married once before, but seemed on the way to another romance.

Two Wives Meet in Ohio.

Mrs. Hyde, who lived at 446 Roslyn place, told Judge Thomson yesterday that she had learned her husband had given the missing ring to another woman for an engagement ring. Then she went to see the woman and had quite an interesting conversation.

The woman said she was engaged to marry Hyde and that she did not know he already had a wife. And then Mrs. Hyde learned her husband had another wife in Charleston, W. Va.

"I wrote to Charleston and made arrangements to meet Mrs. Hyde number one," said Mrs. Hyde of Chicago. "We met in Cincinnati and compared pictures. It proved true that we were wives of the same man. Then I made my husband confess and he wrote this letter to me."

Irene a Good Little Woman.

She showed the following letter to the court:

"My dear Clarice: Your kind letter came today. Now I know you met Irene, but I don't know what she told you. But whatever it was it must have been all right. She is a good little woman.

"No, I was not divorced when I married you and goodness only knows why I brought so much trouble to us all. I am the sorriest man in the world and ask your forgiveness. I am striving to make good and hope I can have my family together again. Wishing you all kinds of luck and happiness believe me, as ever, CHARLIE."

Judge Thomson granted Mrs. Hyde a divorce.

Husband Forgives Shooting.

Because her husband refused to prosecute her, Mrs. Cora Burmeister, 29 years old, 1655 North Sedgwick street, was dismissed yesterday in the Chicago avenue court by Judge Caverly. She was charged with intent to kill. She shot her husband, Albert Burmeister, four times with a revolver on June 29. She left the court with her husband.

PIG IS A HERO OF BIG SELLER AT BOOK FAIR

Publishers Find Animal Tales Win Children, War Adults.

Ordinarily there is not much romance in a pig. And surely one would not expect a pig to live a very adventurous life, but a pig has been selected as the hero of a romance, and he is such a nice, gentlemanly hero and he has such amazing adventures that the book is a big seller.

Of course it is fiction, but it is real to the children who hear or read the tale—for it was written for little folks between the ages sof 4 and 9. The book is one of thousands being displayed at the book fair now in session at the Palmer house and participated in by every big book publishing house in the country. In the same series are books with other animals for heroes, such as the jolly elephant, dancing bear, leaping goat, lost cat, and the jumping squirrel.

For the grownups the best selling books are those about the war, and one of the most popular is a book of poems about trench life as seen by a Red Cross ambulance man.

Next Tuesday the book publishers' representatives, who will continue in session till about July 20, will hold their annual field day at Hinsdale, when they will feast on things cooked according to recipes in their own cook books and will disport themselves athletically along lines laid down in their books on sports. There also will be a dance.

GRAHAM BANK MAY BE ABSORBED IN MERGER PLAN

Financiers Confer with Officers of Closed Concern.

That it is a "financial institution" which is going over the books and investigating the assets of the Graham & Sons bank, with a view to assisting the family out of its trouble, was admitted yesterday.

"There are reasonable grounds for the assumption that the Graham bank may become a part of a bank merger. Those interested insist that their identity remain secret for the present, and I can say no more," said an informant yesterday.

W. C. Niblack, in charge for the Chicago Title and Trust company, receiver; Frank J. and Ralph R. Graham, and men representing the mysterious "institution" held a conference at the bank yesterday and the work of checking up securities was kept up for the most of the day.

The American Surety company yesterday turned over to officials of the west park board a check for $60,000. The board had that sum on deposit at the bank under guaranty when it was closed. Judge Landis yesterday authorized the receiver to pay the salaries due the employés of the bank.

Leaps Off Suicide Bridge, but Is Saved by Policeman

Despondent over failing business, Christopher Colseth, 55 years old, a Norwegian tailor, with a shop at 669 North Clark street, leaped off the high bridge over the Lincoln park lagoon yesterday in an attempt to commit suicide. He was rescued by Lincoln Park Policeman William Stist. His injuries are not serious.

Weigh values—now! Judicious buying looks beyond the price

Because a thing is low in price is no reason why it is economical.

It's not the price, but the worth of a thing, that should first be determined in every purchase.

What will it do? How well will it serve? Will it fulfill the purpose for which it is intended—and that at the lowest practical cost?

If it will not do well what it is designed to do, it is extravagantly dear, no matter how little it costs.

Packard cars are bought by people—successful people—who are in the habit of weighing values. It is not what they pay, but what they get for what they pay, that stamps their selection as wise.

And just now, when values need to be weighed with extraordinary care, Packard cars are greater values than ever before.

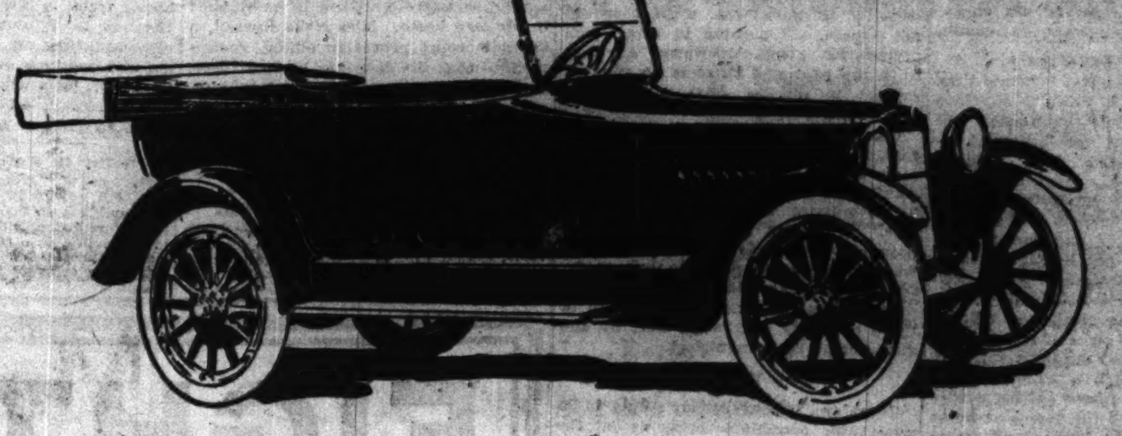
SAXON "SIX"



You Can Satisfy Yourself
It Is Better to Buy Saxon "Six"
Than a Car Costing $200 or $300 More

You can follow any one of three different ways of judging motor car values and prove conclusively that it is better to buy Saxon "Six" than a car costing $200 or $300 more.

For instance, if you are going to pick the car you buy on the basis of its quality, consider these facts:

Saxon "Six" has a Continental motor of six cylinders, Timken axles, Timken bearings, Stromberg carburetor, Remy ignition, Fedders radiator, Spiral Bevel gear, Semi-floating axle, Exide storage battery, Wagner starting and lighting system, and Warner Steering gear, as eleven of its important features.

You will find two or more of these features on 14 cars ranging in price from $3000 to $10,000.

You will find two or more of these features on 22 cars ranging in price from $1350 to $3000.

You will find two or more of these features on 24 cars ranging in price from $1150 to $2500.

That census shows the quality of Saxon "Six." It is a fine car throughout—down to the last detail.

But it may be you are more directly interested in performance—what your car can do on the road.

Saxon "Six" is an unusually powerful car. It pulls smoothly at all speeds—"on high" or "in low."

It rides the road closely. You feel no sidesway when the speedometer needle pushes up to the racing speed mark.

If you make your decision upon performance ability, Saxon "Six" will be your choice.

But of course the economy of a car is a big thing to consider. Economy may carry weight with you. And it should.

Because it is light in construction, Saxon "Six" is tire-easy. You get from 1000 to 2000 extra miles per set.

Saxon "Six" is sparing of oil and gas. It forces each atom to deliver its full mileage. With the ordinary care it deserves, your Saxon "Six" should give you twenty miles or more to the gallon of gas.

Because it is strongly constructed of high-quality materials, Saxon "Six" is a long-lived car. It has the stamina to face the pounding of bad roads and rough usage without flinching.

Repairs and replacements are but rarely necessary. Saxon "Six" will perform at lower cost per mile than any car in its price-class, or at $200 or $300 more.

So—from the standpoint of quality, performance, and economy it is plainly evident that Saxon "Six" is a better investment than a car costing $200 or $300 more.

We will be glad to give you some further interesting information about Saxon "Six" if you will drop in. The price is $935, f. o. b. Detroit.

ALLIES' FAILURE TO REALIZE PERIL REFLECTED IN U.S.

Analysis Shows the War Losses Largely Due to Stupidity.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

In the preceding series of articles which have been running in THE TRIBUNE for a number of weeks, the endeavor has been made to show that the reason the enemy has not been defeated is primarily because of the failure of our allies to run the war in accordance with the principles of war.

Seven weeks in this country after a second visit to Europe since the beginning of hostilities, making a total of a year and a half spent in various theaters of war, gives a most decided impression that we have not yet commenced to realize what war really is and that we, as a nation, are actually at war. Apparently we have got to travel the same painful road and pay the same exorbitant price in money and in lives as was traveled and paid for by the British during the two and a half years it took them to realize what war really means.

For years prior to the present war they paid no attention to the frequent warnings given them as to the necessity to properly prepare for war on the same scale as was done on the continent of Europe and by Japan in the orient.

One Lesson Learned.

However, their dependence on overseas trade for their industrial life and their food compelled attention to the value of overseas communications of all kinds and the proper protection of these communications by means of a powerful navy. For years prior to the present war we ignored every warning as to the necessity to prepare for war and even jeered at those who gave the warnings. Being busily interested with our own affairs and not being dependent upon overseas commerce for food and our industrial life, we ignored the value of overseas communications and contented ourselves with a navy of the third or fourth order.

Thus when the war broke out we were nowhere nearly as well prepared to enter it as was Great Britain. For two and a half years we have had her as an example of the price which an unprepared nation must pay when war comes.

Lessons of Experience.

We have seen the bitter struggle they have been through in order to convince the people as a whole that money will not win a war; that vast potential resources untranslated into fighting armies will not win a war; that civilians, no matter how brave or patriotic, suddenly put into uniform and given a gun are not soldiers and cannot succeed as such until put through a long, hard course of training; that well educated, high spirited, athletic young men cannot become competent officers by merely putting on a uniform; that business cannot go on as usual, but must be run in such a manner as to insure the fighting forces getting everything they need and the people at home their food; that the wishes and rights of the individual must be subordinate in time of war to the best interests of the state as a whole; that the volunteer system is inefficient, unjust, and undemocratic and must be replaced by universal service; that a bureaucratic system of running a small regular army in time of peace is not competent to handle the large armies necessary for war; that civilian ideas as to the policies governing the conduct of a war are in the great majority of cases fundamentalyl wrong, with the result that when they do not lead to disaster they give the enemy opportunities which enable him to materially better his position; that hiding the truth from the nation as a whole because it frequently is disagreeable only forces them to face more bitter truths later on.

All Points Ignored.

For two and a half years we have ignored all these lessons and contented ourselves with talk. Since we have entered the war, we have suddenly tried to take advantage of some of these lessons. However, we still ignore most of them and where we are paying some attention it is only a partial attention, and therefore cannot yield the desired result. There is nothiing which is more necessary than that the whole truth shall be told and well understood by the whole nation.

The evils which we must suffer because of our lack of preparation in the past are primarily the fault of those who opposed such preparation, and secondarily of those, who, while they did not oppose, did nothing to bring such preparation about. However, all that is in the past and there is no time at present to discuss what might have been done.

The question of great importance is that we should be doing now and planning to do in the future everything which will enable us to fight this war in accordance with the principles of war. Whatever any one may have thought of war in general or of this war in particular prior to our entry, there is only one thing which every one must realize—viz.: now that we are in there are only two ways out; as the victor or as the vanquished.

Two Ways Out.

Therefore, it is everybody's duty to do everything possible to bring us out the victor. The greatest dangers are those newspapers which day after day suppress the disagreeable truths and terribly exaggerate the agreeable ones while giving their readers the idea that the partial measures we are taking are rapidly winning the war; and those people who, because afraid to face disagreeable truths themselves, are bitter in their denunciations of those who are not.

No greater aid could be given the enemy, because these papers and people by encouraging unjustifiable optimism are steadily working to prevent our making the real effort which we must make if we are to win this war.

RUSSIAN REVOLT TO GO ON UNTIL PEOPLE HAVE FULL RULE

BY ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PETROGRAD, May 21.—The forming of the coalition government in Russia has closed the first period of the revolution and ushered in the second. It has not happened without pain and some political deaths, particularly Guchkoff and Miliukoff, and, of course, had a sprinkling of fire on the Nevsky; but, taking it generally, it has been very successful.

There had to be some blood sacrifices, both high and low, but, considering the results, they were pretty small. For the coalition appears at this moment to have united the most powerful factions in Russia, and to have provided a fairly firm foundation for government which with luck will last right up to and into the constitutional assembly.

After that no one hereabouts is bold enough to make more than guesses. All any reasonable person here asks now is for the government to be strong enough to carry on the war and, at the same time, land safely in the constitutional assembly.

Popularizing of Power.

The coalition has the support of every one except the Bulshiviki, the most demandful of the radicals, who insist upon having the whole power in their hands at once. The Minshiviki, the less demandful radicals, the bulk of the Socialist party, are with the coalition and hope it will work out. The Bulshiviki openly pray it will stub its toe. All depends upon how strong the Bulshiviki are and whether they can succeed in providing something for the government to stumble over.

The history of these two months is one of the growth of the revolutionary spirit as expressed by the council of soldiers and workmen's deputies. It was the popularizing of power. It showed that revolution was not a mere coup d'état, the upsetting of a government, but the steady growth of revolutionary spirit. The forming of the coalition government in no way arrests this. Nothing can arrest it. Russia is following the normal course of all revolutions. It is bound to become more and more revolutionary until the power rests consciously in the hands of every one in the country.

Suffer from Mental "Bends."

The Bulshiviki, in their fight on the present government, are being helped in their cry that the Minshiviki have sold out to the "bourgeoisie" by the Russian exiles returning from America, Switzerland, France, and England, most of whom are very radical and pray their brothers here not to let Russia slip into the rut of plutocratic republicanism represented by the countries in which they took refuge. They are not content to let their country advance as far as we are before going any further. They say Russia must not get out of one kind of despotism to tumble into another. They also insist now is the time to go the whole distance, upsetting capitalism and putting Socialism on a working basis.

The fact that there is a war going on concerns them in just one way—it is a nuisance and must be stopped right away, advantageously if possible, but that is not necessary. They also ignore the fact that they are working on one of the most backward people, people who have been kept deliberately in the dark and brutalized by vodka. All this burst of freedom is coming on them so fast they cannot take it in. Theq are like men who come out of a compressed air caisson too soon. They are getting the mental "bends."

Have Fanatical Touch.

But, though the Bulshiviki number some of the finest brains in Russia, they all have that fanatical touch that sees only a beautiful end, and is going to get there no matter what lies in between. They have no time for coalitional governments and mere practical results. So they can be counted upon to put spokes in the wheels of government. But, though it is dangerous to do any prophesying in this country, especially as I intend sending this by mail across Siberia and the Pacific, I believe it is safe to say that the coalition government has united all the powerful elements in Russia which have been active during the two months since the revolution, and ought to succeed.

Still it is always the totally unexpected that happens in Russia. Who would have thought three weeks ago the original provisional government would be shaken almost to pieces over some secret treaties with England and France! But those who did the shaking—those who did all the shaking—are in the government, so it does not look as if there were any one here strong enough to shake, even though a new batch of exiles numbering 810 are just turning up from Switzerland by way of Germany.

Save Germany from Harm.

Doubtless many of these returning exiles will not put spokes in the wheels, but experience so far indicates that exiles returning to Russia by way of Germany have been doing their best to prevent Russia from reorganizing rapidly enough to do Germany any harm in the war. I don't mean to say they are doing this in return to Germany for the favor of being allowed to cross, but they would not have accepted the favor if they had had any very belligerent feelings toward Germany.

The political composition of Russia is comparatively easy to understand, taken broadly, but there are so many crosscurrents it becomes often very confusing. I shall try only here to show the main currents, going back to the days before the revolution, to show where the currents come from.

The duma gave a fairly good picture of political Russia before the revolution. All the right side was monarchistic, all the left more or less revolutionary. The center was occupied by the Octobrists, men of the type of Rodzianske and Shidlovsky, men now considered extremely conservative—the extreme right in the new lineup.

Whatever lay right of the center can be neglected now. It was a confused lot of organizations, every man his own party, a good many of whom joining with the Progressive Bloc during the war to get a working majority.

Left of the center there were two strong parties, the Cadets, Miliukoff's party, and the combination of social democrats and workmen. Even before the revolution they were always quarreling because the Socialist party was always trying to force the Cadets ahead faster than they wanted to go.

Broadly, what happened during these two months was that the extreme left, the most revolutionary part of Russia, kept getting steadily more revolutionary and grew enormously in numerical power. The Cadets and the Octobrists, who controlled the provisional government, no longer had the bulk of the people behind them. They were a brilliant collection of men, probably one of the best governments ever gathered together, but they could not advance as fast as the people. The very responsibility that lay upon them impeded them.

Change to Suit People.

Still it was remarkable how they succeeded in changing within a few weeks from a body willing to act as ministers under another emperor, to an out and out democratic government. They kept yielding steadily to every demand of the people, and they even succeeded in remaining good natured when the executive committee of the council of soldiers and workmen's deputies took power right out of their hands.

During the last two weeks before the coalition government was formed all the real power lay in the rather fluctuating executive committee of the council of soldiers and workmen's deputies. The government often expressed itself as willing to do anything the people of Russia asked of it, but there was no way of telling what the majority wanted.

The council of soldiers and workmen's deputies itself could not tell, simply because popular will was in such a fluctuating state. It was extraordinary how the government kept up even a semblance of governing. In the end it could not even do that.

GRANDCHILD AN ASSET IN HER FIGHT ON H. C. L.

The value of a grandchild in the battle with old h. c. of l. came home to Mrs. Mary Linkus of 4501 Talman avenue only when she lost 5 year old Alice. All the city philanthropists, including the county agent and the charities, grew stingy and left light bundles in the absence of a child in the house. So Grandmother Linkus told Judge Arnold of the Juvenile court about it.

According to probation officers, Alice was happy and every one was contributing until Charles Pomkoski, her father, at Detroit, wished to have Alice in his own home. Miss Nelle Russell, a Juvenile court probation officer, recommended that the daughter be sent there. But Grandmother Linkus bundled Alice off to her mother and she was taken beyond the state line. Grandmother says she doesn't know where Alice is now, but the court officials think otherwise.

Studebaker

Reproduced from an actual photograph taken near Fort Bridger, Wyoming

A Performance That Proved

This is the story of one of the most gruelling tests to which an automobile was ever subjected.

Remember as you read it that the car was a Series 18 Studebaker taken from a dealer's stock, that there were no trained service-men at specially established "controls" to care for it, that the trip itself was not "factory planned," that it was just an ordinary tour.

No Special Preparations

On May 20th last, this Studebaker car left San Francisco as the pilot car for a caravan of advertising men going to the St. Louis convention.

No special preparations were made as far as the car was concerned. The trip was to be a long one—but nothing unusual was expected.

The first two days were pleasant and the roads were good.

Seas of 'Dobe Mud

The harder it rained, the stickier and more tenacious became the 'dobe mud. In places the pools were hub deep. This mud was cement-like in its consistency—it took a pick and shovel to remove it from the wheels. Yet the Studebaker car pulled sturdily along and showed ample reserve power for conditions even more difficult. This lasted for three days until they reached Salt Lake City.

Over the Rockies in a Blizzard

Leaving Salt Lake City they started for Evanston, Wyoming, traveling the latter half of the distance through one of the hardest rainstorms imaginable—the road was washed out and the car had to find its own way over rocks and along ledges that seemed impassable.

Starting from Evanston for Fort Bridger they ran into a blizzard, which at lower levels turned into rain.

The road was a veritable canal.

At one point they only made nine miles in five hours (the picture above shows why).

More Rain and Mud

All the way through Colorado the rain continued—and kept up as the car struggled through the gumbo mud of Western Kansas.

Even between Topeka and Kansas City the roads were in awful condition.

Arrived in Perfect Running Condition

At Kansas City the clouds lifted, the sun shone and the rest of the run to St. Louis was made without incident.

Despite its all but unsurmountable difficulties the Studebaker car arrived in St. Louis only 2¼ hours behind schedule in perfect running condition and having only changed one tire during the entire trip.

So well had it come through its terrible experience that the car was driven on to Detroit to the Studebaker factories without any overhauling whatsoever.

This performance is further proof of the remarkable durability of Studebaker cars—a durability that is due to one thing only—the mechanical perfection of this splendid automobile.

Any car that will come through a test like this in perfect running condition—any car that will perform as this one did is worth your serious consideration—you owe it to yourself to get a Studebaker demonstration before you buy any car.

There will be no change in Studebaker models this year, but the increased cost of materials and labor may force Studebaker to make an advance in prices at any time without notice.

TWO COPS IN JAIL CHARGED WITH AIDING ROBBERY

One Star in Evidence Against Young Policemen.

Chief Schuettler has his doubts regarding Walter Knefel, 5952 Justine street, and Stephen Shea, 3400 Wallace street, probationary policemen, who were stripped of their stars yesterday and jailed on a charge of larceny.

Both policemen assert their innocence, but Knefel's star was presented by the victims as conclusive if silent evidence.

July 4 Party.

August Dumso and Paul Smith of Rockford told State's Attorney Hoyne about it. It was this way, they explained:

They dropped into Chicago to spend the Fourth. After some celebrating they happened upon the saloon of Murphy & Crosby, at 109 East Eleventh place, which they thereupon entered. Pretty soon they were attending a party in a room above the saloon. It was a gay party and the policemen hated to leave it every so often to report to the station.

The Rockford men accuse Shea of robbing Smith of $15 and Dumso of $75 and a scarf pin.

"We asked them to give us the money back, but they and the girls just laughed at us," said Smith. "Then pretty soon the policemen fell asleep and we took both their revolvers. We got Knefel's star, but Shea was sleeping on his stomach and we couldn't roll him over."

Among Those Present.

Mr. Hoyne reported the case to the chief, who thereupon had warrants issued for the policemen. The following were arrested as members of the gay party:

Mrs. Evelyn Murphy, 111 East Eleventh street, charged with pandering and being an inmate of a disorderly house.

Kittie [illegible], charged with being an inmate of a disorderly house.

J. [illegible], partner of Murphy in the saloon, and Mrs. Crosby, his wife, charged with being inmates of a disorderly house.

Chicagoans Wed in East at Bride's Girlhood Home

All the way from the Pacific to the Atlantic William J. Eldridge, a coal dealer at 122 South Michigan avenue, traveled to be married. His bride was Miss Florence Grace Hoyt, who had been living at 423 Wrightwood avenue, Chicago. It was her wish to be married in the church her father was instrumental in erecting, and among childhood friends. So they were married at noon yesterday in the Methodist Episcopal church in Roxbury, Conn.

Mr. Eldridge had been to the Pacific on a business trip, while his bride spent last week in Stamford preparing for the wedding. She is the daughter of the late Samuel B. Hoyt of Stamford, and both her parents are dead.

Elopement "Comes Out" After Six Weeks' Delay

On May 28 William Milkewitch, 5336 Michigan avenue, eloped with Pearl Levinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Levinson, 138 South Hamlin avenue, to Crown Point, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Milkewitch kept their secret well until yesterday, when the bride, according to her husband, told her little 7 year old sister, Gertrude. Little sister imparted the news to her mother and parental blessings followed. The bride and groom are now living at the Plaza hotel.

MISSING

Mother Asks Aid to Find Son Lost for Six Days.

Carl Hohmann

Mrs. Carl Hohmann, 1925 Howe street, yesterday appealed to THE TRIBUNE to aid in finding her son Carl, who disappeared last Monday evening. The boy, who is 14 years old, was employed by the Northern Bank Note company at Clark and Harrison streets. After receiving his pay last Monday evening he set out to deliver some packages before going home. The packages were delivered, but he did not return home. His mother thinks Carl lost his money and was afraid to go home without it. When last seen the boy wore a gray shirt, blue trousers, and dark coat, tennis shoes and blue cap.

FIREMAN SAVES LIVES OF CAPTAIN AND LIEUTENANT

Two firemen were badly injured yesterday when fire attacked the home of Steve Phillips, 8915 Green Bay avenue, and had it not been for the bravery of one of their comrades, Pipeman Dan Sullivan, both of them might have been killed. The injured men are Capt. Henry Dwyer, who was badly burned, and Lieut. John Butler, whose leg was broken. Both belong to truck company 17.

When the firemen arrived the building, a three story frame structure, was in flames. Capt. Dwyer and Lieut. Butler fought the fire from the roof, which caved in, precipitating both men into the burning house.

Pipeman Sullivan plunged into the burning building and rescued both men. Lieut. Butler was lying on the floor, unable to move because of his fractured leg, and Capt. Dwyer was stunned by his fall.

SLOGAN, SLOGAN, WHO'S GOT THE SLOGAN TO WIN?

Only Three Days More for You to Write That Prize Phrase.

You've got just three days left in which to send in a slogan for Robert Reid's naval recruiting poster at Randolph street an Michigan boulevard. The contest closes Tuesday at midnight, and two prizes of $50 each are being offered for the best catch phrases.

The judges want a line or two to stimulate and inspire enlistments in the navy, and they are looking for something short and snappy. Competitors must be young men between the ages of 17 and 25.

If your slogan wins one of the prizes it will have to be a mighty good one in order to win out against the thousands already submitted. Therefore give it careful thought. Get everything on one piece of paper.

Some of the slogans submitted are given:

"To the rescue! Zip! Bang! Peace! Glory!"—D. F. Harris, Lander, Wyo.

"Stop, look, listen to Uncle Sam calling you."—F. J. Walsh, 5460 Greenwood avenue.

"It's up to you and not to Uncle Sam."—Ralph Brown, 216 North Hamlin avenue.

"Fight now; ask why later."—Conrad Jacobson, 1903 South Sawyer avenue.

Premier
The Aluminum Six with Magnetic Gear Shift
$1985 f. o. b. factory

THE price of Premier does not need to be justified. You may merely take it for granted that the Premier factory is thoroughly capable of estimating its costs and that so long as we are able to sell a fine car of this class with the lynite-aluminum motor and all of its expensive, distinguished features at $1985, we are perfectly willing for you to be the beneficiary.

We believe that there is no car on the American market to-day which offers anything like the value of Premier at $1985.

Premier is the only car in the world regularly equipped with the Cutler-Hammer Magnetic Gear Shift.

CUBS AND SOX BOTH SUCCUMB TO ENEMY

CHICAGO TEAM AGAIN LANDS OLYMPIC CUP

Local Four Has Low Score of 655 in Golf Classic.

BY JOE DAVIS.

The big Olympic trophy, first played for at the St. Louis exposition tournament in 1904, and which, save for occasional lapses, has been a resident of Chicago for thirteen years, will remain here another twelve months. Led by Kenneth Edwards of Midlothian, with a total of 160, the four of the Western Golf association won the annual thirty-six hole competition at Midlothian Country club yesterday with a total of 655. The southern team was second with 661, and the Michigan team third with 685.

Teams from Transmississippi and Iowa associations also started, but withdrawals at the end of the morning round by two players from each team put them out of the running. The southern team, a peppy quartet of four members of the junior brigade, led at the end of the morning play with a total of 330. The western four had 335.

Edwards, 79; Hunter, 77.

Good afternoon rounds of 79 and 77 by Edwards and Hunter respectively put the western team in the running, as Perry Adair had 85 and T. Wheelock 84. This left the issue up to Bobby Jones, southern champion, and R. Hickey, who started late. They had to make a brace of 79s to tie, but reported as the sun was setting with cards of 82 and 80 respectively. Hickey took 8 on the long sixteenth hole.

Play did not come up to expectations, as only four of the contestants cut under 80. G. Decker French of the Iowa team got 74, Paul Hunter 77, and K. P. Edwards and Reuben Bush 79.

The course was slow in the morning, but conditions were good in the afternoon. As it was the first time the southern boys had played the course, they gave the winners a good battle.

DOUGLAS WRECKS PITCHING HAND

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 7.—[Special.]—The Cub pitching staff was handicapped by an accident to Phil Douglas, whose stature was not taken into account when they built the subway cars. Going to the game today, Phil had to stand up on account of the constant crush on all New York transportation except the taxis. Nearing his destination, Douglas started to stretch his weary, straphanging arms, wholly unmindful of the electric fan buzzing industriously over his head. His outstretched hand encountered said buzz saw and lost all the skin off a couple of knuckles. Of course it had to be his pitching hand, so the Cubs will have to do without Douglas until the injury, which was more painful than serious, heals.

CITY CHAMPIONS BEATEN IN STATE TENNIS DOUBLES

Matches Today

Men's doubles—2:30 o'clock, Hayes and Burdick vs. Day and Hill in semi-final; 3:30 o'clock, winner Hayes-Burdick and Day-Hill match vs. Ketchum and Green for state title.

In a semi-final match replete with terrific drives and exceptional returns Al Green Jr. and M. G. Ketchum beat Sam Hardy of London and Harry Waidner of Winnetka, 6—8, 6—2, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, in the Illinois patriotic tournament for the Red Cross at the South Side Tennis club yesterday. The winners upset the dope, as Hardy and Waidner recently annexed the title of city patriotic champions and were ranked with the strongest teams. Green and Ketchum had more force on their forehand drives and placed their returns so well the veterans always were unable to grab the lead.

The 400 spectators were glad to remain at the club until 7 o'clock to see the finish of the match. Today Ketchum and Green will match their skill against the winners of the Hayes-Burdick and Hill-Day matches for the honor of first rank in the state.

Hayes vs. Ketchum in Singles.

Walter T. Hayes had an easy time beating M. G. Ketchum in the singles semi-finals, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2. He had the former Californian on the defensive during the entire match. Hayes was all over the court and returned Ketchum's drives with such accuracy he had his opponent chasing the ball to all corners.

Ralph Burdick played up to expectations when he defeated A. L. Green Jr. in the other semi-final, but he was forced the limit to do it, the match going five sets. Green staged a desperate comeback in the last game, but fell short. The final in men's singles will be played tomorrow.

By playing a steady game Miss Mary Katherine Voorhees of Evanston eliminated Miss Marian Leighton, former Hyde Park school girl, in a semi-finals singles, after Miss Leighton got a flying start.

Women's Doubles Decided.

Miss Carrie B. Neely and Miss Voorhees won the final in women's doubles. They had little trouble defeating Miss Leighton and Miss Dorothy Highie. The stress of playing three matches in one day told on Miss Leighton, and she weakened in the last few games. Her partner was not able to do more than her share so they had to bow to their experienced opponents.

MEN'S SINGLES.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

by RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER 1.

"MORRISON," said Crazy Kennedy one noon, squeezing my hand, "there's a fool born every minute."

"Kennedy," I replied firmly, "great minds run in the same channels."

"Morrison," gulped my friend, "actions speak louder than words." And he poured a few drops of iodine on his toothbrush.

Half an hour after this duel of wits the telephone rang.

"It's Mrs. Ignatz Kelley," said Crazy without rising. "Tell her I will undertake her case."

"Perhaps she doesn't want an undertaker," I joked.

"Shut your mouth, Morrison, and answer the phone!" smiled my friend.

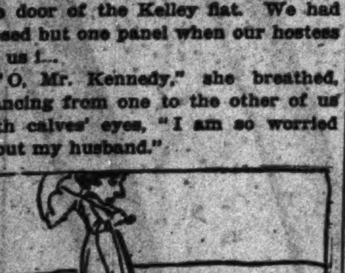
CHAPTER 2.

It was indeed Mrs. Kelley, as Crazy had deduced, and she breathed a soft thanksgiving into the transmitter when I informed her that Kennedy was at her service.

"Call a pink taxi at once," she shouted, "and rush to my apartment on Grand boulevard."

We were fortunate in finding the vehicle halfway downstairs and in twenty minutes we were kicking at the door of the Kelley flat. We had loosed but one panel when our hostess let us in.

"O, Mr. Kennedy," she breathed, glancing from one to the other of us with calves' eyes, "I am so worried about my husband."



"I am so worried about my husband"

"Fine or superfine?" queried Crazy.

"Fine."

"What shall the owner do to redeem it?" I butted in.

"I can't think what ails him," said our fair client. "He has been home three nights in succession and he gets up smiling and with a good appetite for breakfast."

"Where is he now?" asked my friend.

"At work, but he will be home in less than four hours."

CHAPTER 3.

We waited.

CHAPTER 4.

Kelley was a stropping big stripling and when I saw him I was indeed glad that both Kennedy and I had brought our popguns.

"Well, Kelley," said my friend.

"What of it?" said the giant.

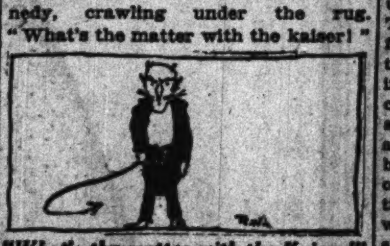
"How's every little thing?" asked Crazy pleasantly.

"What are you here for?" Kelley retorted.

"To find out what ails you," I chuckled. "You've been home three nights and you get up in the morning without a grouch. I think you've lost your health."

"You think so?" he replied, and knocked me across the room.

"I believe I have it!" shouted Kennedy, crawling under the rug. "What's the matter with the kaiser!"



"What's the matter with the Kaiser!"

"He's all right!" yelled Kelley.

Kennedy gave a triumphant smile. "Madam," he said to our client. "The mystery is solved. Your husband is insane. And," he added, "I don't know as I blame him."

"You should worry," retorted the bug's better half.

TENNIS TO BUY AND MAN FLEET OF AMBULANCES

New York, July 7.—In an effort to raise money for three ambulance sections the national lawn tennis association is arranging for a series of exhibition matches throughout the country. Leading players will participate. Beginning about the middle of this month and continuing for six weeks, these matches will be played before the larger clubs of the country, conforming as far as possible with the various tournaments already scheduled.

N. W. Niles, R. L. Murray, S. H. Voshell, and several other ranking players plan to devote part of their time and some of the players now in the officers' training camps may be available after Aug. 12. National Champion R. N. Williams is now at an eastern officers' reserve training post.

The total cost of the three ambulance sections will be close to $100,000. All the clubs of the association have been asked to contribute and where sufficient money is collected by one club or combination of clubs the ambulance will bear the name of the club or clubs.

BOY BADLY HURT IN LOUISVILLE BASEBALL RIOT

Louisville, Ky., July 7.—Another demonstration against Umpire Murray, with President Hickey of the American association an onlooker, marked Indianapolis' 8 to 3 defeat of Louisville. In the eighth inning Murray called Yerkes safe at first after some fans thought he had been touched out. This followed a disputed decision on another play at second base, and the crowd swarmed out on the field with cries of "Let's leave."

The game was delayed while almost a thousand spectators marched across the diamond out of the right field gate. In the crush a boy was injured so seriously he had to be carried off the field on stretchers of the First Kentucky ambulance division, which was watching the game. Hickey came to Louisville today to investigate the trouble Murray had with the fans on July 4.

Before the game the 1916 American association pennant, won by Louisville, was raised. Indianapolis hit Stroud hard and often.

WHY PRINCETON, HARVARD, YALE, QUIT ATHLETICS

BY SOL METZGER.

[Copyright: 1917: By Sol Metzger.]

There is no stranger contrast, no more interesting situation, in the effect of this war upon amateur sport than that Harvard, Princeton, and Yale do not plan to continue intercollegiate athletics, whereas nearly all other colleges, even those which abolished them when war came, contemplate going ahead when college reopens.

True, these three colleges will have athletics and may play informal games with nearby institutions of learning, but intercollegiate sport as we know it is a thing of the past until war is over so far as they are concerned.

Why "Big Three" Quit.

The Harvard-Princeton-Yale decision has been due to two influences. First, they have been slowly coming to believe that intercollegiate athletics is not a department of physical training. Second, they are in a measure the center of the nation's drive to get college men as reserve officers.

We must keep this idea in mind to get the present position of these three universities toward intercollegiate sport. Thus, when the drive was made at each for reserve officers, intensive military training and patriotism supplanted both intercollegiate and intramural sport and college loyalty. If this had not been so, if America had not been placed above alma mater, if the eagle had not been adopted as a symbolism in place of the Yale bulldog, or the Princeton tiger, or whatever beast or bird it is which is the emblem of the athletic spirit of Harvard, German kultur would soon have had our "goat."

Don't Like to Lose.

Grant all this as true. "What about this fall?" you ask. The first great drive for officers is a thing of the past, and the colleges are to remain open and continue along normal lines. The government has requested this. Intercollegiate athletics, you say, are a part, a normal part, of college life.

Unquestionably more athletes have enlisted in proportion than any other college group, division, club, or class. Why, then, do not Harvard, Princeton, and Yale take them up again? Are they afraid to lose games?

These institutions do not like to lose intercollegiate games. There is no doubt about this, nor is there any doubt this is a factor in some minds in shaping the policy. Ask any of their athletic men, "Are you going to play football this fall?" and the reply invariably is, "All the men in the team have enlisted." This is not mere talk, either.

Harvard Teams Riddled.

Take the Harvard situation here; it is: Of the seventy-nine boys who made up the football squad, including managers, all but three had left college before commencement to enlist; of the freshmen squad of thirty-one, all but two; of the hockey team, all but two and these two there were no records of; of the crew, baseball and track squads, not yet formed as to personnel when war was declared, practically all had gone.

Other colleges have like records, you say—which is quite true—so why should Harvard, Princeton, and Yale fail to develop new teams as these others intend to do? But the loss of all these athletes, if not all of them, in these

BRUINS BEATEN AFTER TAKING LEAD IN NINTH

Score Two Runs, but Robins Come Back and Win, 5-4.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 7.—[Special.]—In a frenzied and fussy ninth inning the Cubs won back a game they had won and lost once before, then lost it again by the final score of 5 to 4.

For eight rounds it was a clean cut pitchers' battle between Al Demaree and Sherrod Smith, with the verdict apparently about to be rendered in Smith's favor, about 3 to 2. Then in the ninth the Cubs hopped on Sherrod hard and tore the victory loose with the aid of a rank muff by Hickman.

Deal Leads Final Attack.

Deal led the disturbing rally with a single to center. Wortman tried to advance him and bunted a little fly, which Smith caught. Wilson lined a fly to center and Hickman did not have to move for it, but muffed the ball squarely. It squirted so far away that Wilson reached second and Deal sneaked to third.

Manager Mitchell shot his already weakened team to pieces by sending Pickles Dilhoefer to bat for Demaree, and putting Driscoll on to run for Wilson. That worked finely, for Pickles made himself an immediate hero by smashing a long fly into the left field corner for three bases, scoring Deal and Driscoll. There was only one out, but Smith stopped them there. Flack's bounder resulted in Dilhoefer's demise at the plate and Wolter grounded out.

Now Comes the Sad Part.

Vic Aldridge and Dilhoefer were sent in as a battery to hold the narrow lead of one run just established. Dilhoefer did his bit, but Aldridge proved a slacker. After getting rid of Hickman on a fly, Aldridge was panned for three straight singles. Stengel hit one to right and made second on a short passed ball. Wheat singled to center, but Zeider's bluff to catch the ball held Stengle on third, although Wheat made second on the throw home.

On the first ball pitched to Cutshaw Dilhoefer picked Stengel off third cleanly, but Deal dropped the ball after making the tag. Cutshaw then hit a grounder, which bounded over the heads of both Deal and Wortman, who were playing in to cut off a run at the plate if they could. Stengel and Wheat registered and Brooklyn at last had won a game from the Cubs on the home lot.

Cubs Get Two in the Third.

The Cubs were first to score in the third inning, which Wilson opened with a single. Demaree struck out, but Flack singled. Mann filed, then Doyle delivered a double into the right field corner, driving home two runs.

Demaree stopped the Robins with one hit for four innings, but in the fifth they tied the score. Mann helped them tie it by kicking himself out of the picture in the Cub fifth because he was called out on strikes. That moved Flack over into left field, to which he is unaccustomed, and removed a right handed batter against a left handed pitcher, because Wolter had to go to right field.

Two Flies Elude Flack.

Wheat mauled a fly through left center for three bases and Cutshaw hit a fly over Flack's head. Max reached it, but could not hold on and it went for a two bagger. Mann probably would have been playing where he could have caught both flies. Wheat counted on Cutshaw's rap and Cutshaw scored on two terrific flies which Wolter and Williams captured.

The Robins broke the tie in the seventh with a single and double off Demaree, good for one run.

Manager Mitchell Fined $50 for 'Run-in' on July 4

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 7.—Manager Fred Mitchell of the Cubs today was fined $50 by President Tener as the result of a "run-in" between the manager and Umpire Quigley in the afternoon game on July 4. Mitchell was chased in the contest, and the report sent by the official caused the president to take the more drastic action.

Notes

The Sox and Macks will continue the battle today.

Eddie Cicotte is slated to be on the slab, and if he is geared up to his 1917 form he will be a tough one for Mack's men.

Myers began the ninth as if he intended to walk a whole lot of people, but after he had passed Risberg and Schalk Eddie Murphy went up and bunted the first ball, which broke up the parade.

Umpires are beginning to realize that Buck Weaver can run. Buck has been the victim of many a close decision at first in the past. Yesterday he got two hits by getting the decision in his favor twice, and the ump was right each time.

Bodie raised a yell when called out at first in the opening round. Witt was on second, Strunk on first, and none out, and Ping bounced to Weaver. Buck carried the ball to third and then shot Ping dead at first, but Ping didn't believe it.

Just before Bodie poled his two bagger in the eighth the squeeze play apparently was on tap, for Witt started trotting home with the pitcher's windup. He gave it away, and Scott pitched wide with the whole team and the entire grandstand hollering at him. Witt stopped and dug back to third before Schalk could nail him.

Notes

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 7.—[Special.]—Sunday is an off day in Brooklyn since Ebbets' "sacred concerts" were barred by the authorities.

Two more games Monday and Tuesday will complete this series with the Robins.

Harry Wolfe was released today to Pittsburgh by President Weeghman just in time to make Dilhoefer eligible under the player limit. Dreyfuss claimed Wolfe at the waiver price and asked that the player join the Pirates at once in Philadelphia to take the place of Hinchman, who broke a leg yesterday.

The third strike on which Mann kicked himself out of the game looked bad, but Umpire O'Day already had shown signs of being peeved by the humidity. It was costly for the Cubs to lose Mann against a left handed hurler, but that is about as far as the average ball player can see through a 1917 periscope.

SOX AND MACKS BATTLE TODAY AT FT. SHERIDAN

The American soldiers and officers in camp at Fort Sheridan will have a chance this morning to sit and look at a bit of high spirited fighting, for the White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics will travel up to the north shore training camp and stake a genuine baseball game for the sole purpose of entertaining the boys who are preparing to go to the front.

Officers and privates, many of whom belong to Chicago's wealthy families, have shown great enthusiasm over the event and it promises to be quite a society affair, for wives and sweethearts, coming from families of high social standing, are to be present also.

A squad of army men worked on the diamond for hours yesterday to get it into best possible condition for the big leaguers. Of course, the game does not count in the championship race, but Manager Rowland of the Sox and Manager Mack of the Athletics intend to have their regulars on hand and the players are delighted to take part, even though it will cut short their morning sleep.

A special electric train will take the two teams from the south side to the fort, going over the elevated to Evanston and then over the Milwaukee electric line direct to the grounds. President Comiskey of the White Sox and President Johnson of the American league will be with the baseball party. At the entrance to Fort Sheridan the baseball party will be met by Col. Nicholson of the officers' staff.

It is planned to begin the combat at 10 o'clock. Immediately after it is finished the two teams will trolley their way back to Comiskey park to play a championship contest.

BODIE WRECKS ROWLANDS, 4-2, WITH A DOUBLE

Drive by Ping Sends In Winning Runs for Mackmen.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Ping Bodie felt that he had righted many of his wrongs yesterday when he poled a two base blow down the left foul line that sent two runs home. The Athletics beat the White Sox, 4 to 2, so it easily can be seen that Ping's two bagger and its results had a lot to do in the defeat of the Sox, and it is even possible a lot of the south side fans wished that Ping still were on our side instead of playing for Connie Mack.

Ping's knockout blow came in the eighth round, following a base on balls to Witt and a two baser by Strunk after one was out. Until that blow was delivered the Sox had a fine chance to win the fight, for the Macks had only two runs and were beginning to waver a bit in their defense. After that blow the battle was sewed up.

Sox Rally Goes for Naught.

The Sox did rally in the last of the eighth and got two runs, but two weren't worth a cent then. Ping played ball all afternoon with the same spirit he displayed in hitting his two bagger. One wouldn't have been surprised had he flapped his arms and crowed after hitting that decisive punch. It gave him as much satisfaction as he feels when handed his pay check. Ping thinks himself he ought to be on the White Sox yet, and because they turned him back to the minors he proposes to beat them out of the pennant simply to get revenge.

Jim Scott was the suffering victim of Ping's wrath. Scottie was picked to hurl against the Macks because in olden days all he had to do was fling the ball over and win. That was before Ping was one of the Macks. Scott labored hard to restore his old time efficiency over the Philadelphia bunch, but after Ping's blow he was through. He remained long enough to walk the next man and then was yanked, Dave Danforth coming in to finish the job.

Myers Wins for Macks.

Elmer Myers, who once gave promise of becoming a world beater in the art of pitching, was on the slab hurling in his best style. At least he was until the eighth inning. He was in a couple of desperate situations, but managed to hurl himself out. He hurled in such a manner that some of the Sox heavy sluggers couldn't deliver the timely punch.

The Sox had a fine opening in the first inning, when Leibold led off with a single. A sacrifice, a walk, another sacrifice and another walk followed, but no one had a punch. Gandil finished it by fanning with the bases filled. In the sixth the first two Sox batters got on, but no one got home. Gandil fanned again for the third out with two fellows prancing to come home.

In the eighth, with one out, singles by Weaver, Eddie Collins and Felsch produced a pair of runs, and in the ninth the first two Sox batters walked and were bunted along, only to be left on the bases while Leibold and Weaver died on fly balls.

Athletics Start Early.

In the first inning the Macks ragged Scott for one tally. Witt and Strunk singled, but Bodie slapped into a double play. Bates followed with a safe blow, sending one man in. In the seventh, after one was out, Bates poled another and so did McInnis. Scott tried to pick the former off second and aimed badly, letting them move up, then he purposely passed Schang, filling the sacks. In this pinch, Jamieson smashed one right to Eddie Collins, who fumbled long enough to lose a play at the plate, but recovered in time to get his man at first.

Witt started the eighth round fuss with a walk after one was out and Strunk doubled, Witt stopping at third. This was the situation when Bodie landed the knockout punch.

GOLF QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL

Can you advise an uncertain golfer which of the following grips is the most conducive to a rhythmic swing, the interlocking, the overlapping, or the plain grip; and whether good results can be obtained through the use of combinations of these, that is, the plain grip for full wooden club shots and the overlapping or interlocking for all iron club play and in putting?—A. E. Reinke.

Ans.—Each of the grips mentioned has been used successfully by good players, and it has been found possible for some players to obtain good rhythm with each. The interlocking grip, however, seems to have been successful only with players who have large hands and exceptionally strong fingers.

It is fundamental to a good grip that it should not cause a tightening of the muscles of the wrists. In this matter the interlocking grip seems to be at one extreme, with practically no tendency to cause tightening, and the plain grip with the shaft grasped in the palms of the hands and the thumbs encircling it at the other, with an almost irresistible tendency to cause tightening.

The overlapping grip, described in our first article on the driver, seems to be the happy solution of the difficulty, as it is free from the objections to the interlocking grip and at the same time creates practically just as little tendency to tightening the wrist muscles.

If a player palms the shafts of his wooden clubs, it would probably be advantageous for him to adopt the overlapping grip for his irons. The overlapping grip enables the player to "get the feel" of the club head better than the plain grip, and this is especially important for accuracy of control in using the irons.

It has just been admitted that a player who palms his club shaft may have a good swing and be a successful golfer, but it would seem that he is handicapping himself to a certain degree, and would probably find it advantageous to adopt the overlapping grip for woods as well as for irons.

* *

In a recent issue of a golfers' magazine, it is noticed from cuts of a prominent English player that for a low ball against the wind the hands are decidedly ahead of the ball in the address, resulting in the face of the club bending to the right of the line of play instead of toward the hole. If the ball is struck in this way it can only result in its flight to the right, unless it is hooked. Is this correct? How can a ball be kept low against the wind? F. MAYER.

Ans.—If the ball is hit with the club face in the position described, it must be hooked to keep it to the left. A slight forcing to the right in the address, however, is practically what occurs in what Evans calls the forward press in addressing the ball. This is a mannerism used by all experts to set the muscles. When the club actually hits the ball, the face is perhaps not in this position. If it is, there must be a hook to counteract the effect of the position of the club face.

The best method of driving a low ball against the wind is to tee low, swing flat, and cause the club to follow out lower than normally. The hands should be kept ahead of the club in order to keep the club face vertical at the moment of contact.

The shot is a difficult one and not very common in play. Danger arises especially in trying for as much distance as usual, and the player in attempting to acquire the shot is apt to develop the fault of letting the hands precede the club in ordinary shots.

* *

"Keep your eye on the ball," is the beginner's first lesson. What does this mean—the ball as a whole, a particular spot on the ball (top or back), or the ground directly back of the ball?

H. S. McCLELLAND.

Ans.—Too much stress is placed upon keeping the eye on the ball. Looking at the ball should be an incident of the swing. The eye and the attention should move with the rhythm of the swing. If they are too fast or too hardy for the general rhythm the shot is likely to be spoiled.

Topping is often ascribed to "eye off ball" when really the trouble is entirely different, and many a player who has topped a ball knows that he was staring hard at it during the whole process of the swing.

* *

I have been running up my approaches with my iron. I get fairly good results but don't improve. I have no success at all with short mashie shots. What shall I do?—A. E. G.

Ans.—You should by all means refuse to rest satisfied with fair runup approaches. You will get much better results with the mashie if you will master that club. No doubt this will take time and trouble, but lessons from a good instructor, followed by patient practice, will soon give you better results than can possibly be obtained regularly with so incalculable a shot as the runup approach; and you will also have before you the possibility of limitless improvement.

* *

What is the best size of grips?—F. J. Neil.

Ans.—There is and can be no absolute best for all players. As the shaft of the club should be held in the fingers, the proper size of grip for any individual player depends on the length of his fingers.

It may be noted for the benefit of those who have not given much attention to the subject that if a large grip is desired it should be obtained by extra listing, not by using an unduly large shaft, the effect of which would be to destroy the balance of the club by apparently reducing the weight of the head.

If It's a GIANT Truck Tire

It's a Firestone

Identify it by the grooves

Watch For The Big Grooved Truck Tires They Are Firestone Tires

WHERE you see Firestone Giant Tires you see heavy trucks in exacting service. Those powerful, grooved tires, broad and deep have shouldered the burdens of difficult trucking. For nearly three years they have been demonstrating mileage, traction and truck protection that previously had been considered impossible of attainment. The thick, wide, resilient tread has set up remarkable mileage records and lengthened the life of the truck. The flutes or grooves have afforded traction that held unfailingly on wet and icy pavements and in mud and sand. They also insure uniform wear.

Used first for heavy duty trucking, Firestone Giant Tires are now built in widths of 7, 8, 10, 12 and 14 inches. This supplies a Firestone Grooved Giant for the most trying work of medium weight trucks as well as for the extreme loads.

Notice today in the streets what the Firestone Giant Tires are doing. Then call up the Firestone Man and let him explain how they make your trucking more dependable, more economical. He has a Firestone Tire for every road, load and condition of service.

It ended in a knockout and a [illegible] around the track. The next was a three round bout between "Wee Willie [illegible]" and "Young" Goldberg, at [illegible] pounds. It was a hard fought affair and ended when the referee decided Goldberg had enough. A bantamweight [illegible] followed. In this "Yoo" Kelly and "Whirlwind" Wirr mixed things. It was a cross between a dancing party and a track meet.

Shoe Race Brings Roars.

Then the fun started, featured by a shoe race. All the footwear was numbered and put in a heap. After a hundred yard run in stocking feet over a [illegible] clay track, the soldiers dashed for their shoes. If the wrong one fell into their hands they were at liberty to throw it as far as they could. And they did. Finally Private Bickworth of Company H managed to get his two together and on his feet.

A pack mule race, in which the machine gun company furnished the talent, followed. This event required real skill. The mules had to be packed, driven about a hundred yards, repacked, and [illegible]. The mules did not choose to move in all cases and as a result the mule last packed won the race, for he was the first to wake up and run.

And Hand Went Home.

A regular mule race of a half mile kept the crowd in an uproar. After the mules got away half of them stopped on the first bank for some leaves. One which got past that stage trotted out of the gate on the far side and headed for home. The driver walked back. Private Lathrop of the supply company survived and won the race.

A last race in which the men had to ride a quarter at a break neck pace, dismount, and ride back furnished many thrills. Mishaps were frequent and serious accidents were narrowly averted. Private Crews of the headquarters company was the winner. Summaries:

The only thing that could separate the [illegible] twins, John and Charles, well known Chicago sportsmen, occurred when John passed away suddenly Friday [illegible] while on a fishing trip at Little [illegible] lake, Wisconsin. His only surviving relative is his brother Charles.

GIANTS HAND CARDS PAIR OF BEATINGS, FIRST IN 12 ROUNDS

New York, July 7.—New York made another substantial gain in the National league pennant race, defeating St. Louis twice, 4 to 3 and 4 to 1. The visitors played an uphill game in the first and tied the score in the ninth inning, only to have the Giants win in the twelfth, when Tesreau singled, took second on Burns' infield out, and scored on Herzog's single. Seven pitchers took part in this contest.

Doak, who lost the game for St. Louis, also suffered defeat in the second game, being bumped in the second inning. Schupp pitched a sensational game for the Giants, striking out twelve men. Home runs by Robertson and Burns were responsible for three of the four Giant runs in the second game. Scores:

CINCY SPLITS WITH BRAVES.

Boston, Mass., July 7.—Boston and Cincinnati divided today's double header. A double by Griffith in the ninth inning of the game, followed by Rawlings' error on what should have been the third out, gave the visitors the odd run and victory, 2 to 1. Rudolph held Cincinnati to six hits in the second game, gave no bases on balls, and was the big factor, along with Maranville's all around playing, in the 3 to 0 Boston win. Groh's fielding was remarkable in both games. Score:

COVEY HOLDS RED SOX TO THREE SAFE HITS AS INDIANS WIN, 3-1

Cleveland, July 7.—Cleveland defeated Boston, 3 to 1, by means of timely hitting. The contest was a pitchers' battle between Ruth and Coveleskie, with the latter carrying off the honors. He held Boston to three hits and would have registered a shutout but for an error of judgment. Only five Boston men reached first. Hits by O'Neill, Chapman, and Graney drove in the Cleveland runs. BANKER—"DRINKING HIMSELF TO DEATH"
Anxious Relatives and Friends Said He "Stopped Neighborhood Talk" by "Neal Way" HOME Method
A BANKER'S PRIVATE CONFESSION
Like thousands of other high class business, professional and laboring men are doing today, a prominent banker was "drinking too much." He knew it better than any one else. He tried again and again to quit, but his nervousness, caused by his diseased condition resulting from the poison "stored-up" in his system from previous indulgence, overcame all good resolutions and solemn pledges to self. He thought he was fooling friends, relatives and customers—but it was the usual "hallucination" of the man who lives in an "alcoholic haze." They all knew it—but hesitated to broach the subject to a man whom they recognized as their "superior" in all other respects. Noticing by the newspapers that Ex-Senator J. E. Bruce, a "Brother Banker," was at the head of 60 Neal Institutes in principal cities, and that he personally recommended the "Neal Way" AT HOME in ordinary cases—or at an Institution in any case—he wrote the Senator for confidential information. This resulted in his ordering and taking the "NEAL WAY" HOME REMEDIES—without leaving home or neglecting business. This was over six years ago. He has since caused several others to "do likewise" on his private recommendation. By permission Senator Bruce will furnish name of this party and others as private references, with full information to all who phone Oakland 439, or who call, write, wire or phone the head Neal Institute, 811 E. 49th Street, Chicago.

FORT DEARBORN TAKES PENNANT IN BANK LEAGUE

Fort Dearborn National bank team practically clinched the title in the Bankers' league by winning both games of a double header from the Continental and Commercial bank at Normal park, 6 to 0 and 7 to 6. In the first contest Smoke Sullivan held his opponents to two hits and fanned nine. The second game was a slugging affair with Overlock and Schultz doing the hurling. Preuss' home run in the sixth, scoring two men ahead of him, overcame a two run lead and gave Fort Dearborn victory. McKittrick's fielding featured both games.

Previous to the games County Commissioner Frank Ragen presented the Ragen trophy for the Chicago amateur championship to Fort Dearborn, 1916 winners. Scores:

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

Next Week Paige Prices Advance

On next Sunday—July 15th—the list price of every car in the Paige line will be very substantially increased.

In order to maintain the well-known standards of Paige quality, such a step is unavoidable. The market quotations of all raw materials, accessories and labor have steadily advanced—some commodities to the extent of 300 per cent.

Owing to the scarcity of materials, our production between now and July 15th will necessarily be limited. We have apportioned this production to Paige dealers throughout the country, and they will accept orders until their individual allotments are exhausted.

Woods and Waters

By LARRY ST. JOHN

IN PRAISE OF CATTIN'.

MR. HIGH BROW ANGLER, don't read this. It has nothing to do with what you call "the gentle art," but with the more plebian sport of "cattin'."

The catfish is not exactly what one would call a pretty fish, possessing neither the trimness of the mackerel nor the beautiful coloration of the brook trout, but he is one fine fish just the same, and to many of our citizens he is the acme of finned excellence.

What if they are not fine lookers? They are democratic and possess an amiable disposition—no matter how roughly you treat one, he always greets you with a grin on his homely mug that seems to say: "Why, hello, Bill, where you been keepin' yourself?" Truly he is the fish of the people, and that is honor enough for any fin wearer.

Some scientific anglers are inclined to look with contempt upon the efforts of the fisher of "cats," but that is due to plumb ignorance. Whenever we hear a fisherman pooh-pooh the catfish we are tempted to ask him where he was "fetched up" and why.

On the other hand, your true catter isn't quite sure of the sanity of the man who pays $35 for a fly rod to use in catching brook trout that average about eight inches in length, so that makes it about fifty-fifty. The spirit and singleness of purpose of your confirmed catter is shown in the story of the southern darky who was fishing for cats and caught a five pound black bass. Taking it off the hook with a disgusted look on his face he threw it back into the water with the remark: "When ah goes cattin', ah goes cattin'!"

* *

The catfish family consists of a number of species quite generally distributed throughout the United States, and some are of considerable importance commercially, always finding a ready sale in the markets. We once heard a lady say that she would just as soon eat a snake as a catfish, but she was judging by appearances. All the catfishes are good to eat—we would place the channel, or speckled catfish, among the ten best food fishes, but that, of course, is a matter of personal taste.

The best known variety of the catfish family is the horned pout or common bullhead. It is found in nearly all parts of the United States east of the Rockies, and is a prime favorite of small boys, and some not so small. Like other members of the catfish family it has sharp spines on the pectoral fins, just back of the head, which make such ugly wounds that it is generally believed that these spines are poisonous. The bullhead is known to have reached four pounds in weight, but one of that size is very rare. The little yellow catfish, called "bead eye" in some parts of the country, is often confused with the bullhead.

Another famed species is the Mississippi or blue catfish, which has been taken up to 100 pounds in weight. This variety, the Great Lakes catfish and the channel cat, make up the principal commercial varieties.

* *

Professional catters mostly use set lines or trot lines, the difference being that a set line is baited, usually in the evening, and "run" in the morning, while a trot line is patrolled continually by the fisherman. All the catfishes are "night owls," and catting on the bank of a stream with a crackling campfire nearby is a homely but enjoyable pastime, indulged in by rich man and poor man alike. While fishing for catfish and bullheads is usually practiced at night, they are often caught in the daytime, especially after a heavy rain.

The tackle for catfish should be strong because you don't want to fool yourself about their ability to fight. The pole, if one is used, should be stout, and can be either a "boughten" one of cane or wood, or home made. Braided linen line does not kink like the twisted lines of cotton or linen. Hooks should be of good quality, size depending on the average weight of the fish usually caught in the locality you happen to be fishing. Hollow point or hand forged hooks are none too good where the fish run big. A sinker and bob complete the outfit. Sometimes a throw line is used.

As to bait, use what the residents and old hands use. Worms are as good as anything for bullheads and small cats. For the "big fellers" use liver or fresh beef. In some localities chicken liver, pieces of eel flesh, and black sunfish are favorite, the rule being to use big baits for big fish. The speckled catfish prefers live minnows.

three colleges, is not, except with a few individuals, the reason why intercollegiate games are to be discontinued while war continues.

Here Is Real Reason.

I first got it from a Harvard football coach. He frankly said he would not feel like coaching if war continued. Then Dean Howard McClenahan, Princeton, said to me: "I would not want to see a Princeton-Yale game knowing all the while that the boys who should be playing were 'over there.'"

In June I was at Princeton. At last—and it was the first time I ever had to do it in a college crowd—I got them on the subject of intercollegiate sport. A fine, big fellow, who had been playing his own accompaniments on a ukulele, caught the drift of it, stopped, leaned forward, and said:

"There won't be football here this fall. The fellows won't play. They couldn't get their minds on it. Imagine lining up against the Elis with (and he rolled off the list of varsity players who had enlisted) 'over there.' I'd be ashamed to play. It would be bad taste, to say the least."

Refuse Even Red Cross.

"Bad taste," that was it. And "bad taste" it is believed to be. It was such "bad taste" in the minds of the athletic leaders of these three colleges that when I tried, at the outbreak of war, to get them to play their big games this fall for the Red Cross they were not interested in the plan.

As one of them summed it up, "We certainly would not feel like binding ourselves to play intercollegiate games perhaps on the very day on which the death at the front of men who would ordinarily be playing on the team had been announced, particularly when the team might be made up of some men who ought themselves to be under fire."

Another Side to Question.

While there can be nothing but admiration and praise for this spirit, there is yet another and an opposite view. What I have found at Harvard, Princeton, and Yale and set down above is impressive, but the other side of the question strikes one with a true ring when the story is told by one whose motives cannot be questioned, whose patriotism is beyond reproach. His sons are at Fort Niagara and he is glad of that, for his heart is with them and the cause they represent.

The father is a man who has made of athletics and physical training a life work. He is somewhat than Dr. Ellery C. Huntington of Colgate, father of one of the greatest quarter backs of all football, a boy who quietly laid aside a splendid salary as coach of his own college team to enter the R. O. T. C.

PLAY FRESHMAN!

"Football" Wants Yearlings to Take Place of Veterans Gone to War.

CHICAGO, July 7.—[To the Editor.]—As many conference college football teams have been devastated on account of the war, why not permit freshmen to play football this year and participate in all branches of athletics while the war lasts?

Minnesota has lost practically all its star team and Coach Williams will be compelled to build an entirely new team. Dartmouth college has decided to permit freshmen to play and President Wilson has taken a decided stand for athletics to continue. No doubt about all the proceeds from football games this fall will go to the Red Cross anyway.

These freshmen who will enter college and who are too young to go to war would have an opportunity to do their bit by playing games, the proceeds of which would go to defend their flag. The faculty committee of the conference could not do a more patriotic thing than to meet and revoke the freshman rule, thereby helping in this great struggle. FOOTBALL FAN.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. Metcalfe

WHETHER to draw two trumps for one is one of the regular problems in auction. The deal which follows is a fine example of winning a game by drawing two trumps for none.

THE HANDS.

THE PLAY.

[illegible]

It was very easy for the declarer to secure ten tricks, but the seventh and vital one seemed impossible. At trick four west trumped a club to feel out the situation.

After the seventh trick north could be counted for the knave and ten of hearts, the knave of clubs, and three spades, one of which was the queen. Without the latter card the original no-trump bid would have been impossible.

By his clever trump play at trick eight the declarer forced north to a ruinous discard, and repeated the process at trick eleven. It was impossible for north to make one of the last six tricks, as dummy discarded behind him.

* *

The next deal shows how rubbers are lost through failure to perceive a situation:

H—A, Q, 9, 6.
C—6.
D—10, 7, 5, 4.

[illegible]

Score, 0—0. West dealt, and bid 1 no trump, north doubled, south bid 2 clubs, west 2 no trumps, and the bidding closed. North had the original lead.

THE PLAY.

[illegible]

The second lead of spades was not desirable, but north was in a bad situation.

The diamond lead at trick four would have worked out all right had north found his partner with two honors, or even one honor and the nine. West kept plugging away to establish something in dummy.

At trick eight north had a splendid chance to save game and perhaps defeat the contract, by throwing dummy in the lead with the [illegible] of spades. This play would have given north certainly one and possibly two tricks in the heart suit.

But north kept on with clubs because it was his partner's suit, ignoring the discard of south at trick three, and utterly failing to realize that west must be very strong in clubs when he went to two no-trump with nothing in hearts.

THE real estate market during the last week presented several curious phases. Although many purchasers are timid, owing to the uncertainty of general conditions, the week started in with apparent activity, and showed a good volume of business at the close.

Most of the transactions, however, were of a minor type. This showing was the more unusual, as the period of midsummer dullness would now be setting in during normal times. Even a national holiday did not appear to have the customary depressing influence.

What the future will bring forth for real estate men is a matter for speculation. Some take a doubtful view of the prospects, others see much encouragement in a showing like that of the last week.

Prosperity for Workers.

That an unusual amount of money is being distributed among the working classes is generally admitted, and it is known that the wage earners are to enjoy prosperity to an unusual degree for a considerable period. Will they buy homes with their surplus earnings, or will the increased expense that all must bear, and the general feeling of uncertainty, cause them to hold off? There appears to be a division of opinion as to the outcome, but upon the correct answer hangs much that is of vital importance to the real estate fraternity.

As a whole, the market may be classified as "spotty." There is activity in some quarters and lethargy in others. [illegible] many buyers who ordinarily might be expected to purchase heavily are showing caution. The investment element appears to have adopted the policy of "watchful waiting." Lot sales in subdivisions have been slow, and sales of acres have been few. The effect is being felt by those who deal in these properties.

Out of Town Buyers.

On the other hand, the undoubted strength of Chicago real estate has attracted the attention of a number of out of town buyers, who keep putting in their appearance. Their attention, however, appears to be devoted mostly to apartment properties, which look attractive to those who are familiar with conditions elsewhere. The absolute stagnation which prevails in many other cities has not affected Chicago beyond the tendency to hold off in some quarters. While the market cannot be called generally good, there is activity in some lines enough to make it look attractive to outsiders, who see nothing but a hopeless outlook in other quarters.

Industrial activities and apartment properties monopolized most of the interest during the last week and there were some sales of acreage of more than ordinary interest.

The building figures for the week show the smallest number of permits, with the smallest cost for any period during the last year. The high cost of building material, the unusual expense for labor, and the uncertainty of business conditions are blamed for the unusually poor showing.

Sheridan and Argyle Deal.

The fee to the property at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Argyle street, 115x141 feet, improved with a three story mercantile building, has been purchased by Benjamin F. Horton from Peter J. Schaefer as an investment. The consideration was $162,000, subject to an incumbrance of $60,000. The corner is under lease to C. H. Kusel and P. A. Morris for [illegible] years. The average rent for the term is $6,177, or 5 per cent on $117,500. F. Thomas Morris was the broker.

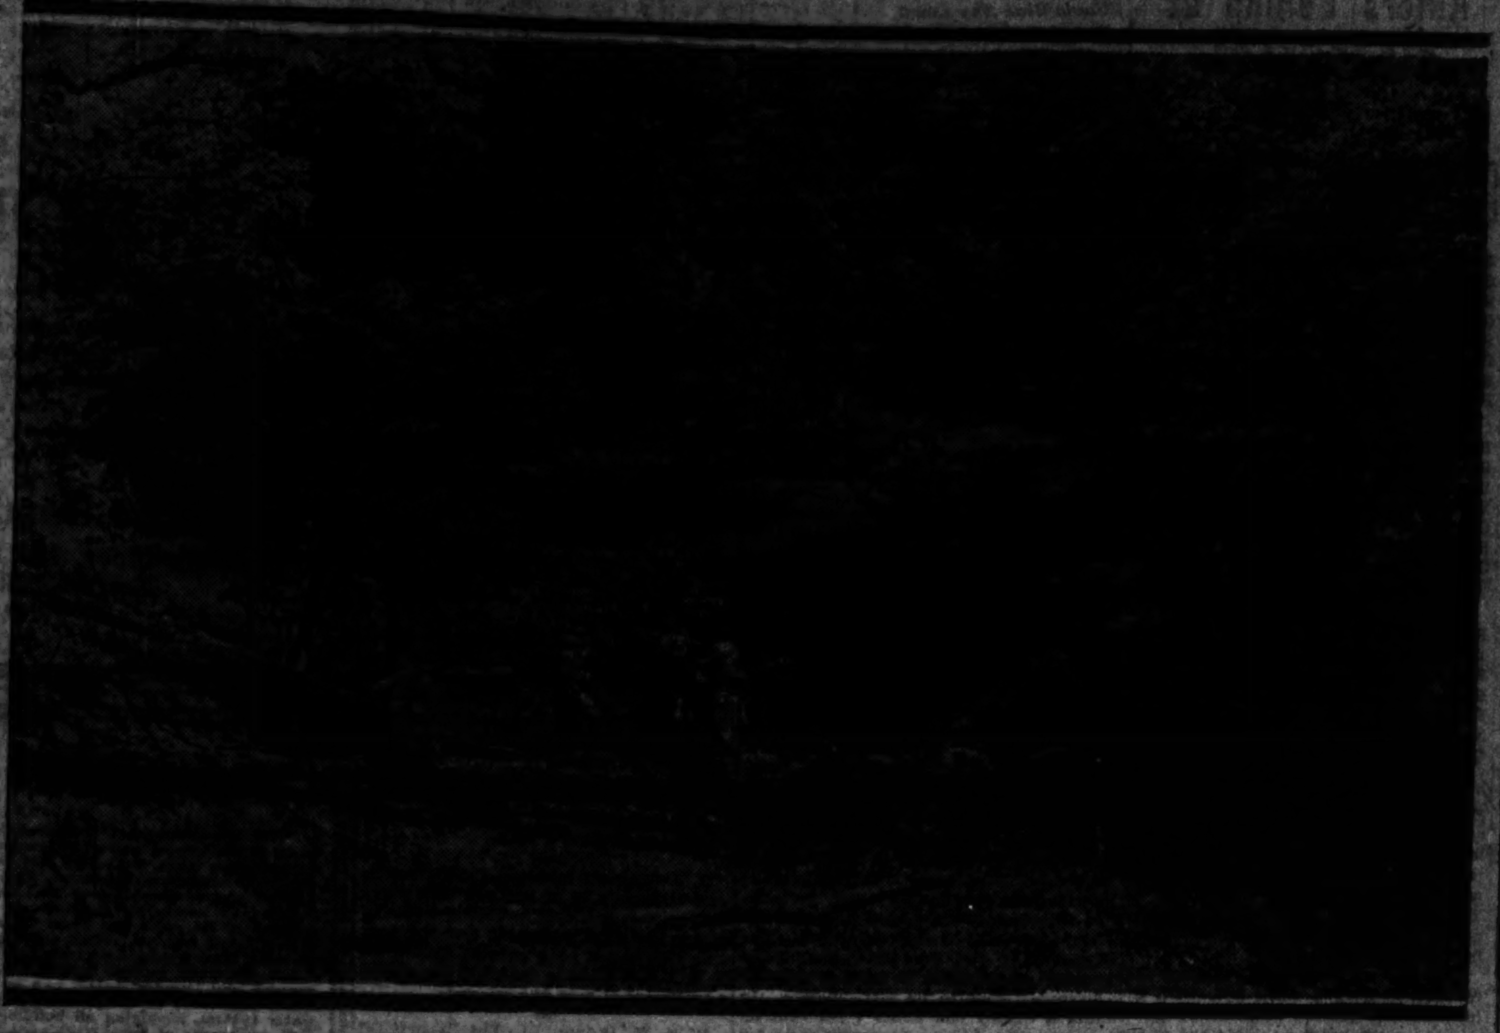
S. Sipinska of Milwaukee has bought the thirty-eight apartment building at [illegible] Sunnyside avenue from William H. Hess, builder, for $160,000, subject to an incumbrance of $85,000. Mr. Sipinska gave other apartment properties in part payment. C. B. Lublow of C. F. Curran Jr.'s office represented Mr. Hess and Charles Nowinski acted for Mr. Sipinska.

Realty Men Think War Tax Law Exempts Them

Real estate men are pleased over the outlook regarding the war tax bill now pending in congress. As the bill stands at present it grants exemption to those in a profession the profits of which depend mainly on the personal qualifications of individuals. This is taken to mean that real estate men, lawyers, ministers, insurance men, and others will be exempt. A committee of the Chicago real estate board has been working on the matter, and it has also been taken up with the national real estate board. Unless unexpected changes are made real estate men believe they will be granted exemption.

FOREST PRESERVE

County Improvement Plans Stimulate Values of Adjoining Acreage.



COUNTY FOREST PRESERVE PLAN PROVES PROFIT

Natural Parks Stimulate Values of Adjacent Acreage.

BY PETER REINBERG.

[President Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners of Cook County.]

Real estate men have begun to look on the forest preserve as a good thing. When the purchases for these public parks began nearsighted prophets predicted they would be nuisances. They would attract noisy crowds that would disturb the serenity of the locality and make adjacent property less valuable, was the burden of their lamentations.

The first forest tracts were purchased in Palatine last September. Since then lands in the neighborhood have advanced $15 to $25 an acre. The mere fact that the forest preserve board had bought the tracts called attention to the district and its natural beauties and desirable park features. The county's ownership insured improvements, and improvements help adjacent territory. The district was advertised and put on the map. The result has been that inquiries for lands in Palatine have increased and owners are holding their prices higher.

Other Districts Prosper.

The same thing has occurred in other districts along the Des Plaines river and the subdivider has discovered a drawing card in the forest preserve. Shortly after the board of forest preserve commissioners purchased Northwestern park at Des Plaines a live real estate man laid out a subdivision and called it Forest Preserve subdivision. A public park and playground for the children at the doors of purchasers was guaranteed.

No factories or shacks will ever be built on county owned land. No nuisances or unsightly buildings will be permitted. No liquors will be sold on the grounds or boisterous gatherings permitted. The legislature authorized the board to police the district, which gives assurance order will be preserved. The natural beauty and scenery of the property will be preserved. Wild flower and animal life will be protected and encouraged. Public roads and urban transportation will follow public ownership. The man who wishes a home with natural woods and scenery for his children to play in will try to get near a forest preserve.

Deer Grove Park.

The board of forest preserve commissioners made their first purchase in the Deer Grove Park district, known as Forest preserve No. 1, in September last year—about 500 acres. This area has been increased to nearly 1,000 acres and was recently dedicated to public uses. The preserve already has become a popular picnic ground for church and social organizations. An artificial lake has been created, which adds to the natural beauties of this picturesque locality.

Next week an outing camp for the poor children of Chicago will be established by the board under the direction of the president of the board and the superintendent of social service. In a week or two 100 Boy Scouts will camp on the grounds.

This is only one of the many public playgrounds that are, or soon will be, opened to the public. Since the first of the year the board has purchased more than 5,000 acres of forest lands and is engaged in the preliminary work of acquiring other desirable properties.

20,000 Acres in View.

Approximately 20,000 acres of wooded grounds have been recommended by the plan committee for purchase. These lands comprise thirteen forest preserve districts, and extend from the county line at Palatine on the north to Chicago Heights on the south county line.

The following acreage and the amounts paid show the lands acquired and paid for in the various districts to date:

	Preserve acres.	Amount.
District No. 1	[illegible]	$107,842.[illegible]
District No. 2	[illegible]	[illegible]
District No. 3	232	237,[illegible]
District No. 4	[illegible]	[illegible]
District No. 5	13	10,912.50
District No. 6	330	173,176.50
District No. 7	198	117,351.51
District No. 11	380	108,634.38
District No. 13	118	94,[illegible].55
Totals	[illegible]	$[illegible].15

The method of procuring forest lands is along modern business lines. The plan committee inspects the grounds and recommends purchases. Valuators follow these recommendations and place their estimates on the values of the properties. Then the real estate agent opens negotiations directly with the owners, where they can be reached, or their agents if nonresidents. In this way most of the purchases have been made. Some land has been acquired by condemnation, but the direct purchase has proved the more satisfactory method.

Many Advantages.

Aside from the public playground feature of the new park system it has amazingly increased public interest in wild animal life and the preservation of the natural flora of the preserves. Stimulated by the policy of the forest preserve board to retain the natural wild conditions of the forests, nature lovers throughout the county have begun the study of birds and animals and plant life.

Prof. Edward J. Tobin, superintendent of county schools, is teaching nature study one hour a week in the district schools and will add another hour to these studies when the schools open in September. All the graded schools in the larger cities, including Chicago, have taken up the study.

The Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls are making their camps in the forest preserves and have taken up enthusiastically the conservation question. The same spirit prevails in the country districts, where the citizens are voluntarily assuming the duties of caretakers and are preventing the destruction of trees, plant or animal life. The people are taking pride in the forest preserves of their localities and assisting the board in preserving them in their natural state.

BAR NEWSPAPERS OPPOSING WAR FROM U. S. MAILS

Washington, D. C., July 7.—The mails have been barred to numerous publications for opposition to the war since the espionage act was approved June 15, it was learned today. The latest stop order was issued yesterday against the Appeal to Reason, Socialist weekly, of Girard, Kas.

Among other publications, one or more issues of which have been barred by the postoffice department, are Tom Watson's Jeffersonian, Georgia; the Four Lights, organ of the Woman's Peace party of New York; the American Socialist, Chicago; the Blast, Alexander Berkman's anarchist periodical, and Mother Earth, Emma Goldman's monthly.

Almost daily since June 15, according to an official of the department today, some anti-war, Socialist, or pacifist publication has been barred for alleged "treasonable" statements.

The penalties in the espionage act have not been invoked in any case, but it is reported that Postmaster General Burleson, Solicitor Lamar, and Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder have decided upon more stringent action in the future. The maximum penalty is $10,000 fine or twenty years' imprisonment, or both.

E. A. CUDAHY BUYS RESIDENCE SITES NORTH OF PARK

Two residence sites have been bought by Edward A. Cudahy in the exclusive residence district north of Lincoln park. A lot 70x140 feet on Wellington avenue, 169 feet east of Sheridan road, north front, was bought from Mrs. Montgomery Ward. Edward Rosing represented Mrs. Ward. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. acted for Mr. Cudahy.

The other purchase was a lot 50x140 feet, south front, on Oakdale avenue, 169 feet east of Sheridan road. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. were the brokers. It is said that the price for both lots was about $500 a foot. It is understood that Mr. Cudahy will give this lot to a daughter and that he will occupy the other himself.

It is interesting to note that despite the high cost of building materials there are now in course of construction in this district six houses ranging in cost from $30,000 to $250,000.

Wrightwood Avenue Apartment House Sold

The Elmhurst apartment building at 1921 to 1927 Wrightwood avenue has been sold by George J. Williams to Benjamin F. Bush for $97,500, subject to an incumbrance of $27,500. The rentals are $12,500. The building contains twenty-four flats and stands on a lot 100x130 feet. Mr. Williams was represented by E. A. Marshall and Mr. Bush by Le Roy C. Towle & Co.

Mr. Bush gave a lot 172.5x200 feet at the southwest corner of Lake Shore drive and Stockham place, Evanston, clear, valued at $40,000, and forty acres at Highland Park valued at $15,000, as well as $5,000 cash.

Mr. Marshall also represented both parties in the exchange of forty acres between Windsor and Leland avenues, Sixtieth and Sixty-fourth streets, which was transferred by William E. Deane to Lincoln S. Henfield in exchange for a 3,000 acre cattle ranch in Logan county, Kansas, fully stocked. Both properties are clear and each is valued in the transaction at $80,000.

Transfers Point to New Apartment Building

The construction of a high class apartment building at the northwest corner of Scott and Stone streets is believed to be indicated in a number of transfers that have just been recorded. The Chicago Title and Trust company has taken title for parties whose identity has not bee disclosed. William M. Le Moyne transferred the corner, 35x86 feet, together with 72x86 feet in Scott street, fifty-eight feet west of Stone. It is believed the consideration was in the vicinity of $120,000. A lot 23x86 feet, between these properties was conveyed by the estate of Alphonse Moe for $15,000.

Joseph P. Griffin Buys Sheridan Road Residence

Joseph P. Griffin, president of the Chicago board of trade, has bought the high grade residence at 7324 Sheridan road, on a lot 50x150 feet, from John W. Snyder, the builder. The sale was negotiated by Victor J. Curto of W. K. Young & Bro. It is said the price was about $20,000. The house stands on a high terrace. It is of red pressed brick and contains ten rooms, with a sun porch, two sleeping porches, and three bathrooms.

C. G. Mollan Buys Tract Along the Grand Trunk

A tract of a little more than sixteen acres adjoining the right of way of the Grand Trunk railway on the south and lying between Fiftieth street, Rockwell street, and California avenue, has been bought by Charles G. Mollan from the Chicago Title and Trust company through W. D. Kerfoot & Co. It is reported that the price was about $3,000 an acre. Mr. Mollan has not told his plans for developing the property, which is well located for manufacturing purposes.

Aero Club Makes Two Purchases at Ashburn

Two purchases of land in the Ashburn aviation field have just been concluded in the interests of the Aero Club of Illinois. A tract of sixty-eight acres on South Cicero avenue, 1,320 feet north of West Eighty-seventh street, west front, 1,495x2,123 feet, has been bought by the Aero club from Franklin C. Platt.

Charles Dickinson, president of the club, has bought 125 acres at the southeast corner of Seventy-ninth street and Cicero avenue from Frederick H. Bartlett and the Stevens estate at $250 an acre. This land has been used by the Aero club and the United States government fliers.

The club is using a total of 535 acres. Of this 253 acres are leased from Ogden Sheldon, 193 acres are leased from Hermann Uihlein, 125 acres are owned by Charles Dickinson, and 68 acres are owned by the Aero club. Efforts to keep the United States aviation school at Ashburn have not been abandoned.

WAR INFLUENCE UPON INDUSTRY RAISES VALUES

Expansion of Manufacturing Lines Stimulus to Real Estate.

The industrial situation furnishes one of the brightest outlooks in the present real estate situation. In several manufacturing lines expansion has become necessary and considerable building is planned.

Industrial expansion is going on steadily and rapidly. The demand for munitions and other supplies, both for the United States and its allies, is giving a strong impetus along many lines. There are some who consider that the effect of this stimulation will not last, but the amount involved is so enormous that it is certain to affect the industrial situation profoundly.

$[illegible] to Be Spent.

In a recent talk at the City club Prof. Moulton of the University of Chicago pointed out that the $[illegible] which Secretary McAdoo has said will be spent in the United States by the allied powers during the coming year amounts to almost $[illegible] for every minute from the date of the birth of Christ to the present day. The illustration was used to give his hearers an idea of the enormous size of the amount involved.

It is known that heavy buying has been going on for a large industrial enterprise, the nature of which has not been disclosed, but its extent, when told, is likely to prove surprising.

$800,000 Building.

Work is soon to be begun on a $[illegible] building that is to be put up by the W. F. Hall Printing company as an addition to the company's present plant. When this building is finished the company will occupy the entire block bounded by Chicago avenue, Townsend, Kingsbury, and Superior streets. The building will be seven stories, of heavy mill construction. The exterior walls will be of brick and Bedford stone. The new building will be connected with the old above the first story. A sprinkler system will be installed on every floor. Glaver & Dinkelberg are the architects.

During the last year the Hall company put out 15,200,000 magazines, [illegible] periodicals, [illegible] catalogues, [illegible] supplementary catalogues, and job work requiring [illegible] pounds of white paper.

The plant of the [illegible] Chair and Paper company in the [illegible] district has been bought by the [illegible] Engineering company. The [illegible] company's plant near Harvey was recently destroyed by fire. The property just purchased occupies about 30,000 square feet. It is served by a switch track from the Belt railway. The negotiations were handled by Louis E. Beardslee.

Leases and Loans.

A LOAN of $[illegible] at [illegible] per cent has been obtained by the [illegible] company on the [illegible] property at the southwest corner of [illegible] and Clark streets. The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee. The loan is to be repaid by a series of notes, the last of which matures [illegible].

[illegible]

Robert S. [illegible] has obtained a loan of $110,000 for two years at 5½ per cent, secured by the property in Clinton street, [illegible] feet south of Madison, east front, [illegible].

[illegible]

Burt T. [illegible] of [illegible], Ky., has leased from Lewis M. [illegible] and his wife, Mrs. Mary Pettibone Smith, the property at [illegible] for ninety-nine years. [illegible] Willoughby & Co. [illegible] E. Allen Frost of Clay [illegible], Healy & Frost, for the lessee, and Earl F. Tilley for the lessor. [illegible]

The Metal Block and Ingot company has leased its plant at 2218 [illegible] avenue to the [illegible] company for a term at a rental of $2,[illegible] per year. The property is improved with a one story concrete building and is served by a switch track from the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. The negotiations were handled by Louis E. Beardslee. The Metal Block and Ingot company recently bought a location in the [illegible] district, where it has completed a new building.

Dr. C. H. White has leased the second store in two buildings at 7 to 21 West Randolph street from F. S. [illegible] of New York City for [illegible]. The lease was negotiated by [illegible] Koebler & Co. The term is ten years and the rental is $28,000. The floor area is approximately 2,200 square feet.

REALTY BROKERS FEAR A PROBLEM IN SECRET LIEN

Radical Changes Made in the Criminal Code by New Law.

Lawyers and real estate brokers are perturbed over the provisions of an act passed by the last legislature, which permit the creation of a secret lien upon real estate. The trouble arises from the radical changes made in certain sections of the criminal code by an act of the legislature (house bill No. [illegible]) which became effective July 1.

Under this law, a recognizance in a criminal case, in whatever county in the state or before whatever court or justice of the peace the same may be taken, is made a lien upon all of the property scheduled by the bail, from the time the recognizance is approved.

The new act provides that a duplicate of the recognizance and schedule, where real estate is scheduled, shall in certain specified cases be [illegible] to the recorder of the proper county, and makes it the duty of the recorder to keep complete records thereof, but the act does not provide that the lien of the recognizance on the property scheduled shall be lost or affected, even if the court or justice taking the recognizance fails to send such duplicate to the proper recorder, or the recorder fails to record the same.

The situation presents a serious problem. It is of course possible for an abstract company to search for recognizances and schedules taken by courts of record located in the county where the abstractor's plant is situated or filed for record with the recorder of such county, but it is not feasible for any abstract company to keep an employe in the office of every clerk of every court of record, justice of the peace, police magistrate, [illegible], or other officer authorized by law to take bail in criminal cases in the state of Illinois.

Torrens titles are likewise affected, because the amendatory act does not provide that the recognizance and schedule must be filed with the registrar before a lien is created on the registered title, and it has recently been held in the Circuit court by two different judges [illegible] that liens created under the [illegible], subsequent to the enactment of the Torrens act, create charges upon Torrens titles, although no notice of the lien is filed with the registrar.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is studying the situation carefully and hopes by making special investigations to work out a solution of the difficulty through its guaranty department.

Bulls succeeded in regaining control of the corn market yesterday and sharp price advances were recorded. The market was firm from the outset under good commission house buying, and gained strength as the day wore on. Resting spots showed September corn 1½@1¾c higher, while new crop months were up 3½@3¾. Principal trading was in the December. Logan & Bryan, Wagner, Ware & Leland, Clement-Curtis, Bartlett, Frazier, and Bennett were all active on the buying side. Many of the longs who recently sold out their corn reinstated lines yesterday and shorts were also busy covering. Weather conditions were not altogether favorable. The nights are too cool over the central states, while reports of corn being damaged by hot, dry weather came from Texas and Oklahoma.

The strength in the cash market was also a factor. Cash corn was 1@2½c higher and sold to new high point of $1.86, the white being relatively strongest. Local shipping sales were 15,000 bu. Some corn was resold by Baltimore, while seaboard advices hinted at some drastic export embargo orders next week. Primary receipts totaled 825,000 bu, against 651,000 bu a year ago.

Oats at Higher Level.

Oats were stronger, closing fractionally better for the July and ⅝c higher for deferred months. Principal feature of the trade was the buying of over 1,000,000 bushels oats by Mincer, generally believed to be in the way of covering shorts. There was also covering by numerous of the smaller shorts and some buying against indemnities. The July-September spread narrowed, as trade in the former was light. Crop news continued good and oats are now being cut downstate, with large yields indicated. The Ohio report places the condition of oats in that state at 108, compared with 86 a year ago.

Cash oats ruled steady, with local shipping sales reported at 115,000 bu. Clearances from the seaboard were 900,000 bu. Some export demand for oats was claimed at the seaboard, but no sales were reported. Neutral government buying is expected to be seriously restricted for some time. Primary receipts for the day were 723,000 bu, compared with 526,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts this week were 2,160,000 bu and shipments 1,474,000 bu.

Wheat Market Unsettled.

Wheat trade was quiet and the market unsettled. July closed 5c lower, while September showed a 2c advance. The cash market also continued dull and little or no new wheat is being offered by the country. Trade still awaits passage of food legislation by congress. Rain is forecasted for sections of the northwest that have been complaining of dry weather. Winter wheat harvest work is making good progress. Cutting has commenced in Illinois. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 494,000 bu, against 1,105,000 bu a year ago. Local shipping sales were 5,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 293,000 bu, against 665,000 bu a year ago.

Provisions showed early firmness on scattered buying, but reacted later under commission house selling and closed moderately lower. There was a decline in hog prices at the yards and cash trade was reported as quiet. Receipts of hogs at western markets for the week were 385,700 head, compared with 502,600 last week and 427,300 a year ago.

Firm Market for Rye.

Rye was firm, with cash No. 2 quoted $2.42@2.43 nominal. Receipts, none.

Barley ruled 1@3c higher. Malting was quoted $1.20@1.45 and sold $1.32@1.38; feed and mixing quotable $1.15@1.25, with sales at $1.20@1.25; screenings were quoted 80c@$1.00 and sold 90@98c. Receipts, 17 cars.

Timothy seed was dull. September closed $3.90 bid and $3.75 asked. Cash quotable $4.00@6.00 nominal. Clover seed was easy. Cash quoted $12.00@17.00 and spot prime $18.30 nominal.

Flax closed 4c higher. Cash quoted $2.68@2.73; Duluth was 4@6c, Minneapolis 4c, and Winnipeg 2½@4½c higher respectively.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

The cash demand for corn showed no abatement yesterday and prices for corn in the sample market rallied sharply with no corn pressing for sale. The top price for the day was $1.86. The fancy premiums prevailing have not served to bring out much more liberal offerings, while the demand is active. Seaboard advices were conflicting, but apparently there is a demand for all the corn available. Cash sales were 15,000 bu corn and 115,000 bu oats. Corn prices were quoted 1@2c up and oats were steady. Offerings of oats were not heavy and export bids were the highest relatively of any time so far.

Trade in cash wheat is still of narrow proportions, and it is not likely dealers will do much until it is known what the Washington authorities will do under the provisions of the food control bill. Harvesting is now progressing rapidly and has started in the southern portions of Illinois. Farmers, however, will be unable to sell for some time, as there is practically no market at the present time. Fair sales to arrive doubtless would be in evidence under ordinary conditions, but there would be no possibility of hedging much wheat in the future markets under present conditions at anywhere near present prices. The export trade is compelled to wait developments as well as people in this country.

The sentiment in corn was more bullish again yesterday. It is expected the government report on Monday will show a big acreage with a much larger crop than last year indicated, but with the crop late and the big premiums for old corn, the offerings of corn from the farms are expected to be light. Interest in December and May is increasing and those months were higher relatively yesterday than the September. Longs in September have sold out their lines in many cases and have replaced them in the December. There were indications that some of the cash interests also were buying the December. May was advanced more than any other month yesterday.

The Chicago and Northwestern railway crop report for the week said: "During the last week all crops, small grain and corn, have made satisfactory progress, and, at this date, barley and oats are headed out, early wheat is just approaching the heading stage, and rye will be in readiness for harvest within ten days or two weeks. Corn is two weeks late in growth, other conditions good. Early harvest of rye will begin in ten days or two weeks; barley in three weeks; oats in four week, and wheat in four or five weeks. This is ten days later than the average, but conditions in our territory at this date are above the average."

Some provisions men look for a much wider discount for lard as compared to the ribs. The meat demand is fairly active, and is said to be improving, while there is a flat call for the lard. The weakness in lard is due to liberal stocks with moderate export buying. Strict supervision of exports to neutral countries is having considerable effect, and it is not likely much lard will be permitted to reach Germany. Moreover, England bought big stocks of lard some time ago and now has a big supply, indicating moderate buying for some time to come.

Oats clearances continue liberal, 900,000 bu being exported for the day. It is understood there is still a lot of oats sold to the allies that have not been shipped. With clearances at the present rate supplies of old oats will be cut down materially by the end of this month, and not much of a run of new oats is expected by receivers generally before August.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 25 cars; corn, 77 cars; oats, 77 cars; barley, 17 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 40,000 head, and for all next week, 130,000 head.

Local showers were reported in parts of Kansas yesterday. Generally there was little rain in the southwest and not much elsewhere, with temperatures more seasonable.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 30,000 bu for one day.

Hog receipts of 12,000 head at Chicago yesterday met with a sluggish demand and cleared late at lower prices. Opening trades were at a decline of 5c, with tops at $16.00. Late transactions were mostly 10c lower than Friday's level. The bulk made $14.90@15.75. Pigs were generally steady, with good killers selling at $13.75@14.25.

Final prices made matured hogs 35@65c higher than a week ago, with the intermediate grades of mixed packing and butchers showing the big end of the advance. Pigs were 25@40c higher than a week ago. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $15.30, compared with $15.15 last week. Receipts this week aggregated around 102,000 head and were about 20,000 short of the previous week's arrivals. Shipments fell off 1,500 head and totaled 10,200.

CATTLE.

Best beeves finished the week at an advance of 10@15c, with top of $13.90, equaling the previous record mark. Less desirable offerings were practicaly unchanged, as compared with a week ago. Receipts this week show a big decrease, which was to be expected with a mid-week holiday. The demand also was shortened and little aggressiveness was shown among buyers, excepting when choice beeves were concerned. Cows and heifers finished the week 10@50c lower than a week ago, with the mediocre, light weight cows showing the big end of the decline. Calves suffered a loss of 50@75c.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 127,000, against 198,000 the preceding week, 112,000 a year ago, and 118,000 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 4,479,000, against 3,732,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Lambs suffered a loss of $1.00@1.25 this week, while matured sheep and yearlings came in for a reduction of 25@30c. Receipts for the week were barely half the arrivals of the previous week, but agitation against consumption of high priced mutton was reflected in a greatly curtailed demand, and even meager receipts were slow to clear. The market closed in a healthy condition, but at the low price level of the week, with prime native lambs quoted at $16.25 and fat ewes at $9.00.

Illinois Blue Sky Law.

One of the "blue sky" bills introduced in the Illinois legislature last winter was passed at the last minute when most of its friends thought it had failed, and has been signed by the governor. This law, if efficiently enforced, will enable investors to get authentic information about promotion stocks they are asked to buy.

The administration of the act is placed in the hands of the secretary of state. Sellers of a promotion stock must have licenses from him and these permits can be revoked. The law requires further that a statement of the condition of each company issuing stock or bonds be filed with the secretary of state. This would meet about all the needs of the situation were it not for the fact that the statements may be a year old when filed and therefore far out of date when made the basis for selling stocks. A statement a year old is, however, much better than none.

Securities that are listed on recognized exchanges, those described in corporation manuals, and some other classes are exempted from the operation of the law because there is already authentic information available.

The law does not take effect till Jan. 1, 1918, but if in the meantime investors will demand complete and recent statements of the condition of companies in which they are asked to invest they can get some of its benefits in advance.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.

R. M., Davenport, Ia.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul company has spent great amounts of money in extensions and betterments in the last few years, and this outlay is not yet producing so large earnings as it may do later. In the meantime the road has been affected severely by increased costs. The decision of the interstate commission against an advance in rates is a great disappointment to its stockholders. In 1916 it earned just under 7 per cent on common stock. The operating ratio for the year was 67%. Since Jan. 1 the higher cost of labor and supplies has increased the operating ratio to 84½ and gross earnings have remained about stationary. The result is a severe decline in net, endangering the 5 per cent dividend on common stock. The outlook for the immediate future is not bright.

Tobacco Products.

W. L. W., Grayville, Ill.—The Tobacco Products corporation is a holding company controlling various subsidiaries which manufacture cigarets and smoking tobacco. Its business has been increasing rapidly. In 1916 it earned 8.48 per cent on its $16,000,000 of common stock, compared with 2.6 per cent in 1915, and is doing better now. The company was formed in 1912 with $7,000,000 of preferred stock and 160,000 shares of common. The common is of $100 nominal par value, but was issued at $1 a share, and is carried in the balance sheet at $160,000. Dividends have been paid on the preferred from the beginning, but nothing on common, profits being turned back into the business. The surplus on Dec. 31 was $2,082,274.

Chicago Railways.

E. P., Lawrence, Mich.—Chicago Railways first mortgage bonds are well secured. In the year ended Jan. 31 last the interest on them was earned more than twice. They have declined partly in sympathy with the bond market in general and partly because of the recent increase in wages granted to employés. This increase can have no direct effect, except on the dividends on shares, but a reduction in surplus available for dividends always causes a downward tendency in the bonds.

Brief Answers.

A. D. W., Paxton, Ill.—Midvale Steel earned 33 per cent on its $100,000,000 of stock in 1916. In the first quarter of this year earnings were at the rate of 58½ per cent and friends of the company are predicting 60 per cent for the year. The company of course is profiting by the unprecedented prosperity of the steel trade and it also has munitions contracts. It is paying dividends at the rate of 12 per cent a year.

B. J.—The old Missouri Pacific collateral mortgage 5s of 1920 are exchanged for the new first and refunding bonds of the reorganized company, par for par. The new bonds bear interest from June 1, 1917, and $95.90 in cash will be paid as adjustment of past due interest.

W. A. H., Quincy, Ill.—The Barnett Oil and Gas company recently began paying monthly dividends of 1 cent a share. The third such dividend will be paid on Aug. 1 next, together with 1 cent extra.

NEWS OF THE COPPERS

ACCORDING to figures compiled by an eastern authority, the output of seventeen copper companies for the first five months of this year amounted to 686,535,374 pounds, an increase of 92,366,212 pounds, as compared with the first five months of last year. The June production of the five companies having already reported to date shows a decrease of 6,133,965, as compared with figures of the same companies for June of last year. This includes Anaconda production, which was 4,000,000 pounds under its figures for the preceding month.

The total decrease for June on account of labor troubles at the mines will probably reach 12,000,000 pounds when all figures are in, according to estimates. The indicated metal on hand or overproduction at the end of the first six months is in excess of 220,000,000 pounds.

As the New York metal market has been closed for the last two weeks, actual transactions reported during that period have been negligible and during the last week no transactions were reported. It is thought that buyers are holding back on the strength of the figures pointing to overproduction and with the expectation that copper prices are destined to see lower levels in the future. The government purchase of 60,000,000 pounds last week did not appear to influence them in the least.

Last year's production was in excess of 2,300,000,000 pounds, or 2,311,000,000 pounds refined. It is said that this year's production easily can reach 2,700,000,000 pounds if the necessity exists for that amount of the metal.

◆

The most important question facing the traders now is that of the price of the metal for the future, and particularly the price the government will pay for the copper it will need. This the federal trade commission probably will be unable to determine for some time. In the opinion of experts a price of 20 cents is justified on the latest company operations. This is 5 cents lower than the tentative price of the government and compares with the average rate in June of 31 cents.

ON THE BROAD STREET CURB

NEW YORK, July 7.—[Special.]—The most important feature of the Broad street trading during the last week was presented in the dealings in bonds. The Russian issues naturally attracted most attention, thus securities being directly influenced by the changes in governmental conditions of that nation. In the early part of the week both classes of bonds were weak because of the pronounced uncertainty in regard to the military situation, but after the vigorous military activities, followed by reports of success, a strong tone developed. The 6½s, which sold at the beginning of the week at 82½, rose to 89 and the 5½s moved up from 70¼ to 75.

◆

There was heavy trading on the curb in the new B. & O. notes. The one year notes, which had been placed by subscription at 98¾ in the preceding week, advanced to 99⅝, and the two year notes were traded in at 98⅝@98⅞. Erie 5s sold at 97½@98¼, and Southern Railway 5s at 97¼ and 98¼.

New York City new 4½s, when issued, sold at 102¼@102, followed by a rally to 102½.

Some new low records were made in the motor and oil issues. United Motors declined from 27¼ to the new low of 25. Chevrolet was another weak feature, falling from 100 to 91. Sinclair Gulf dropped from 28 to the new low of 24.

FINANCIAL NOTES

THE price of steel is expected to be fixed by the government within three weeks. It is thought in Washington that the government has grown weary of waiting for steel men to reach an agreement and has determined finally to take into its own hands the matter.

The federal trade commission is now said to be at work investigating steel production cost. The result of the board's inquiry will be a final setting forth of prices. Recently a compromise price on $89 a ton for steel was made tentatively between the United States Steel corporation and representatives of the United States government.

◆

From Washington comes the announcement that the rearrangement of class and commodity freight classifications, which in many instances would have resulted in increasing the rates throughout Central Freight association territory, were pronounced unjustified yesterday by the interstate commerce commission, and the changes the railroads proposed to make were ordered cancelled.

By this act the interstate commerce commission also suspended proposed higher rates in Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, but granted a percentage of increase.

Through adjustments of "illogical" ratings the commission suggested new tariffs allowing, the railroad men estimate, a raise of 5 per cent on classes of freight constituting 25 per cent of the tonnage in this district.

Commissioner McChord, who wrote the decision, declared that the increase in revenue is purely incidental. The main question involved, he said, was the leveling of rates found inconsistent. While increases are permitted in certain zones described in the decision, carriers in certain other sections are adversely affected.

◆

Earnings of the Lackawanna Steel company for the quarter ended June 30 will exceed, it is expected, the $7,000,000 mark estimated. In the March quarter the concern earned $5,209,586 net. With earnings of $7,100,000 for the second quarter the showing for six months should be $12,400,000, or at the annual rate of $70 a share.

MARKET COMMENT

ACCORDING to New York gossip, the conservative purchase of standard issues during the current market heaviness should give satisfactory returns to active operators, who make discriminating selections. Sharp rallies are not expected to hold at present, and professionals will be found sellers during recoveries.

◆

Raw materials issues are generally attracting more attention. The buying is based on appreciation of the part the United States will take in the demand by this government and the allies for war materials. This demand should improve for copper, iron, and steel. Coal and oil will also profit by war requirements. It is further believed that leathe for shoes and sugar for food will be required. Securities representing these kinds of raw materials will be expected to respond to conditions indicated by the plans outlined.

◆

Odd lot buying was reported to be taking place in the equipment stock, especially American Car and Foundry, Baldwin Locomotive, and Westinghouse.

◆

A leading New York institution is credited with estimating that earnings of the Pittsburgh Coal company will reach a sum sufficiently large to cover redemption of 45 per cent of the company's bonded debt, and leave unimpaired a large working capital.

GAIN IN RESERVE SHOWS HEALTHY NEW YEAR START

Total sales of stocks, 290,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds [par value], $1,870,000.

BIG GAIN IN RESERVES.

New York, July 7.—The most interesting development of the day—publication of the weekly bank statement showing an actual expansion of almost $174,000,000 in reserves—did not materialize until after the end of a dull and meaningless session on the stock exchange.

The gain in reserves was the largest for any one week since the new national banking laws became operative and probably is without precedent in the history of the local clearing house. It reflects to an extraordinary degree the enormous shifting of moneys incidental to the new fiscal year and is in part an aftermath of last week's payment of $360,000,000 into the Liberty loan.

Combined demand and time deposits increased by about $190,000,000 and the continued absorption of gold imports by the local federal reserve bank was accompanied by an increase in reserves of that institution amounting to almost $88,000,000.

Total actual excess of reserves now held by the clearing house aggregates $278,452,990, against barely $42,000,000 two weeks ago. In effect New York institutions begin the new fiscal year under highly auspicious conditions.

Rails in Better Demand.

The stock market was of the usual week end character, prices improving for the most part on covering of short contracts. Rails were in far better demand, exceptional strength being manifested by Reading, St. Paul, New York Central, and the Pacifics.

Motors, coppers, equipments, and oils ranged one to five points higher, after temporary irregularity in General Motors and Distillers' Securities. United States Steel was firm most of the short session, but eased off with allied shares at the close. Movements elsewhere in the list were perfunctory.

Advices indicating domestic trade readjustment and additional gold exports amounting to about $3,600,000 were included in the day's news items. Bonds were irregular on narrow fluctuations. Liberty 3½s ranged from 100 1-50 to 100 2-50. United States old issues were lower by fractions to a point on call during the week.

LOCAL UNLISTED SECURITIES DULL

Local unlisted securities have been inclined toward dullness, with a downward tendency, especially in the motor and public utility issues. Reo Motor Car changed hands at 25½ and Paige-Detroit at 27½, a decline of some two points. Continental Motors lost ½ point, from 7 to 6½. Prudden Wheel was firm at 22½ to 23½, with a little trading at these prices.

Little interest was shown in the implement securities. Moline Plow preferred sold at 98½, stock being in demand at this figure; offered at 99 at the close. Avery common was wanted at 90, with stock offered at 91. Emerson Brantingham preferred closed 42@43; sales were recorded at 42½. The common was quiet at 12@14.

Some demand existed for sugar stocks, with little change in values. Utah-Idaho sold as low as 10¼. Columbia Sugar was in demand around 12. Michigan was wanted at 91 and offered at 94. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was neglected at 285 to 290. Bucyrus common was wanted at 11½; the preferred was 63½@65.

NO MATTER WHAT THAT "X" MEANS IT'S A LIFE SAVER

For Now Joe's Widow and the Three Kids Can Go to Camp Algonquin.

That was all it said, but $10 was inclosed. The "X" might have stood for the signature or it might mean the money. But anyway, it means that a thin faced little widow whose Joe sleeps on the Italian front beneath the sod and will never wake again, and the three little children of the vanished Joe will go to Algonquin.

She'd about given up. Staggered by the blow of Joe's death, she could not eat. And then she could not work. And the children grew hollow and thin and their color left them. They are big eyed, wan children today. After Algonquin, they'll look better.

Ever Give It a Thought?

Ever think, folks, when you hear the happy footbeats of your own merry kiddies how it would be if they had nothing to eat, couldn't get out into the blessed air? If they didn't have clothes, and if their feet, which beat a glad tattoo now, dragged slow and listless?

Out at Algonquin, where the money sends the children and their mothers, there are birds in the hedges which sing sweet songs, and the grass is everywhere. Berries are ripe in the country now and the fish are jumping in the streams.

There's wonderful milk in Algonquin and the air! Remember the air, sweet with the smell o' clover in it! The flowers and good things to eat are jumping from the ground. Who's next to lend a hand?

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

JULY 8, 1917

SIREN—She was born Phyllis Langhorne, one of the five famously beautiful daughters of C. D. Langhorne of Greenwoods, Va. She was married to Reginald Brooks, a New York millionaire. Granted a divorce from him in 1915, she sailed for England to take up Red Cross work. There she captured the hearts of Capt. the Hon. William Reginald Wyndham, brother of Lord Leconfield, and of Capt. the Hon. George Douglas-Pennant, brother of Lord Penrhyn. Both of these officers were killed in France and both of them left her large fortunes at an interval of several months. Now she has married Capt. Robert Brand, a member of a house that owns probably the most ancient peerage in England. Capt. Brand's brother is Viscount Hampden, twenty-fifth Lord Dacre. The baronetcy of Dacre has existed since the Norman conquest. Capt. Brand and his brother are descendants of John Hampden, who championed the rights of the people in the reign of Charles I. Capt. Brand, formerly of the Royal Scots regiment, is a partner in the famous banking house of Lazard Brothers, London. His bride's sisters are Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, and Mrs. Paul Phipps.

GERMAN SUBMARINE HOLDING UP A LINER—The photograph was snapped by a passenger on a vessel of the Compania Transatlantica Espanola, bound from Barcelona to Havana. Having brought the ship to a stop by firing three shots across her bow from the guns seen in the picture, the submarine hove alongside while her captain satisfied himself that the vessel was Spanish and not English. The picture gives a good idea of the size of the submarines now operated by the Germans. Its length is extraordinary; it mounts rapid fire guns of three to four inch caliber fore and aft, and it has a double decked conning tower, wireless apparatus, and two periscopes.

They love to "dress up"

Once there was a Mother with three Babies. Said she, "I'll ruin the Children's best Dresses if I wash them. I'll wrap them up in Tissue Paper and put them on the Top Shelf in the Closet." So the Children wore Dark Gingham Jumpers and all the Neighbors said, "My, my, what grubby little Children. Stay in your own yard, Emily."

You can let your children wear their best fluffy dresses often. Keep their little flannels and sweaters white, and be proud of your children always.

You can keep the children's dresses fresh and clean without any chance of injuring them. Lux, the new soap product, will accomplish results you would scarcely believe possible. It actually won't shrink baby's flannels or woolens.

For all of their best dresses

The clear, transparent flakes whip up into the thick sudsy lather that immediately dissolves the dirt without a bit of rubbing. The flakes dissolve perfectly, so there is not a particle of solid soap to yellow or weaken the fabric. If the little garments can be trusted to pure water they are safe with Lux!

Get a package at your grocer's or at any department store. Try Lux on all of your children's dainty clothes. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash fine fabrics and woolens

Fine fabrics—Whisk a handful of Lux into a thick lather in very hot water. Put in the sheer little dresses and petticoats. Stir them about for a few minutes. Then add cold water till comfortable for the hands, and dip the garments through the creamy lather again and again. Do not rub. Any spots may be pressed between the hands. Rinse in three waters—hot. Dry in the sun (colored things in the shade).

Woolens—Whisk the Lux flakes into a lather in boiling or very hot water. Put in your woolens and let them soak until the water is comfortable for the hands. Then work them about in the suds, but do not rub. Rinse in three waters the same temperature as that in which you washed them. Dissolve a little Lux in the last rinsing water; this leaves the woolens softer and fluffier. Dry in the sun (colored woolens in the shade).

Where the doctor put the blame

Diphtheria broke out among several children in a family. The parents could not account for it; there had been no other cases in the neighborhood.

The mystery was only solved when the family physician, who insisted on examining the whole house, found bits of decayed vegetable matter clinging to the sides of the garbage can.

It was the mother's fault. Her children were in the sick-bed because she did not know the importance of keeping her whole home sanitary. She had never realized the necessity of having the garbage can thoroughly disinfected inside and out.

Protect your family from disease

Profit by the experience of others. Keep your garbage pail free from contagion with Sylpho-Nathol, the sure disinfectant for waste-pipes, garbage can and scrubbing.

It is a germ-killer three and a half times stronger than the U. S. Public Health Service standard. It is entirely safe. For thirty years New England women have used Sylpho-Nathol. The leading hospitals of New York and New England use this disinfectant. Let your home profit by their choice.

Keep your home sanitary

Use germ-killing solutions of Sylpho-Nathol in the course of your regular housework. In the waste-pipes, in the dark corners of the house, in the cracks of floors and woodwork, in the closet bowl; in all these places lurking disease is destroyed by Sylpho-Nathol.

PORTRAIT of HERSELF by Mme. Vigée-Le Brun

By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT

THE fairies of fortune were in generous mood at the birth of Madame Le Brun. To her they gave beauty and talent and wit. They were lavish in the measure of the worldly success which they dealt her and they gave to her the priceless blessing of a joyous and light hearted disposition. Only in the gift of marriage were they chary. Madame Le Brun was as unhappily married as any woman could possibly be and yet despite this fact she kept an abiding love of life and a vast joy in work.

An engaging painter of French people she sprang into quick favor with the Parisians through her charm of execution. She was not 20 when she first achieved success through her portrait work and in the course of her long life of unwearying labor painted nearly 700 portraits. She painted flatteringly because she loved to please and if her graceful figures and pretty faces cannot be called masterpieces they are invariably delightful to look upon.

Her best work was done before the rumbles of the approaching terror drove her from France and started her on that extended tour of Europe during which she visited every court and painted the faces of most of the sovereigns.

In all she did over thirty portraits of Marie Antoinette, the best known of them being the picture of the queen in the garden of Versailles with the bouquet of flowers in her hand. While they render the queen much more enticing than she was in life Madame Le Brun always insisted that no mortal hand could put on canvas the dazzling beauty of the fair Antoinette's complexion, or give to the eyes the brilliant sparkle that could light them on so many festive occasions.

After the revolution a new school came into being, imbued with the vigor and the intrepid spirit of those stirring times. Louis David was its leader and it severed all connection with the smiling geniality of art in madame's time. Indeed, the beauty of Le Brun's work was the last expression of eighteenth century art in France. She came in when the goddesses of Nattier had fled to their faded bowers and when the vogue of Boucher was completely dead.

Her most celebrated painting is the portrait of herself and daughter which hangs in the Louvre, although there are many who prefer this one which is shown today, considering it simpler and more sincere.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

At the End of the Wire

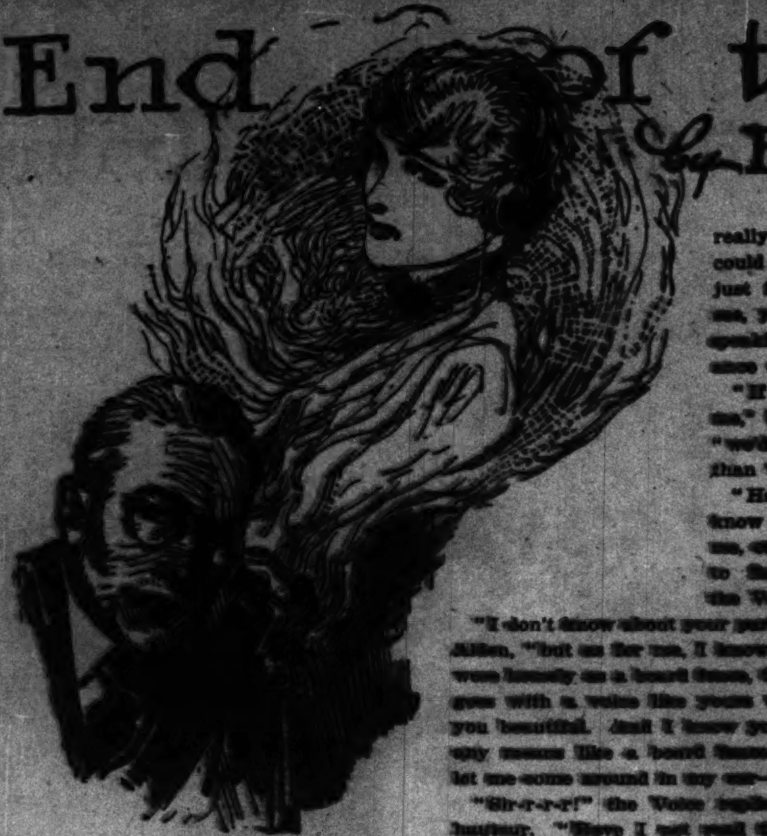
by Berton Braley



ALDEN jaggled the receiver hook up and down irritably. "Rotten service!" he said aloud, though there was no one to hear him. "Keep a man waiting hours." He had actually waited ten seconds. "What the ——!" he started to bark into the receiver when the operator's voice reached him.

"I'm very sorry. Please pardon the delay. What number did you wish?"

A progressive and far seeing telephone trust is doing its part in the culture of America. When the descendants of the present generation of telephone operators shall have come to manhood and womanhood they will have voices devoid of raucousness and stridency, and all because their mothers have learned how to answer into a transmitter.

The voice which answered Alden was exceptional, however, even among operators. It was rich and soft, yet vibrant and clear. There was warmth in it and sweetness, there was friendliness but not familiarity. Its melody lingered on his ear delectably.

"Why, I don't know," Alden temporized, that he might hear the voice again. "What numbers have you got?"

A laugh that was half ripple and half gurgle, a natural, effortless, mellifluous response to his pleasantry, followed his question.

"I'm sure you won't mind my laughter," the operator said presently. "You see, it is so funny to hear that dear old joke again. Number, please?" There was a businesslike crispness to the voice now, and Alden, being thus advised that the time for persiflage had passed, gave his call. But he appended "Thank you" when she got him his party, and that was an unusual thing for Alden.

It had been more or less of an axiom of his that doing business over the telephone was too casual and inexact. He admitted that it often saved time, but added that he preferred letters because they were evidence in court. And since Alden's little office on the sixteenth floor of the Monolith building was the brain center of a great business organization—the final authority in all its myriad affairs—people did business with Alden in Alden's way, as they usually do with men of power. They might wonder at his using a stenographer only a part of the time, but they respected his ability and let the rest of his methods go as personal eccentricities.

So they would listen patiently when he would remark that the "modern business man surrounds himself with so many labor and time saving appliances that he has to spend all his time using them. They don't give him much leisure to think. Maybe I'm patterning after my father's example in preferring not to hurry so much and to cerebrate more, but I notice that while I don't make so many deals as some other men, most of the deals I make are profitable. And one reason is that I don't conclude them over the telephone, but get them down on paper, so I can sue on them if necessary."

All this hasn't so much to do with the story except that a man who talks in that fashion about the telephone is not exactly living up to his professions when he suddenly develops a tendency to grab the instrument on every possible occasion. This was first manifested when he began calling up his apartment several times a day to give directions to a valet who hadn't needed any directing for the three years of his service. From this Alden turned to ringing up dealers and giving them large orders by telephone, and at the end of the second week after he had heard the new operator's voice he engaged her for some fifteen minutes in a search from hotel to hotel for an entirely mythical party.

After this project had been concluded he felt that he and the Voice at the end of the wire had reached a greater degree of intimacy. The Voice learned his name, naturally enough, soon after she first answered his impatient summons, and she always addressed him as Mr. Alden when she responded to his calls.

Thus gradually the somewhat irascible man of business found the Voice growing to be a part of his life. More than that, he commenced to visualise her. Up to the time that her first words had come to his ear a telephone operator had been to Alden only a sound at the other end of a wire—a sound that in some mysterious mechanical way had much to do with hitching your voice up with the rest of the world, a sound that you stormed at and complained of sometimes, yet only a sound. But now he pictured a flesh and blood person before that part of the switchboard at the exchange which had to do with his phone, a person who, he knew, would have eyes that lighted brilliantly when she greeted you, a smile that sparkled and cheeks that glowed. She would be small and dainty, sensibly yet smartly dressed, and her hand clasp would be firm, frank, yet deft and womanly.

He was mighty sure she wouldn't be one of those foolish little "nobody home" types that one sees so often on streets and in street cars. She'd have rather a sensible face—piquantly sensible, of course—and she would not be difficult to look at. And she would have brains, of course, so that a man wouldn't have to "talk down" to her. That's a lot to deduce from a voice, but Alden was growing so obsessed with the Voice that he spent a large portion of his time in deducing things from it. When a man begins his day's work by taking down the receiver and giving "Good morning" to a telephone operator he has never seen, and concludes the day's operations by calling her to say "Good night," and when he spends about as much time as the telephone company will stand for in talking to that operator, he has material for a lot of deductions.

As for the Voice—she was always courteous, always obliging, always cordially helpful, and that was about all. It is true that she liked the resonant and virile quality in Alden's tones, with their hint of power along with their quality of undying youth. It is true that she also made deductions, and even asked questions of other girls in the exchange, only to learn that Ralph Alden himself was one of the least known men in the business world, though his business was one of the most famous. The fact that he must be rich seemed not to affect her much, for she studiously kept him at the end of the wire.

"O, Mr. Alden," she said one morning, "the girls are all so grateful to you for the lovely bunch of flowers you sent us."

"Us!" repeated Alden. "Why, my dear little lady at the end of the wire, I sent them to you. You won't give me your name, and up to date I've been too honest to find out anyway, but you ought to know that when my card was in them they were for you. You're the girl who answers my phone."

"Not always," bubbled the Voice; "sometimes there are others. Besides, I didn't really feel that I could accept them just for me. You see, you're only a speaking acquaintance of mine."

"If you'd let me," began Alden, "we'd be lots more than that."

"How do you know you'd like me, or I you, face to face?" asked the Voice.

"I don't know about your part of it," said Alden, "but as for me, I know that if you were homely as a board fence, the soul that goes with a voice like yours would make you beautiful. And I know you aren't by any means like a board fence. Why not let me come around in my car——?"

"Sir-r-r-r!" the Voice replied, in mock hauteur. "Have I not read thousands of warnings to young girls about young men who have automobiles? No, take back your Rolls Royce; I will have none of it."

"It isn't a Rolls Royce," said Alden, "and to show that I'm not a bold, bad man I'll take along all the chaperons or matrons or policemen we can get in the car. Or I'll take your father and your mother and your small brother, if you consider it advisable."

"But I'm a poor orphan," the Voice explained. "Ain't got no mother, no father, no sister, no brother. And I'm afraid of policemen and I don't know any chaperons. So I must needs say you nay."

Just then somebody came into Alden's office and he had to hang up the receiver.

When his visitor had gone he stretched out a hand for the instrument, and then drew it back with a shamefaced grin.

"H'm," he mused, "perhaps I'd better not. Why, I'm letting that Voice own me. Confound it, when I come to consider, I haven't thought or dreamed of much else besides that Voice for a week. Brakes, Alden, brakes!" And he plunged into a heap of papers which had accumulated on his desk—he who had prided himself on always keeping that desk clear.

But brakes slip. That Voice at the end of the wire was stirring in Alden's heart queer little thrills which he thought he had buried safely under business and finance. And when the Voice ripples in your head all day and haunts your sleep at night, when an hour or two without the sound of it makes you heart hungry, you can be reasonably sure that the brakes are not secure.

When his own brakes could not keep him away from the telephone he found that the Voice intended to act as an emergency brake. She would not consent to be anywhere but at the end of the wire. When he grew insistent there came into her tones a touch of reserve, a delicate, impalpable barrier that was as strong as tradition and as terrible as an army with banners. For all she flung banter gay along over the wire to him now and then, or deftly thanked him for compliments he paid her speech or her intelligence, she evidently entertained traditional ideas on meeting strange men without formal introduction.

Of course, Alden might have called up the manager of the telephone company and asked for an introduction. The manager would not hesitate to favor a patron who—though reputed somewhat averse to the use of a telephone in his own office—used hundreds of them in his factories and general offices. But he didn't ask for it. Somehow he wanted more romance in the meeting than that. There must be more of a thrill of discovery, a shock of the unexpected.

"If she won't take me up on any of the suggestions I've made for meetings," he remarked to himself, "I'll have to arrange it all on my own. I shall have to appear before her like a fairy prince or a Djinn, or something like that. I don't know which she will take me for, but I'm going to appear, that's decided." From which it may be implied that neither Alden's brakes nor the Voice's were holding.

There was nothing particularly subtle about Alden's arrangements. He was a direct man. He called to him one of his trusty squires and he commanded: "Go down to the central exchange and find out who the girl is that answers the phone for my office. I don't want anybody in the exchange to know you're seeking that information, so the best way is to get a pass and go through as a visitor."

"How can I pick her out?" demanded the messenger.

"When you have found out who she is, learn what time the girls on her shift leave the place. Then come back here and give me the facts. But don't tell me what the girl looks like. I'll reserve that for myself. Even if she is splay footed and hunchbacked, with a cast in each eye."

"All right," agreed the man. "But how will I tell which one is her?"

By way of answer Alden lifted the receiver from the hook and spoke into the transmitter. "Operator," he asked, "would you mind giving me the correct time?"

He clapped the receiver to his messenger's ear.

"Gee!" said that worthy, after a few seconds. "Some voice! I couldn't forget that in a million years. I'll listen for her down at the exchange, and I sure will pick her out for you, Mr. Alden." And at the discovery that this stern and hitherto blameless boss was apparently as human as the rest of mankind, the messenger even dared a wink.

. . . .

"That's her," he whispered to Alden, two hours later, as a figure in natty blue serge came down the steps in a bevy of girls. "That's her—the one with the black hat and blue feathers."

Alden's heart leaped as he glimpsed the object of his pursuit, the dainty, fawn-like figure of his dreams. Briskly she walked down the street; slowly and quietly Alden's big car followed.

"Get out," he said to the man with him; "this is my party."

The man obeyed and sauntered away. The moment he was out of view around the corner Alden shot the car ahead, stopped it half a block forward of the girl he had been following, jumped out, and was back to meet her. As he drew near he smiled and lifted his hat. She stared him through as though he were not there.

But when he stepped directly in front of her, swept his hat from his head with a deep bow, and declared, "Lady at the end of the wire, I am Ralph Alden," she gave a little "Oh!" of mingled fright and amusement, and then smiled into his eyes. And Ralph Alden surveyed the owner of the Voice in an astonishment as great as his pleasure. For she was as pretty and as dainty and as sweet as he had thought she would be. Her eyes were bright as she greeted him, her smile sparkled and her cheeks glowed. She had rather a sensible face—piquantly sensible, he thought—and she was very easy to look at. But, what was more, she had brains, and he could be sure he needn't "talk down" to her.

Ralph Alden again bowed low.

"Madam," he said, "I shall esteem it a great honor if you will let me drive you home, as slowly as possible, in my car."

The "lady at the end of the wire" laughed softly.

"I wonder," she said, as she took his arm, "what my son and daughter would say if they saw me—an old lady of 50—getting into an auto with a man I've never met!"

"It is nothing," replied Ralph Alden, his eyes noting the soft color of her almost youthful cheeks and the brightness of her eyes, "it is nothing to what my children would say if they knew I'd gone and talked to such a telephone girl. But if a young man of 55 can't take a young girl of 50 for an auto ride without the aid or consent of impertinent sons and daughters, I'd like to know what this world is coming to."

"So would I," agreed Mrs. Susan Hart, widow, as she settled into the big car's cushions with a sigh of satisfaction.

And they did make a fine looking couple—as their children admitted a week or two later when they had sufficiently recovered from the shock of a sudden wedding.

"Why shouldn't it be sudden!" Alden demanded. "Long engagements may be all right for mere children who have a lot of years to waste. But for persons of ripe maturity—whose decisions are based upon experience and wisdom of the years—we know that we must make all the time we have count. That's reasonable, isn't it?"

And, all things considered, most of us will agree that it is.

AN OLD, OLD STORY

By H.C. Bunner

When Cupid comes to you at forty.

A Delightful Story of Delightful People by the Most Whimsical of American Authors.

SUPPOSE the Tullingworth-Gordons were good Americans at heart, but the Tullingworth-Gordons were of English extraction, and, as somebody once said, the extraction had not been completely successful—a great deal of the English soil clung to the roots of the family tree.

They lived on Long Island, in a very English way, in a manor house which was as English as they could make it, among surroundings quite respectably English for Americans of the third or fourth generation.

They had two English servants and some other American "help"; but they called the Americans by their last names, which Anglified them to some extent. They had a servants' hall, and a butler's pantry, and a page in buttons, and they were unreasonably proud of the fact that one of their Tory ancestors had been obliged to leave New York for Halifax in 1784, having only the alternative of a more tropical place of residence. I do not know whether they really held that the signers of the Declaration of Independence committed a grave error, but I do know that when they had occasion to speak of Queen Victoria they always referred to her as "her majesty."

"I see by the Mail tonight," Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon would say to his wife, "that her majesty has presented the poor bricklayer who saved seventeen lives and lost both his arms at the Chillingham-on-Freese disaster with an India shawl and a copy of the life of the prince consort."

"Her majesty is always so generous!" Mrs. Tullingworth-Gordon would sigh; "and so considerate of the common people!"

Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon was a rich man, and he was free to indulge the fancy of his life and to be as English as his name; and he engaged those two English servants to keep up the illusion.

It is the tale of the menials that I have to tell—the tale of the loves of Samuel Bilson, butler, and Sophronia Huckins, "which 'Uckins it ever was and so it were al'ays called, and which 'Uckins is good enough for me, like it was good enough for my parents now departed, and there is 'ope for 'eaven for chapel goers, though a Church of England woman I am myself."

Sophronia Huckins was lady's maid to Mrs. Tullingworth-Gordon, housekeeper to Mr. and Mrs. Tullingworth-Gordon, and, in a way, autocrat and supreme ruler over the whole house of Tullingworth-Gordon. There were other servants, as I have said, but in their several departments Bilson and Sophronia were king and queen.

Of course at the first there was some friction between these two potentates. For ten years they scratched and sparred and jostled; for ten years after that they lived in comfortable amity, relieving their feelings by establishing a reign of terror over the other servants; and then—ah, then!—began the dawn of another day. Bilson was careless about the wine; Sophronia took to the wearing of gowns unbefitting a maid of 40 years. It broke upon the Tullingworth-Gordon mind that something was in the wind and that the conservative quiet of their domestic service was likely to be troubled.

Meanwhile Nature, unconscious of the proprieties of the situation, was having her own way in the little passage back of the butler's pantry.

"You say"—the housekeeper spoke with a certain sternness—"as how you have loved me for ten long years. But I say as how it would 'ave been more to your credit, Samuel Bilson, to have found it out afore this, when, if I do say it myself, there was more occasion."

"It's none the wuss, Sophronia, for a-bein' found out now," rejoined the butler steadily; "what you was, you is to me, and I don't [illegible] regret that you ain't what you was in point of beauty, to 'ave young men an' sich a-comin' between us as an engaged pair."

"Us an engaged pair!" demanded Sophronia, with profound dignity.

"Us," said Mr. Bilson placidly; "or to be considered as sich."

"I ain't considered us as sich," said Sophronia coquettishly; "not as yet."

Mr. Bilson was stacking up dishes on the shelves in the passageway. He paused in his labors, put his hands on his hips, and faced his tormenting charmer with determination in his eye. "Sophronia 'Uckins," he said, "you're forty this day week; that much I knows. Forty's forty. You've kep' your looks wonderful, an' you have your teeth, which Providence give you. But forty's forty. If you mean Bilson, you mean Bilson now, 'ere in this 'ere cupboard extension, your 'and and your 'art, to love, honor, an' obey, so 'elp you. Now, 'ow goes it?"

It went Mr. Bilson's way. Sophronia demurred, and for a space of some few weeks she was doubtful; then she said "no"—but in the end she consented.

Why should she not? Bilson had been a saving man. No luxurious furniture beautified his little room over the stables. His character was above reproach. He allowed himself one glass of port each day from Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon's stock; but there he drew the line. Such as it was, the master of the house had his own wine, every drop, except that solitary glass of port—save on one occasion.

And Sophronia Huckins was the occasion of that occasion. Smooth and decorous ran the course of true love for four months on end. Mrs. Tullingworth-Gordon had been made acquainted with the state of affairs; had raged, had cooled, and had got to that point where the natural woman arose within her, and she began to think about laying out a trousseau for the bride. Fair was the horizon; cloudless the sky. Then came the heavy blow of Fate.

When Cupid comes to you at 40 years he is likely to be something wrinkled, more or less fat and pursy, a trifle stiff in the joints. You must humor him a little; you must make believe and play that he is young and fair. It takes imagination to do this, and in imagination Sophronia was deficient. Her betrothal was not two months old when she suddenly realized that there was something grotesque and absurd about it.

How did she get the idea? Was it an echo of the gossip of the other servants? Did she see the shopkeepers, quick to catch all the local gossip, smiling at her as she went about the little town on her domestic errands? Was there something in Bilson's manner that told her that he felt in his inmost heart that he had got to the point where he had to take what he could get and that he held her lucky to have been conveniently accessible at that critical juncture?

We cannot know. Perhaps Bilson was to blame. A man may be in love—over head and ears in love—and yet the little red feather of his vanity will stick out of the depths and proclaim that his self-conceit is not yet dead. Perhaps it was Bilson; perhaps it was some other cause. It matters not. One dull November day Sophronia Huckins told Samuel Bilson that she could not and would not marry him.

"It was my intent, Samuel, but I 'ave seen it was not the thing for neither of us. If you had 'a' seen your way clear five or ten or maybe fifteen years ago I don't say it wouldn't 'a' been different. But as to sich a thing now, I may 'ave been foolish a-listenin' to you last July; but what brains I 'ave is about me now, an' I tell you plain, Samuel Bilson, it can't never be."

To Bilson this came like a clap of thunder out of the clearest and sunniest of skies. If the Cupid within him had grown old and awkward he was unaware of it. To his dull and heavily British apprehension it was the same Cupid that he had known in earlier years. The defection of his betrothed was a blow from which he could not recover.

"Them women," he said, "is worse'n the measles. You don't know when they're comin' out, and you don't know when they're goin' in."

The blow fell upon him late one evening, long after dinner, when everything had been put to rights. He was sitting in the butler's pantry, sipping his one glass of port when Sophronia entered and delivered her dictum.

She went out and left him—left him with the port. She left him with the sherry; she left him with the claret, with the old, old claret; with the [illegible] years with the wine that had rounded the cape, with the cognac, with the chartreuse, with the sirupy curacoa and the eau de Dantzic and with the Scotch whisky that Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon sometimes drank in spite of plain American rye. She left him with the structure of a lifetime shattered; with the love of twenty years nipped in its late bourgeoning bud. She left him alone, and she left him with a deadly temptation at hand.

He fell upon these bottles, and for once in his quiet, steady, conservative life he drank his fill. He drank the soft, sub-acid claret; he drank the nutty sherry; he drank the yellow chartreuse and the ruddy curacoa. He drank the fiery cognac and the smoky Scotch whisky. He drank and drank, and as his grief rose higher and higher, high and more high he raised the intoxicating flood.

At 2 o'clock of that night a respectable butler opened a side door in the mansion of Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon and sallied forth to cool his brow in the midnight air.

He was singing as they brought him back on a shutter in the early morning; but it was not wholly with drunkenness, for delirium had hold of him. Down to the south of the house were long stretches of marsh, reaching into the Great South bay, and there he had wandered in his first intoxication. There he had stepped over the edge of a little dike that surrounded Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon's pike pond—where all the pike died, because the water was too salt for them—and there they found him lying on his back, with one of the most interesting cases of compound fracture in his right leg that has yet been put on record, and with the flat stones that topped the dike lying over him.

They took him to his room over the stable and put him to bed and sent for the doctor. The doctor came and set the leg. He also smelled Mr. Bilson's breath and gazed upon Mr. Bilson's feverish countenance and said:

"Hard drinker, eh? We'll have trouble with him, probably. Hasn't he got anybody to look after him?"

This query found its way up to the manor house of the Tullingworth-Gordons. It came in some way to the ears of Sophronia. Shortly after dinner time she appeared in the chamber of Bilson.

Bilson was "coming out of it." He was conscious, he was sore, he was heavy of heart and head. He looked up as he lay on his bed and saw a comely middle aged Englishwoman, sharp of feature, yet somehow pleasant and comforting, standing by his bed.

"Sophronia!" he exclaimed.

"Hush!" she said; "the medical man said you wasn't to talk."

"Sophronia—'tain't you!"

"P'r'aps it ain't," said Sophronia sourly; "p'r'aps it's a cow, or a 'orse, or a goat, or anythin' that is my neighbor's. But the best I know, it's me, and I've come to 'ave an eye on you."

"Sophronia!" gasped the sufferer; "'tain't noways proper."

"'T's going to be proper, Samuel Bilson. You wait and you'll see what you'll see. 'Ere 'e comes."

Mr. Bilson's room was reached by a ladder coming up through a hole in the floor.

Through this hole came a peculiarly shaped felt hat; then a pale, youthful face; then a vest with many buttons.

"'To 'ave and to 'old,'" said Sophronia. "'Ere he is."

The head came up, and a long, thin body after it. Pale and gaunt, swaying slightly backward and forward like a stiff cornstalk in a mild breeze, the Rev. Mr. Chizzy stood before them and smiled vaguely.

The Rev. Mr. Chizzy was only 24, and he might have passed for 19; but he was so high a churchman that the mold of several centuries was on him. He was a priest without a cure; but, as some of his irreverent friends expressed it, he was "in training" for the rectorship of St. Bede's the Less, a small church in the neighborhood, endowed by Mr. Tullingworth-Gordon and disapproved of by his bishop, who had not yet appointed a clergyman. The bishop had been heard to say that he had not yet made up his mind whether St. Bede's the Less was a church or some new kind of theater. Nevertheless Mr. Chizzy was on hand, living under the wing of the Tullingworth-Gordons and trying to make the good Church of England people of the parish believe that they needed him and his candles and his choir boys.

Behind Mr. Chizzy came two limp little girls, hangers-on of the Tullingworth-Gordon household by grace of Mrs. Tullingworth-Gordon's charity. In New England they would have been called chore girls. The Tullingworth-Gordons called them scullery maids.

Bilson half rose on his elbow in astonishment, alarm, and indignation.

"Sophronia 'Uckins," he demanded, "what do this 'ere mean? I ain't a-dyin', and I ain't got no need of a clergyman, thank 'eaven. And no more this ain't a scullery, Mrs. 'Uckins."

"This," said Sophronia, pointing at the clergyman as though he were a wax figure in a show, "this is to wed you and me, Samuel Bilson, and them" (she indicated the scullery maids) "them witnesses it."

"Witnesses wot?" Mr. Bilson inquired, in a yell.

"Witnesses our marriage, Samuel Bilson. Nuss you I cannot, bein' single, and nussed you must and shall be. Now set up and be marri'd quiet."

Mr. Bilson's physical condition forbade him to leap from the bed, but his voice leaped to the rafters above him.

"Marri'd!" he shouted. "I'll die fust!"

"Die you will," said Sophronia calmly but sternly, "if marri'd you ain't, and that soon."

"Sophronia!" Bilson's voice was hollow and deeply reproachful; "you 'ave throwed me over."

"I 'ave," she assented.

"And 'ere I am."

"And there you are."

"Sophronia, you 'ave not treated me right."

"I have not, Samuel Bilson," Miss Huckins cheerfully assented. "I might 'ave known as you was not fit to take care of yourself. But I mean to do my dooty now, so will you 'ave the kindness to button your clo'es at the neck and sit up?"

Mr. Bilson mechanically fastened the neckband of his nightshirt and raised himself to the sitting posture.

"Mrs. Huckins," Mr. Chizzy interrupted in an uncertain way, "I didn't understand—you did not tell me—there does not appear to have been the usual preliminary arrangement for this most sacred and solemn ceremony."

Sophronia turned on him with scorn in her voice and bearing.

"Do I understand, sir, as you find yourself in a 'urry?"

"I am not in a hurry—O, no. But—dear me, you know, I can't perform the ceremony under these circumstances."

Miss Huckins grew more profoundly scornful.

"Do you know any impediment w'y we should not be lawfully joined together in matrimony?"

"Why," said the perturbed cleric, "he doesn't want you."

"'E doesn't know what 'e wants," returned Sophronia grimly. "If women waited for men to find out w'en they wanted wives there'd be more old maids than there is. If you'll be good enough to take your book in your 'and, sir, I'll see to 'im."

Bilson made one last faint protest.

"'Twouldn't be right, Sophronia," he wailed. "I ain't wot I was; I'm a wuthless and a busted wreck. I can't tie no woman to me for life. It ain't doin' justice to neither."

"If you're what you say you are," said Sophronia imperturbably, "and you know better than I do, you should be glad to take wot you can get. If I'm suited, don't you complain."

"Mrs. Huckins," the young clergyman broke in, feebly asserting himself, "this is utterly irregular."

"I know it is," said Sophronia, "and we're a-waitin' for you to set it straight."

The two chore girls giggled. A warm flush mounted to Mr. Chizzy's pale face. He hesitated a second, then nervously opened his book and began the service. Sophronia stood by the bedside, clasping Bilson's hand in a grasp which no writhing could loosen.

"Dearly beloved," Mr. Chizzy began, addressing the two chore girls; and with a trembling voice he hurried on to the important question:

"Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?"

"N-yah!"

Bilson had begun to say "no," but Sophronia's firm hand had tightened on his with so powerful a pressure that his negative remonstrance ended in a positive yell.

"Ah, really," broke in Mr. Chizzy, "I cannot proceed, M-M-Miss—ah, what's your name? I positively can't!"

"Mrs. Bilson," returned the unmoved Sophronia. "Are you intending for to part 'usband and wife at this point, sir? Excuse me, but we're a-waitin' of your convenience."

Mr. Chizzy was a deep red in the face. His pallor had given place to a flush quite as ghastly in its way. The blood was waltzing in giddy circles through his brain as he read on and on. No church—no candles—no choir boys. Only this awful woman, stern as death, commanding him and Bilson! Why had he yielded to her? Why had he permitted himself to be dragged hither? Why was he meekly doing her bidding? Mr. Chizzy felt as though he were acting in some ghastly, nightmarish dream.

"Then shall the minister say: 'Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?'"

That roused Mr. Chizzy from his trance. It came late, but it seemed to open a way out of the horribly irregular business. He paused and tried to fix an uncertain eye on Sophronia.

"Have you a father or a friend here?" he demanded.

"Jim!" said Sophronia loudly.

"Ma'am?" came a voice from the lower story of the stable.

"Say, 'I do.'"

"Ma'am?"

"Say, 'I do'—an' say it directly!"

"Say—say? What do you want, Miss Huckins?"

"Jim!" said Sophronia sternly, "open your mouth an' say, 'I do,' out loud, or I come down there immejit!"

"I do," came from the floor below.

"'Ere's the ring," said Sophronia promptly. "'I, M., take thee, N.'—if you'll have the kindness to go on, sir, we won't detain you any longer than we can 'elp. I'm give away, I believe; and I'll take 'im, M."

"Forasmuch as," began the Rev. Mr. Chizzy a few minutes later, addressing the chore girls, "Samuel and Sophronia have consented together in holy wedlock——"

He stopped suddenly. Up through the opening in the floor arose the head of a youthful Negro perhaps 14 years of age. Mr. Chizzy recognized him as the stable boy, a jockey of some local fame.

"What do you want me to say I done do?" he inquired.

"Mrs.—Mrs.—Bilson!" said Mr. Chizzy, with a tremulous indignation in his voice; "did this Negro infant act as your parent or friend just now?"

"'E give me away," replied the unabashed bride.

Mr. Chizzy looked at her, at Bilson, at Jim, and at the chore girls. Then he opened his book again and finished the ceremony.

The Tullingworth-Gordons were angry when they heard of the marriage. They missed the two mainstays of their domestic system. But—well, Bilson was growing old, and Sophronia was growing tyrannical. Perhaps it was better as it was. And, after all, they had always wanted a lodge and a lodge keeper, and the old ice house stood near the gate—a good two hundred feet from the house.

It was nearly a year before Bilson could walk around with comfort. Indeed, eighteen months later he did not care to do more than sit in the sun and question fate, while Mrs. Bilson tried to quiet a noisy baby within the lodge.

"'Ere I am, laid up, as I should be," said Bilson; "an' there's an active woman a-goin' around with a baby and a-nussin' of him. If things was as they should be in the course of nachur we'd 'ave exchanged jobs, we would."

The White Feather

by Lechmere Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in the West Crest private hotel in an English sea coast town when England has been at war one month. Mrs. Sanderson, the proprietress; her son, Charles, serving in the English admiralty; Mr. Pollock, the Justice of the Peace; his daughter, Molly, 19; Christopher Brent, Molly's fiancé; Mrs. Miriam Lee, a widow of thirty-five, the latest arrival at the hotel; Miss Myrtle, a spinster; Fräulein Schroeder, a colorless little German woman, claiming twenty years of English naturalization; Pennicuik, a young English soldier, and Fritz, a servant in the house, are the entire occupants of the hotel. Christopher Brent is looked upon by all the other hotel occupants, excepting Molly and Mrs. Lee, as an irresponsible idler, due to acts and conversation in affairs, especially when war talk, which is uppermost in all conversation, is conducted in his presence. A young English girl, an hysterical enthusiast, breaks in on the hotel party one morning carrying a basket of white feathers, one of which she is going to present to every man she meets who has not enlisted. In the presence of almost the entire hotel patronage, she asks Brent if he is going to enlist, and why not. He says he is not, but his reasons are evasive. Molly cringes under the disgrace Brent thus brings down upon himself by what her father calls cowardice. Brent tries to gain Molly's absolute faith in him without disclosing the nature of his real business. But partly because of his lack of faith in keeping things from her and because of his seeming flirtation and constant attendance upon the widow Miriam Lee, Molly wavers. Young Pennicuik proposes to Molly and warns her Brent is not the man to make her happy, his decision being based entirely upon Brent's peculiar reticence about himself, his nonenlisting, and his attitude toward Mrs. Lee.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

An Explanation.

IN most English households life revolves round meal times. The day is marked out into "before lunch" and "after lunch," "before tea" and "after tea" and so on. Mrs. Sanderson was well aware of this and was also aware that next to dinner tea was the sacred hour of the day. It was quite certain that at that time all her boarders would be congregated together to enjoy the really solid meal with which she kept them occupied at that hour. This feast was the only one which Mrs. Sanderson did not grace with her presence, and fräulein had never sufficiently fallen into English ways to accustom herself to it either. Therefore it was without any of the restraint engendered by a hostess or by one of a different nationality that the guests at Wave Crest took their tea.

On this particular afternoon they were all assembled on the veranda, for the warmth of early autumn still held in spite of the clouding over. Percival Pennicuik, who, since the morning, had attained a uniform, was the guest of honor. He sat beside Molly and Miss Myrtle, a position which was not an unmixed blessing. Mr. Pollock, needless to remark, had taken charge of the cake tables—and had secured Mrs. Lee for his right hand.

Fritz was bustling round with supplies of hot toast, thin bread and butter, shrimps, and jam. Indeed, he bustled too much about Mr. Pollock for that gentleman's liking. It seemed to him today that he could never look up without finding Fritz at his elbow.

Brent was sitting on the other side of Mrs. Lee, opposite to Molly, which was the latter's arrangement. She had been trying to be broad minded that afternoon by playing tennis with Mrs. Lee, and she was now continuing the good work, not altogether unbiased by the fact that Pennicuik was beside her. A little low toned conversation with him might make Chris jealous, which she could not help feeling would be a good thing. Being a true woman, she never bothered about the effect on Pennicuik at all.

"Well," said Mr. Pollock breezily, as he piled jam on his third slice of buttered toast, "I must say Mrs. Sanderson does us uncommonly well. This toast would taste like nectar or elysium, or whatever they call it, to the Germans, I suppose. Poor beggars! I have it on the best authority—though I'm not at liberty to disclose from whom—that they have finished their last horse already. And now they have got to live almost entirely on cats and dogs. A man who isn't a narrow minded bigot can't help feeling sorry for the poor fellows. For the rank and file, that is. They have been misled by their superiors. Still, they are awful brutes, most of them, and deserve what they get," and Mr. Pollock spread his jam with a liberal hand.

"I hear," remarked Miss Myrtle, in her thin, reedy voice and with a malicious glance toward Mr. Brent, "that Miss Kidlington was most successful with her white feather campaign this morning."

"I disapprove entirely of such methods," boomed Mr. Pollock. "If a man cannot or will not hear his country's call he must either be able to give a reasonable excuse to his friends or be prepared to sacrifice their esteem." He spoke with raised voice and obvious intention. "Impertinent young women have no right to force such explanations by employing emblems of cowardice."

"I have often wondered," piped Miss Myrtle, "how the white feather came by its significance."

"You had better ask Mr. Brent," replied Mr. Pollock grimly.

Molly, who was not so absorbed with her conversation with Percy as not to hear what was going on, gave a low toned, reproachful "Father!" Mr. Pollock only grunted.

"I'd tell you like a shot if I could, Miss Myrtle," said Brent politely. "But I haven't the foggiest idea. I never was any good at history, but I have a vague notion that it is connected with the Black Prince, who wore one in his helmet and said something about his white plume shining."

"What utter nonsense, Mr. Brent," replied the Myrtle, who had been a governess in her day. "Black Prince indeed! Or Henry of Navarre for that matter either, though I suppose it's he you are thinking of. They were both very brave men. It can have no connection with them."

"Don't think I'm sticking myself up as an authority," put in Mrs. Lee pleasantly, "but as a matter of fact I think I can tell you. I came across the explanation the other day."

"Indeed?" said Mr. Pollock, all politeness.

"Yes. It dates from the time when cock fighting was a fashionable sport. A white feather is never seen in a pedigree gamecock. Its presence indicates a bird of baser breed."

"Dear me, dear me," said Mr. Pollock. "Most interesting, I'm sure."

"And," continued Mrs. Lee, still more sweetly, "even today you will find that the cock with the most arrogant strut and loudest crow has generally a white feather in its tail. O, by the way, Mr. Pollock, didn't you get one this morning?"

"Get what?" asked Mr. Pollock. "I don't understand."

"A white feather."

"Me, me!" Between toast and indignation Mr. Pollock positively spluttered. "Certainly not. Even Miss Kidlington has sufficient remnants of good taste left to respect my years."

"Your years, Mr. Pollock?" cried Mrs. Lee. "But why should she know what they are? Nothing would be easier than for you to conceal them."

"You flatter me, I'm sure," said Mr. Pollock, but looking far from pleased.

"No, no; not at all," persisted Miriam. "I didn't mean it that way. But heaps of men with a fine youthful constitution like yours have managed to mislay their birth certificates in a spirit of patriotic enthusiasm."

Every one else had stopped talking and was listening to this little altercation, conducted with such apparent politeness. Molly's face was flushed; she did not know whether to be grateful to Mrs. Lee for diverting attention from Chris or to be angry with her for baiting Mr. Pollock. Her personal distrust of Mrs. Lee supplying the balance, she decided on the latter course.

Mr. Pollock pulled himself together. "My dear Mrs. Lee," he began, "there is nobody, I assure you, nobody who would offer himself to his country more readily than I should if it were only possible. But unfortunately I have great responsibilities of a private nature which even if, as you so kindly imply, I could pass for a younger man than I am, would not permit me to—well, to risk my life on the battlefield."

"You are prepared to give me details of those responsibilities?" persisted Mrs. Lee.

"My dear madam!" began Mr. Pollock, genuinely indignant.

"Don't think me impertinent," said Miriam. "I didn't expect you would be able to tell me. I only just wanted to bring home to you the fact that there are quite a number of men, besides yourself, who have responsibilities which they cannot reveal to the world, but which are more than sufficient to justify them in staying at home." She spoke quietly, but with an almost passionate conviction which must have struck on her own ears, for she suddenly gave a little laugh. "Ah, well, we are being very serious over nothing at all," she said. "What have you been doing with yourself all this afternoon, Mr. Pennicuik? You are our chief source of interest, you know. I have been admiring your uniform all tea time."

"Now you are making fun of me, Mrs. Lee," protested Pennicuik. "Though perhaps it doesn't look so bad when I'm sitting down. The coat's much too short. Must have been made for a much smaller chap than me. Still, it's better than nothing. I feel more businesslike."

"It pokes horribly in the back," said Molly, tugging at it as she spoke and then giving little pats to try to make it sit right over his chest and shoulders, a proceeding of which she hoped notice was taken through a certain opening on the other side of the veranda.

"Walk away from me, Percy," commanded Molly in the best dressmaker's manner, "and let me see the effect."

He obeyed, turning round at the end of the veranda, where a curtain of Virginia creeper, turned to flame, hung from the edge of the roof to the veranda rail. Molly went after him and gave his coat a few more little settling tugs. Mr. Pollock watched them well pleased, out of the corner of his eye.

Brent, apparently unperturbed, [illegible] through his [illegible], and when Miriam rose and strolled on to the lawn he went after her.

Mr. Pollock gazed at the backs of Brent and his companion as they stood absorbed in a low toned conversation, with growing indignation on his expressive countenance. He now rose, abandoning Miss Myrtle's conversation in midair, so to speak, and strode over to where his daughter and Percy were standing.

"Really, that fellow Brent has no sense of decency or shame whatever," he announced. "His brazen effrontery about the white feather at tea is nearly equaled by Mrs. Lee. Cross questioning me like that, indeed! and now look at 'em! Might have known each other for years! An outrageous flirtation, I call it."

"Chris found he knew her husband in South Africa," said Molly, trying to speak casually.

"Husband! I shouldn't be surprised——" began Mr. Pollock, and then turned off his sentence with a cough.

"I must say," said Percy hesitatingly, "it does seem odd, Brent not doing anything. Surely he could get some kind of a home billet if he doesn't want to enlist."

"I'm sure Chris has very good reasons. I know he has. He told me," said Molly defiantly.

"Did he tell you what they were or only that he had 'em?" demanded Mr. Pollock, placing his finger tips together in a judicial manner and gazing at her over the top of his pincenez.

"He said he couldn't tell me what they were."

"Exactly," said Mr. Pollock. "I suppose even Brent draws the line at admitting to you that he is a coward."

"Father!" cried Molly sharply.

"But it does look queer, you must see for yourself, Molly," urged Percy. "It's you we're thinking of, your father and I. It puts you in such a hateful position and you aren't happy about it, you know you aren't, Molly."

"O, don't argue, Percy," flashed Molly irritably. "Mr. Brent has his own reasons for doing what he is doing. I don't know what they are, but I am quite satisfied by his assurance that they are good enough."

"Fiddlesticks!" said her father rudely. "If he has reasons they aren't good enough, or he could explain them."

"It does look like that," admitted Percy.

"O, you don't either of you understand," replied Molly, speaking low but very fast and with a heightened color in her cheeks. "You are just men and you want to judge every one by yourselves. I don't judge at all. You reason about things, but I know them. I love Chris. Yes, I do, so there! I don't love him for being this or that, I just love him because he's himself, and even if he were entirely in the wrong in everything you say I'd just go on loving him all the more," and Molly went swiftly along the veranda and in at the house door.

"Dear, dear!" ejaculated Mr. Pollock, "girls are damn funny things, Percy. Of course I understand Molly perfectly, she's my own child, but upon my word there are times when she almost puzzles me."

"I'm afraid one thing's clear enough," said Pennicuik a little drearily, "and that is that she's quite hopelessly in love with Brent and that nothing will get her out of it."

"Nonsense, nonsense," replied Mr. Pollock. "What does a girl of her age know about love? I have always been most careful that she should never know about anything. A pretty thing it would be if I can't influence my own daughter now. You know, Pennicuik, I used to hope that you and she——"

Percy shook his head. "So did I, but it's no go, sir. Molly won't look at any one but Brent. She hasn't ever since she met him. And today she seems to have grown or developed somehow. Don't know how to put it. But anyway I don't stand an earthly [illegible] less now than ever."

"You forget my influence and authority, my boy," said Mr. Pollock heartily. "I shall insist on it all being off between her and Brent. This flirtation with Mrs. Lee is the last straw, and then, well—there is such a thing as catching a person on the rebound, you know."

This did not sound at all the way in which Percy, who was young enough to be idealistic, cared to win Molly, but Mr. Pollock's tone was so intensely confident that he could not help a faint gleam of hope dawning in his mind.

"You are very good, sir—thanks awfully," he said, "but I don't want Molly made unhappy."

"You leave it to me, my boy," said Mr. Pollock; "tact and firmness, that's what is wanted, tact and firmness."

Meanwhile Miriam and Brent were strolling idly about the lawn.

"I suppose the others are all in the sitting room," remarked Miriam, glancing toward the French window which stood open at the farther end of the veranda from the tea party.

"Fräulein is still out," replied Brent, "busying herself with a sketch book. By the way, Miriam," he went on, "as you know, I am like a woman in that I go much more by intuition and feeling than by reason. I tell you that fräulein always seemed to me the sinister spot in this house. It may seem absurd to you to say it, but I have a curious feeling that she, and not Sanderson or his mother or the excitable Fritz, is the [illegible] here; they are all more or less fanatics, of course, but Fritz gets well paid for what he does, and he is animated chiefly by hatred of the English. It is certainly the object of Mrs. Sanderson's life, to which she has trained Charles up. But with fräulein it's more than that. It's her religion, her passion."

"She seems so normal," observed Miriam.

"That's because of her iron self-control," replied Brent. "But I should not be surprised if she turned out to be the type of religious maniac which is quite the most dangerous and ruthless thing in the world. Do you remember the case of [illegible]?"

"No, who's she?" asked Miriam. "I don't delve into such curious subjects as you, you know, Kit."

"She was a notorious French murderess," replied Brent, "and though perfectly sane and responsible, a religious maniac. She was only devoted to her own family, who were all more or less congenial [illegible], and she murdered quite ruthlessly for their benefit. Translate relations into terms of country and I think you will find the same phenomenon in Fräulein Schroeder. She's not a type of her country, of course. One must not be unfair enough to think that. It simply is that the authorities had the genius to use her type and make use of her."

"Kit, you positively make me go cold down my back. I shall have horrid visions tonight of fräulein murdering us all in our beds."

Brent smiled and continued placidly. "Fritz, too, is of the criminal type, though without brains or the religious conviction which justifies fräulein to herself, but you have only got to look at his thumbs to understand the type at once."

"His thumbs! Kit, you make me feel like a mere beginner who knows nothing. I have never noticed his thumbs."

"They are extraordinarily long," Brent told her, "reaching to the top joint of his first finger. Troppmann, who murdered the whole Kinck family, had thumbs like that, and so had several other more or less famous assassins."

A little shudder ran through Miriam, strong as her nerves were. The intrigue, the uncertainty all about her of which only she and Christopher were aware, the darkness in which of necessity they were groping, trusting very much to luck, all this, though in its way stimulating, yet every now and then overcame her with a prescience of disaster. And now this cold, matter of fact talk about criminal types added to her sense of discomfort. She glanced up again at Brent and he gave an almost imperceptible but reassuring wink of his eyelid.

"Walk from me, Percy," commanded Molly.

"Don't you worry any," he advised; "we're going to come out on top all right."

"It seems to me sometimes," said Miriam hesitatingly, "that you trust too much to intuition and to luck. Wouldn't it be better just to have the whole household arrested now? We've got enough evidence."

"Not on your life," said Brent. "You forget about Um. He's got to be settled with, too, and I don't mean to miss him if I can help it."

Fräulein was coming up through the garden, a little rusty brown figure, the black silk bag, in which she kept her knitting and other things, tucked under one arm, the inevitable umbrella under the other. She looked very insignificant, very quiet, very placid. She nodded in her dry little way to the assembled company as she went to the far end of the veranda and in through the French windows of the sitting room, shutting them after her with true German precision.

In the sitting room Mrs. Sanderson was awaiting with outward composure fräulein's return and the telegram from her son. She had not turned on the light, though the room, owing to the slope of the veranda roof outside, was already too dim for her to see to read, as her sight was not good. But like every other woman in the household she was knitting—a comforter for Charles.

"Ah, you finished soon, Luise," she said as the little brown figure stepped into the room. "Have you got what you wanted?"

"Yes, I have been most lucky," replied fräulein, looking down at her bag. "The light was good, all the English were at their tea, the cliffs were deserted; but one-half hour and my drawings were complete. Every detail of the harbor defenses."

"I congratulate you," said Mrs. Sanderson cordially.

"Dank dir, meine kameradin."

"Sh!" cautioned Mrs. Sanderson, "we must still be careful."

The little fräulein shrugged her shoulders. "Ach!" she said, "the English have no ears, how then should their walls have them? I saw all your English at their tea. Had I brought the news that our admiral had landed on their shores, they would still have demanded a second cup before asking where he had landed." She began to pace quickly up and down the room, her eyes, usually so mild, gleaming from behind their gold rimmed spectacles, her full brown skirts swinging with the energy of her movements. "They are fools, these English," she went on. "Fools and the sons of fools. They dwell in their fool's paradise, and bitter shall be their awakening, for it is into our hands that the Lord has delivered them."

"It is good that we have been able to take a part in the great work for the fatherland," replied Mrs. Sanderson with deep sincerity but less vehemence than fräulein.

"And a great part," cried fräulein exultantly. "Have you news from Charles yet?"

"Not yet. I expect a telegram from him any moment."

"And the spy, the traitor? Has Fritz discovered anything?"

"I will ring and ask him," said Mrs. Sanderson, crossing to the bell. "He did suspect Pollock, I know, an unlikely person it seems to me, but Charles said something about Brent which seems to me more unlikely still."

"Ach, Brent, he seems an idiot and a coward. Even his own people despise him. All the same," replied fräulein, "we must suspect every one at present and I have a curious feeling about Brent. It seems to me almost at times as though something in me recognized something in him; and I say to myself, 'Young man, are you quite such a fool as you look?' And then I test him with something and watch him carefully, and lo! he is even a worse fool than he looks. And since I prefer trusting to reason rather than to feelings which are quite irrational, I have come to the conclusion that my reason is probably right and that he is a fool. But all the same one must be careful. Ach, here is Fritz."

"Are they still at tea, Fritz?" asked Mrs. Sanderson.

"They are at last finishing," replied Fritz. "I have just taken them of toast the fourth time. Oh, dat it might shoke dem in de drost!"

"Business, business," said fräulein tartly. "Have you discovered anything yet?"

"Nodings for sure, but I have mine eyes fixed upon one man."

"Ah, Brent?" asked fräulein quickly.

"No, Mistair Pollock, it is always Mistair Pollock I suspect. I leave him by himself not ever. I keep on thinking of what he talk on that telephone about German spies."

"You do well to watch him, Fritz," said fräulein—it was curious how she took the lead in the presence of Mrs. Sanderson in that lady's own drawing room—"for though I do not know that Mr. Pollock is clever enough to have found out anything, yet he has a bad and cruel face like a codfish. He is no man to trust. Come and tell us immediately you find out anything more, Fritz."

"What about the plan of the mine field that Mr. Charles gave you?" said Mrs. Sanderson. "Has it gone?"

Fritz waved his arms with an enthusiastic gesture. "All is ready. I have the map rolled up, it is only to tie it round the leg of my last, my most peautiful pird, and then he will fly, faster than the train, straight to his beloved Germany."

"And your drawings, Luise?" said Mrs. Sanderson, turning to her.

"It is necessary that I make tracings from them," explained fräulein. "The originals are for the pleasure of my friends, you understand, they are works of art. The tracings are but an outline with my notes of strategical values. We must arrange about that later, but now"—as the sound of voices was heard drawing nearer along the veranda—"the Philistines are upon us."

Fritz went out while Mrs. Sanderson opened the French windows and with her pleasant smile asked every one to come in.

Mr. Pollock stood aside with an elaborate air to allow Mrs. Lee and Miss Myrtle to pass. Then he, too, stepped pompously in over the raised sill with an action extraordinarily like that of a cock strutting across a farm yard. He was followed by Brent and Pennicuik, the former smiling foolishly and twirling his eyeglass.

"I say," he called out to Mrs. Sanderson, "Pennicuik has brought us great news. What do you think? Those famous troops from the north are coming through at last. Nice little surprise for the Germans, eh? Hello! What the devil's that?"

"That" was the crash of a broken plate which Fritz had just been carrying along the veranda as he "cleared up."

"Careless beggar," said Mr. Pollock. "I don't know what's come over him, I'm sure—seems to be blundering about all day. Well, it's great news, isn't it, Mrs. Sanderson? I wonder your son didn't say anything about it this morning."

"A servant of the admiralty," remarked Mrs. Sanderson primly, "is not permitted to reveal the secrets of his country even to his mother."

"O, it's got to be kept dark, of course," said Pennicuik. "I had it on jolly good authority, but I can't tell where I got it. If it's going to be a little surprise packet for the Germans we have got to lie jolly low about it. They've got their beastly spies all over the place. O, I beg your pardon, Fräulein Schroeder."

"Ah, Mr. Pennicuik," protested fräulein, "it is not kind of you always to forget that I am English."

"My aunt at Leamington will be awfully pleased," commented Brent cheerfully. "Thousands of them, Pennicuik says."

"A hundred thousand have gone through the country already," said Pennicuik, "and another hundred thousand are coming through tonight. That will tickle the blighters up a bit."

"I expect Charles will be able to tell us all about it when he comes down, as it's already got out," said Mrs. Sanderson. "That is, if he's able to get down. He's going to wire me."

"By the way," went on Pennicuik, "such a joke. I have got to go on guard on the cliff path tonight, just at the bottom of the garden here."

"All by yourself?" asked fräulein.

"O, of course I shall be relieved. I get two hours on and four off. I start at 6 and go on till 8, then somebody else takes the job over and I don't come on again till 12."

"Dear me, that seems most extraordinary waste of time," said Mr. Pollock; "what on earth is there for you to guard on the cliff path?"

"Heaven alone knows," replied the ingenuous Pennicuik, "I don't. But if you should feel like strolling along the top of the cliff after 6 keep your eyes open and be ready to answer if I challenge you."

Molly slipped into the room in time to hear this last sentence. She was slightly pink about the eyelids, but she had powdered her little nose and seemed as usual.

"What's that you're saying, Percy?" she asked. "Are you talking about being on guard tonight? I think I shall come out and try to bribe you, but I shouldn't have the remotest notion what to do if you were to challenge me."

"O, I can tell you that," declared Brent. "He pops up from behind a pebble somewhere and says, 'Halt, who goes there?' Then, if your tongue doesn't stick to the roof of your mouth with fright, you answer him as quickly as ever you can get it out, 'Friend'. Then he'll say, 'Advance one and give the countersign.' Then you mutter 'Jerusalem' or 'artichoke' or the first long word that comes into your head, and he says, 'Pass, friend, all's well.' That's right, isn't it, Pennicuik?"

"Good Lord, no," exploded Percy with a good natured laugh. "All that's been washed out. South Africa taught us one or two better than that. As soon as I've said 'Halt' I take cover and get ready to fire, and then I do fire, and that's all there is to it."

"Dear me," simpered the Myrtle, with a nervous giggle, "this does feel like war. I don't suppose the young couples on the cliff will like it, but how safe we shall all feel with Mr. Pennicuik at the bottom of the garden."

"I shall certainly go out and have a chat to cheer you up," declared Molly, by a strong effort refraining from glancing at Brent to see the effect of her speech.

"Afraid it's against the rules," said Pennicuik, "but between my times of being on duty I'll look in here for a whisky and soda, if I may."

"Do, please, Mr. Pennicuik," said Mrs. Sanderson cordially, "you will find everything ready." She spoke quite placidly, though she heard Fritz coming down the passage and knew he was probably bringing the telegram. When she saw the orange missive lying on the slayer she opened it with tranquil fingers. "There is no answer, Fritz," she said after a moment. "My son is coming down," she announced to the rest of the room. "If you will excuse me I will go and see the cook about the dinner."

"I must be off, too," said Pennicuik. "Got to get back to duty. Many thanks about tonight, Mrs. Sanderson." He held the door open for her and went out in her wake.

"I wonder, dear fräulein," asked Miss Myrtle, "whether you would be so very kind as to give me another of those admirable little pilules of yours for the digestion? I am still somewhat upset from the chill I contracted last night."

"But certainly, dear Miss Myrtle," replied fräulein, opening her black satin bag and turning the contents upon the table. "Here you are."

"Hello, a sketch book!" remarked Brent, strolling over and picking it up before fräulein could prevent him. Indeed, she forced herself to check the movement that would have betrayed her anxiety.

"O, you must let me look at it, you must really. I am awfully keen on sketching. I'm a bit of an artist myself."

"But certainly, Mr. Brent," replied fräulein.

And indeed he was already turning over the pages.

"Though you will find nothing in my poor efforts to admire. These are simply souvenirs for my friends who have been down here with me. I am going to what you call 'work up' a water color from them for Mrs. Sanderson."

"By George, are you really, though?" asked Brent. "That's a good idea. I had no idea you were such a topping good artist." He turned the pages till he found the view of the harbor she had been at work on that afternoon. "Hello," he went on, "here's a little picture of the harbor. You know, that simply tickles me to death."

"Tickles you? I don't understand," replied fräulein, looking steadily at him.

"I mean it's so ripping good, you have got it absolutely to the life. But I say, what's that tree doing there?" And he pointed with his finger at an aggressively green little tree which adorned one corner of the sketch. "Isn't that where the fort is really?" he asked amiably.

"Ah, yes, but the fort it is so unbeautiful," replied fräulein. "I claim an artist's license and I make it instead a tree."

"O, I see," exclaimed Brent. "And this flag pole at the end of the pier?"

"The same idea, Mr. Brent. The lighthouse, it is so stiff and ugly, I put a flag, it is so much prettier."

"You have got the true artistic temperament, what?" asked Brent.

"I fear, Mr. Brent, that you what you call 'pull my leg,'" said fräulein, with what for her was almost an approach to archness.

She took the book from him and snapped the elastic band around it once more.

"No, really, I assure you," said Brent earnestly. "I'm not playing the giddy goat. I don't know much about it, but I'm awfully keen on painting. I know what I like and all that, you know. I wonder, fräulein, if you would give me a little sketch some time, just a little memento of a pleasant holiday and all that sort of thing?"

"I will not forget," said fräulein graciously; "it will give me much pleasure. But now, if you will excuse me, I must go on with my water color for Mrs. Sanderson, while the effect is still fresh in my memory."

Brent with his usual airy politeness opened the door for her. Mr. Pollock also stalked toward it.

"You needn't shut it, Brent," said he, "my daughter and I are both going out. Come, Molly, I wish you to go for a walk with me."

"O, father!" expostulated Molly. She had thought that after tea she and Chris must really get a little time alone together.

"Come, Molly, I wish it," said her parent majestically.

"I'd go for a good long walk if I were you, Mr. Pollock," advised Brent cheerfully.

"Indeed, sir, and may I ask why?" said Mr. Pollock, fixing him with a cold stare.

"Your liver seems to want shaking up a bit," replied the young man innocently.

Mr. Pollock gave vent to that untranslatable sound which is always written "Pshaw!" and marched out of the room, followed by a reluctant Molly.

Brent gave her a smile and managed to meet her eyes, saying under his breath, "Later, dear," which sent her off a little reassured for the time being.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE LADY OF FASHION AND THE POET MEET THE QUEEN OF THE WILD MEN. BY WM DONAHEY.

ALTHOUGH the wild men, who had captured the Lady of Fashion and the Poet, were good to them, the two Teenie Weenies nevertheless were much alarmed as to what might happen, for the wild men kept their hands securely tied and watched them closely at all times.

When the wild men brought the two Teenie Weenies to the island where the savages lived the two little people were the center of much interest. The men and women, who were called Sabos, came running down to the water's edge jabbering excitedly in a language the Lady of Fashion and the Poet had never heard.

The women were curious little people. They were dressed in short dresses which came down to their knees and the cloth was woven out of thistle down and it was wonderfully soft. The women dressed their hair in a strange manner and the Lady of Fashion could hardly keep from laughing at them, for it was coiled up to a point high in the air, shaped much like an ice cream cone. Most of the men were dressed in frog skin trousers, while the children wore bits of cloth about their waists.

The men and women gathered around and carefully examined the two Teenie Weenies' clothes, especially the Poet's glasses, which were considered a very wonderful thing by the wild little people.

After a time the Lady of Fashion and the Poet were led along a path toward the center of the island followed by a great crowd of Sabos. Presently one of the wild men who was walking ahead suddenly dropped to his knees and kissed the ground. Looking up, the two Teenie Weenies saw a very big turtle with a very big fat woman sitting on its back. A man who walked beside the turtle with a hook in his hand gave the turtle a sharp blow on the head and the big fellow pulled his head into his shell and stopped.

"Well!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion, "I wonder who this fine lady can be?"

"Why, why this must be the queen of the Sabos," gasped the astonished Poet.

The Poet had guessed correctly, for the fat lady was no other than her Royal Highness Queen Mooie, queen of the wild men.

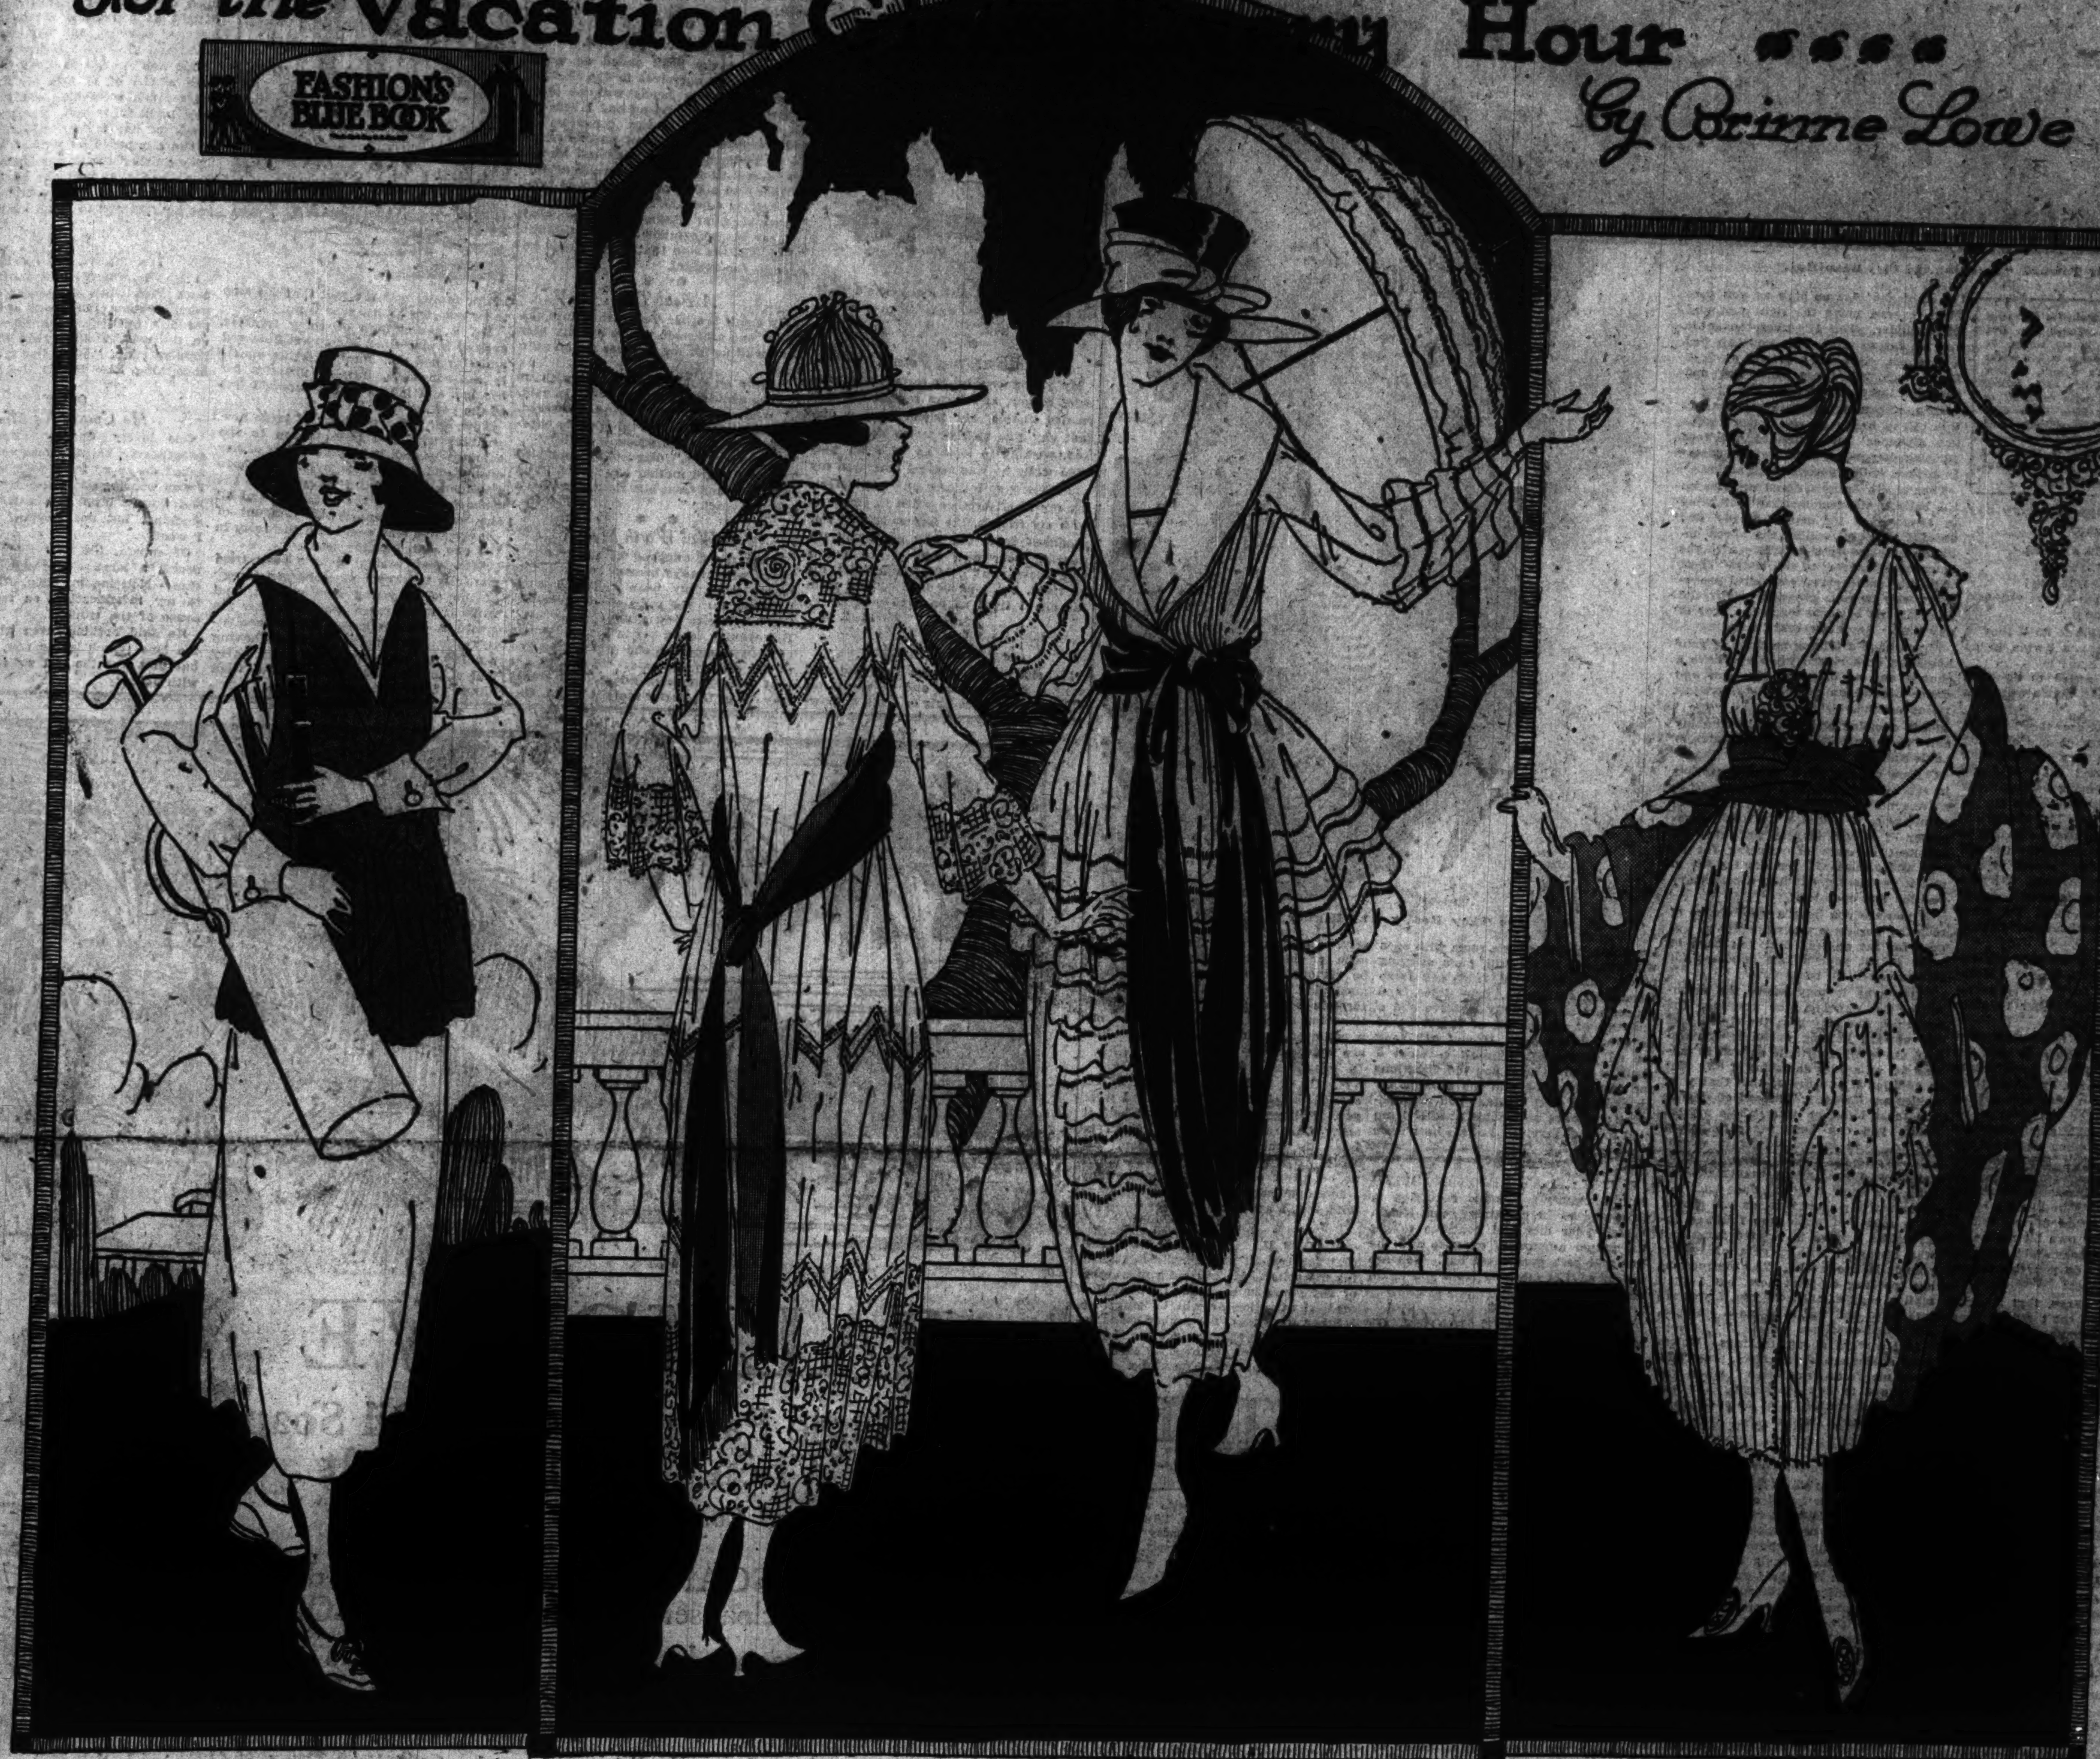
FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

By Corinne Lowe



From Sweater to Evening Frock Simplicity of Design Is Interrupted Only by Marvelous Sashes and Embroidery and Fine Handwork.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you haven't any talent for simplicity, work for it. Take classes in it. Go and consider the humble blade of grass, or the plain, substantial, unfussed contours of the prairies, or the chaste, elegant outlines of the radiator pipes. For unless you be versed in the art of wearing simple things, you are just as much out of it as a cannibal eating breakfast food in his own home town.

Ever simpler, simpler, simpler grow the lines of frock and suit. It started in during the spring with the slimpsy things of silk and georgette and satin. It keeps up with all the influx of summer things. Today voiles and crepes and linens are regular express trains from neck to hem. There are no stops to take on any frills.

The one exception is in the way of embroidery. Embroidery do keep up most wonderfully. There are light strokes and broad strokes, delicate stitchings, fairylike beadings, chainette designs—every twist and turn that it is possible for thread to take. And in the fall, so they say, there is going to be more of it than ever.

For instance, at an exhibition of these light summer frocks which we have just seen a white voile with plaited panels front and back is set off with chainette embroidery of delft blue. A pale maize linen—and both maize and string color are extremely popular for thin frocks—has a border design in white and yellow floss embroidery. Still another white voile admits a banded design of white soutache braid on both bodice and skirt.

By the introduction of embroidery, these summer things do tune up wonderfully. In spite of their simple cut they play the catchiest waltzes of color. Among such melodies may be mentioned one which is now extremely popular in Paris and which is noted on some of the imported models we have seen on this side. It consists of putting sky blue embroidery on citron background, and the effect is really charming.

But there is one other detail of trimming which joins with embroidery in livening up the thin dress. This consists of the sash. We go in for these almost as much as the toreador, and many are the inventions which we have sought out for them. For example, the white voile which we have mentioned as having plaited panels back and front and a design of chainette embroidery of deft blue is given its chief character by a wide sash of dotted foulard. The white voile with the soutache bands received its accent from a white crepe sash dotted with red. And so it goes. The polka dotted sash for thin frocks is much in evidence, and so, too, is the one which is of two different colors.

Such is the kind worn by the lady in the one piece voile who stands second from the left. This girdle is of heavy satin and the black of the outer side reveals diplomatic glimpses of the gold color on the reverse side. For the rest, this frock is trimmed with real filet collar and cuffs, and the odd pointed tucks are of the finest hemstitched variety.

A word about these one piece frocks. Everybody is wearing them. They occur in linen, in voile, in crepe, and in satin. They are distinguished generally by collars and cuffs of exquisite venise or filet. And sometimes, as in the case of satin, they are plaited from collar bone to ankle bone. Here, as in every other domain of summer clothes, fine handwork—hemstitching, tucks, embroidery—are the formula of perfection.

"But I'm too old to wear those guileless bags with the sashes," protests the woman of from thirty to forty. Believe us, never! When the roll of one piece dress wearers is called it takes in everybody from five to fifty. It's altogether a matter of figure. If you are fat and eighteen you cannot wear the chemise frock. If you are slim and forty the easy-to-get-into thing is yours. One business woman whom we know became a sudden convert to the chemise frock. She is thirty eight and her debutante sister was outraged at the thought. "You're too old for such things," said she with the serene judgment of youth. But the business woman who has tried them has never looked better.

Georgette was never more liked than it is this season. For the summer evening frock white georgette is almost ideal. Here again, however, there is little exuberance of line. Many chiffon and georgette gowns for both afternoon and evening wear are absolutely unadorned—even by the ramping embroidery. Thus in the exhibition which we mentioned we found a little dancing frock of white georgette made with a READING from left to right, we have, first of all, a rose colored silk jersey of sleeveless efficiency combined with a white jersey skirt. The two afternoon frocks in the center are respectively one of the ubiquitous chemise frocks—this in white voile with filet collars and cuffs, fine hemstitching, and a sash of heavy satin which is black on one side and gold color on the other—and a costume of pale pink georgette with hemstitched bands of crepe de chine. This, too, arrives at smartness via the sash, for here heavy satin of purple hue repeats the message of the hat. Exquisitely girlish and lovely is the evening frock at the extreme right where pale blue chiffon is made up over a plaited underskirt of the same material and touched off with white net dotted in blue.

The afternoon frock worn third from the left is likewise convicted of trimming. Of pale pink georgette, the bands which you see fluffing about so spiritedly on panel and hip-flounce and sleeves are folds of crepe de chine of the same color attached with hemstitching so as to give the appearance of tucks. Perhaps you may not like the idea of a purple satin sash with this rose colored frock. Nevertheless, that is the combination undertaken here, and if you have any doubts about its beauty go and ask Professor Nature why violets and roses look so awfully well together. Completing this frock is a hat of purple satin with swathing fold and under brim of the pink georgette.

To make the frock for the summer hop lovely and airy and full of the spirit of youth, of the first waltz with him, of the walk on the piazza with the moon drenched mountain valley beyond, is a task that has not been too much for simplicity. The loveliest and very most romantic of these gowns are, as has been said, of white chiffon or georgette. Here, however, at the extreme right, we have given a lovely creation of soft, misty blue chiffon. It is made over a plaited underskirt of plaited blue chiffon and both sleeves and the artful drapery at the sides of the skirts are of the most exquisite blue dotted white net.

The other pole of Miss Vacation Girl's needs is met by the sleeveless sweater of rose colored satin which slips on over a shirtwaist of white silk and tops a skirt of white jersey. It will be seen that this conscientious young woman of fashion has not ignored Friend Polka Dot. The fact of it is that if you cannot have a sash or girdle of this speckled material you put a band of it on your hat. In this example of what to do when golfing a hat of white jersey adopts the blue and white polka dot. And in the combination of rose colored jersey with navy blue band the young person may rest serene in the fact that she has observed the final law of this year's color combination—be navy blue and rose!

But, although the hours of our vacation may safely be entrusted to the round of "clos" pictured, the wise girl will include one of black satin. The whim for this has deepened into a real passion and the fashion folks assure us that during the late summer and fall everything is going to be black satin.

Tricots and serges are also promised for coming months and often skirts of these materials in dark blue are combined with bodices of black satin.

OWED TO YOUR ANKLES.

They ain't no treat if they're fat!
They ain't no treat if they're lean!
They're only a treat when they're very neat
And shapely, slender, and trim!

WHAT you gwine to do if they're fat? What you gwine to do if they're lean?

What you gwine to do—well, dat am up to you. But here's what you may if you will.

Beef to the heels, are they? Well, you have a far better chance of being acquitted by a male jury of murdering your favorite husband than of being found guilty of harboring beef on your ankles. If you don't believe me spy on friend husband. Follow his wandering, willful gaze while you are pretending to window shop. Is he answering the call of her "come-on-along" eyes? He is not. Not if he's a regular man. Why, he couldn't tell if her hair were of a strawberry or a blackberry tone. But what he couldn't tell you about her ankles! Wow!

There's something to the mother's answer to the small son's query: "Mother, what are ankles for?" Wise mamma: "Principally for father to stare at."

So, since that's what they're for principally, let us contribute to father's pleasure by taking fat off some ankles and putting it on others, by taking them out of lisle or cotton hose and putting them into bootsilk or real silk if we can afford it. For male admiration was the thing we sought when we forced our ankles so visibly upon the landscape. And with the summer season upon us and its impending increased disclosure of ankles and legs, looks like we might have some work ahead of us. But if each of us does her own bit mebbe we can "keep the city beautiful" after all.

So, here's how to do your bit toward more beautiful ankles:

If the bones are large, that is something difficult. You can't reduce bones after they have become set. But you can dress the ankles to look their best in dark hose of as fine quality as you can afford. Silk undoubtedly makes the feet and ankles look better. But the boot silk, which sells for 50 cents a pair and which wear as well, if not better, than the other, give the same effect of neatness and slenderness. Far be it from me to encourage extravagance, especially in these times, but let me advise you not to economise in this matter of stockings if your ankles need toning down. You can economize on something else. On shoes and stockings you cannot afford it!

If the ankles and legs are fat, go in for a general reduction diet. Rarely do we find fat ankles and legs where a general reduction would not also be an improvement. Cut down on the foods that make you fat—bacon, ham, pork, and the fat of any meat, cereals, breakfast foods, bread and biscuits; potatoes, macaroni, milk, butter, cream, cheese, rich gravies, candy, pastries, ice cream, and alcohol in any form. In addition do these exercises (or if you are not fat otherwise and just want legs and ankles reduced, these exercises will do the work for you if you are faithful):

First, lie flat on the floor on your back; keep arms close to sides; then, with your right shoulder and the toes of your left foot working in unison, stretch the body as much as you can. In other words, keeping shoulders and heels on the floor, stretch the foot right to the toes' ends as far as you can and the right shoulder as high as you can. Then reverse, using the right foot and left shoulder. This stretches the ankle and leg fat so much that you can feel a soreness. But don't overdo at first. Begin with five times each foot and shoulder, increasing to 50 or 100.

Then, remaining in same position, do this: Keep hands at sides; flex thighs and abdomen, foot extended and toes pointing downward, kick feet alternately upward with vigorous thigh action.

Then this exercise: Stand up; rise on the balls of the feet, neither foot being in advance of its mate. Slowly and steadily sink by bending the knees until the upraised heels interfere with the downward progress of the body. Then, with the same slow, controlled movement, rise to your greatest height, not allowing the heels to touch the floor at any time. Repeat several times.

If you have a talking machine in your home put on a record when you have a chance and as often as you can and dance around on your tiptoes, or just tiptoe around.

Stair climbing and mountain climbing and running are other first class aids to ankle and leg reducing.

Classic dancing is a wonder worker in this respect, too, and the swimming movements of the legs have tremendous value. Or, if you are the lucky possessor of an old bicycle, you have an excellent measure of reducing fat on legs and ankles. If you don't want to ride it outdoors get it into a stationary position and operate it.

So you see you have a wide choice of reducing measures; consequently no excuse for fat ankles. But you have to work to get your ankles in shape for this summer. So begin now.

Curious as it may seem, the swimming, the dancing, the running, the squatting, the bicycling, the tiptoe, and the upward kicking exercises enumerated above all contribute as well to putting fat on ankles as taking it off. But in addition if you are so thin that your ankles are "skinny" instead of slender you must build up your whole system before you can hope for satisfactory results. And in order to gain weight you have to get enough sleep and rest; you have to eat foods that make for fat. You know it can be done and in a comparatively short time, as was proved by a model of mine who followed instructions I have in printed form and was rewarded with a gain of twenty pounds in five weeks. The instructions are too long to print here, but I shall mail a copy of them to you if you are interested and will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Just a word about stockings. Unless your ankles are nigh perfect, pray "deliver me from temptation" when you start out to buy stockings. You can cover up a multitude of unlovely shins with black silk hose.

Answers to Inquiries.

MARIBELLE: THAT'S A NEW ONE on me. I never heard of an appliance known as a nose shaper that you wear to reduce the nose with. Massage is the only thing I know of for this. Here's the best formula for skin food you can find: One-half ounce of white wax, one-half ounce of spermaceti, one ounce of lanolin, two ounces of sweet almond oil, one ounce of cocoanut oil, two ounces of orange flower water. Melt all the oils and wax in a double boiler, remove from the fire and beat until cold, adding slowly and gradually the orange flower water to which five drops of tincture of benzoin have been added. Be sure that the ingredients are fresh and of the best quality. I have detailed massage instructions. If you want them, send stamped, addressed envelope, please.

* *

BEAUTY SEEKER: THE COMplexion ills that can be traced to constipation and poor circulation are too numerous to mention. So it behooves you to remove the cause before applying external remedies. Exercise in the open air as much as possible; practice deep breathing, and sleep in a room with open windows, or, better still, on a sleeping porch. Eat plenty of fruit and fresh vegetables. Rhubarb, figs, dates, and prunes are all decidedly laxative and a quantity of one or all of them should be eaten every day. If you will send me an addressed, stamped envelope I shall be glad to send you the directions for deep breathing and the formula for an excellent cold cream. You are mistaken; you are no trouble at all. I am glad to be of service. Let me hear from you again.

* *

S. J. W.: I AM REJOICING WITH you; a twenty-two-pound reduction in two months is certainly good losing. Watch your diet and continue to get the proper amount of exercise and the loss will be a permanent one. You are welcome. Let me hear from you again some time.

* *

HENRY: I HAVE KNOWN OF scars that were successfully removed by the electric needle. The treatment should, of course, be given by an expert. Light scars of the kind left by acne or kindred complexion ills can be removed by daily massage with a good skin food. I shall mail you the formula for skin food and the directions for massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope. You are welcome.

* *

H. C.: I WOULD NOT TRY TO change the shape of my nose if I were you. Pulling will certainly not help it any. Cabareting has been known to leave its mark on noses. Then, too, H. C., curly hair and Grecian noses do not grow on every bush. The lady whose opinion you value most will agree with me, I am sure.

* *

GLADYS U.: I WOULD SUGGEST that you consult your physician regarding the goiter. He can tell you whether or not yours is the kind that requires medical attention or will be outgrown. Neither Job's tears nor amber beads are of any value in effecting a cure. I have neck massage instructions. Please send me stamped, addressed envelope.

WHEN ON A VISIT.

"A VISIT—what is it? A time when all the amenities glow in their prime." Among the things to do to secure these amenities one of the first is to have the limitations of the visit definitely agreed upon by hostess and guest beforehand. Otherwise embarrassing situations may arise which are distressing to all the people involved. Such predicaments as the unmet, unwelcomed guest, or the distracted hostess who had expected to be free from all week end visitors by Monday noon and finds them still on her hands that evening, could be avoided easily by a little forethought and prearrangement.

It is the hostess' duty to make her guest feel perfectly free from the moment of her arrival. Let her room be neat and agreeably warm and her bed well aired and well made. Too often does a hostess neglect to ascertain that the guest chamber bed is comfortable and little does she realize how many wretched nights may have been spent there when the occupant was too polite to complain.

It is only courteous for the material pleasures to be well supplied before the esthetic enjoyments are undertaken. If a hostess provides plentiful "animal comfort" and insures her guest's freedom she has performed the greater part of her duty.

On the other hand, the guest has certain definite obligations to meet. Among the most important of these is the necessity for punctuality. Promptness in arising when summoned and in arriving at the dining room is essential. Besides being on time for meals and engagements, it is only civil of her to keep her room in "spick and span" order and well aired.

Before accepting invitations from people outside of the family she is visiting she will—if she be well bred—consult her hostess' plans and wishes regarding the disposal of her time.

Tact and consideration on both sides are necessary to make the visit a pleasant memory for both hostess and guest.

B. H.: It is proper to introduce your companion to your hostess first. You might say, "Mrs. A., may I present Miss B.?" and then, "Miss B., may I present Mr. A.?" It is better form to call upon a young woman before asking her to a dance; otherwise her parents might not care to have her accept your invitation.

* *

GLADYS: When attending hotel tea-dances young girls can order iced tea, coffee, chocolate, ginger ale, lemonade, orangeade, or grape juice. The correct thing to wear at such dances is a suit or afternoon dress with hat to match.

* *

MRS. M.: White gloves may be worn with a tailored suit when paying calls. A married woman leaves two of her husband's cards and one of her own when calling upon a married woman; and one of each when calling upon a widow or unmarried woman.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

A LEAP YEAR BIRTHDAY.

ONE spring, years ago, when I was 26, I found that a pretty, little, vivacious school teacher in our town was the one creature in all the world that God had meant for me.

I learned that she attended all the church services. In consequence, all the regular services, the Sunday school, prayer meeting, etc., never became so popular for me as then. I somehow saw to it that I was her escort home from every church affair. She seemed so young and small and dainty that I was not willing to trust her with any one else.

Well, in the course of time I declared my love and asked her to wait long enough for me until I was ready to marry her. I had my nerve. I remember the night well—it was one wintry evening after prayer meeting. She looked at me quizzically and asked me how old I thought she was. I couldn't see what this had to do with the question, but I said "about 22," although I only thought her about 16.

"Charlie," she shook her head sadly, "next Feb. 29 I shall be 28." And here she followed with a long discourse on the unwisdom of an older woman marrying a younger man.

But I wasn't to be fazed. She always would be a little girl to me. So I said, "Sweetheart," I said, "you are going to be 28 Feb. 29? Fine. Then your following birthday four years hence will make you 29. I shall be 28. And then, by your next following birthday—don't you see?" She did see, dear girl. I left her that night with her promise true.

We are 'way up in years now, but best of all, thank God, in spirit.

Ice-Mint Brings Joy To Tired, Aching Feet

If warm days and modern foot-wear have given you aching, burning, swollen feet, corns, or painful calluses, here is real foot-comfort for you at last.

From the cooling, dewy mint-beds of old Japan come the fresh, soothing ingredients that in just a few weeks have made Ice-Mint the most popular foot remedy in America.

Rub a little Ice-Mint on any tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, and shortly the corn or callus will loosen so that it can be lifted out easily with the fingers.

ICE-MINT

is a clean, creamy, snow-white, non-poisonous substance and does not inflame or even irritate the most tender skin. There is no pain and not one bit of soreness while applying Ice-Mint, or afterwards. It acts so gently, so magically, that you will never again run the risk of blood-poisoning by cutting a corn. Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, also toughened calluses also loosen and come off under the remarkable influence of Ice-Mint.

No matter what you have tried or how many times you have been disappointed, you will revel in the cooling, soothing comfort that Ice-Mint brings.

Try it! Ask your druggist today for a small jar of Ice-Mint and learn for yourself what solid foot-comfort really is. You'll like it immensely.

Small Brother Contest.

Given Fair Warning.

My chum's friend was just going up the front walk to her home when her little brother came out and said: "Does it hurt very bad to be ditched?"

"Why, I don't know, I'm sure," the man replied. "Why do you ask?"

"Well, I heard sister say she'd wait till after the shows were all over before she ditched you."

In Borrowed Finery.

My young brother is certainly a mischief maker, and I can see all my aircastles tumble. My friend from a distant city was visiting in my home town and, wishing to look as nice as possible while he was here, I borrowed my chum's new spring coat and hat. Meeting my small brother when in company with my friends, the former said: "For goodness' sake, sis, why don't you try wearing your own duds, so a fellow will know you?" My brother got his all right, but I never heard again from the one I tried so hard to please.

He Detested Artifice.

My sister had a beau that detested artifice in a woman, and as my sister did not wear false hair or teeth or powder or paint she was the one woman for him until one evening they were to attend a concert. When he arrived my sister was not ready, so he played awhile with my niece, a bright little miss of 4 years, and the time was slipping by when he suggested that she go see what was keeping aunty.

She did. Then she rushed downstairs and in a tragic tone exclaimed, "Aunty can't find her bustle!"

My sister collapsed when she heard it and her beau departed in haste, but the rest of the family laughed for a week.

Keeping Score for Me.

One night my beau called as usual and we seated ourselves in the library. Directly over our heads was an open register. Soon my friend and I became deeply interested in our conversation and we were conscious of no one near. To be plain, he leaned over and kissed me several times. In the meantime my brother had gone upstairs and was taking it all in from the register above. In the midst of our kissing we were startled to hear his high pitched voice exclaim: "Say, sis, ma said that seven would be enough for tonight."

A Foul Tip.

My small brother Ted rushed into the parlor one afternoon where sat my new beau waiting for me to dress for an auto trip.

"Come on out and play ball with us fellows while sis gets rigged up," he said.

"Why, sonny," my friend answered, "I don't know the first thing about baseball; never played a game in my life."

"That's queer," disgustedly mumbled Ted. "I heard mother say to sis, 'You remember and treat him right, for he is a splendid catch.'"

It Was Worth More.

Being much annoyed at sister, age 6 years, who always became seated in the parlor when my beau called, I said, "Florence, if you remain out this evening I will give you a dime tomorrow." But evening found her in the customary seat in the parlor and when I looked at her crossly she said: "I don't want that dime you promised me if I would stay out of the parlor tonight."

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless act or tendency of your past [illegible]? Enough to Break the Ice.

When my sister, Pauline, was 17 she was invited to a party in the country. The thing which made it a big event in our family was the fact that she was to be escorted by her first beau.

He, a young man of many freckles, arrived in due time, somewhat flustered and starched up. Pauline, being equally self-conscious, hurried upstairs for her hat and gloves and a farewell dab of the powder rag.

Now, we had a neighbor of large proportions who had been bidden to the same party and, having no escort of her own, decided to come over and share Pauline's. This added immensely to the embarrassment of the situation, and all the way to the party the amount of conversation was small and the room in the one seated buggy less.

After their arrival sister's beau tried manfully to swap his second girl to any of the other young men present, and while it made much merriment for the crowd it did not lessen his responsibility. So, during the evening, having nothing to worry her, the third party had a much more joyous time than either of her enforced partners.

When they started on their return trip she was so high spirited and happy that she forgot the scarcity of room in the buggy and as they were passing a ditch filled with water she gave a twitter of delight at a remark of sister's beau, lost her balance, and slid—ruffles, ribbons, and all—into the ditch.

This was enough to break the ice for even a girl of 17 and her first beau. After much screeching and scrambling they hauled her out, a sorry looking wreck of her former self, all her high spirits dampened as well as her frock. They finished the journey homeward on foot. And that beau—he hardly waited to say good-bye and never to this day has he returned to make his party call.

Humiliated and Finished.

I was humiliated and finished at the same time when my choice called one evening some ten years ago and apparently by design the piece of music on the usually filled rack was a then popular song, "Why Don't You [illegible] Something Else Beside the [illegible]?"

He Comes No More.

One lovely Sunday afternoon my sweetheart called unexpectedly and asked me to go for a walk in the park. I was wearing some new oxfords, which had worn a large hole in the toe of my stocking, but not stopping to change I went.

Of course, the first thing that happened, a large cinder slipped into my shoe. Noticing my limp, John insisted, to my mortification, on removing the cause of the trouble.

He said nothing, even when he saw the hole (much larger now, of course), but that was the last walk I ever took with John.

PALMOLIVE

The Same Palm and Olive Oil Soap As When You First Used It

—And Costing But a Little More

PALMOLIVE SOAP is just what the name describes—a superfine cleanser made from Palm and Olive oils.

Its smooth, creamy lather has won hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic users. And because of our enormous output this famous soap has been offered at a wonderfully moderate cost.

Now the war has changed all manufacturing conditions. It has raised the price of our ingredients more than 100 per cent. It has limited the supply. But in spite of this enormous increase, Palmolive costs you but a little more. The dealer's increased cost necessitates this advance to you. We are bearing the brunt of these multiplied costs ourselves, without regard to profit, and using the same high grade of Palm and Olive oils.

How the War Affects Palmolive

Palm and Olive oils come from overseas—palm oil from West Africa, olive oil from Spain.

Both come through the war zone, so we must pay heavy freight rates plus excessive war insurance.

The submarine war has reduced ocean tonnage. There are embargoes and restrictions on the oils.

Thus we are hampered with scarcity as well as high prices. We have to search the market for supplies.

No Change in Formula —And the Same Size

In spite of these war-time vicissitudes, the Palmolive formula remains the same.

We use the same imported oils—in the same proportion. Every ingredient remains the same. The Palmolive cake is the same size and the same weight.

For as long as we make Palmolive it will be the same palm and olive oil soap. Those who want quality [illegible] can depend on Palmolive.

Palmolive—Two for 25 Cents —And Still the Economy Soap

Hereafter Palmolive will probably sell two cakes for a quarter. This slight increase will very little affect the economy of Palmolive.

For all users know how long Palmolive lasts—how the firm, fine-grained cake wears to wafer thinness.

And will realize how quality rather than price is the basis of economy.

Palmolive Shampoo, Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Powder, Talcum, Rouge, Lip Rouge and Shaving Stick, all for sale everywhere by leading dealers.

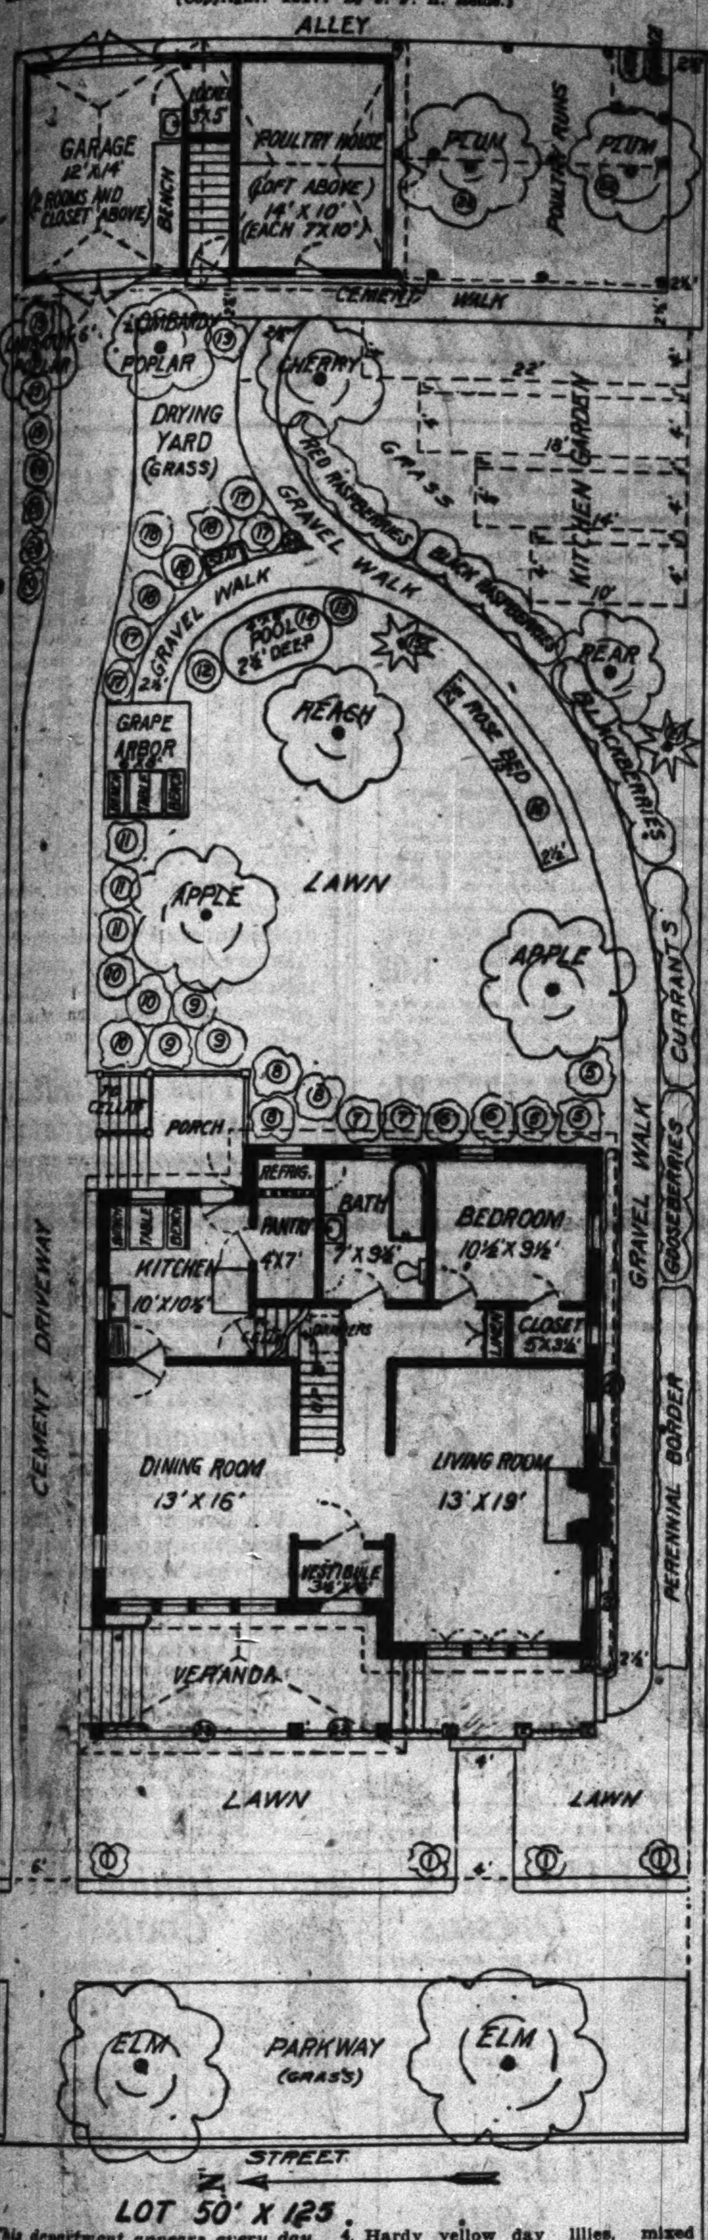
The Successful Home Garden.

By J. F. H. Heide

(Copyright: 1917: By J. F. H. Heide.)



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

No. 123.

(Planning the Home Lot (50x125).

As the width of the lot increases the possibilities for variation multiply. For the fifty foot lot, even though only 125 feet long, there are at least four fundamentally different conceptions of the plan. It may be a "corner" or an "inside" lot; the owner may need to utilize every available foot for the production of home vegetables and poultry, or he may delight in display and fail to appreciate the joys of home production. Finally, the plot may consist of two twenty-five foot lots, of which the owner may intend ultimately to dispose of one, so that the permanent establishment must be on one-half, while the other is devoted to temporary plantation and temporary uses.

We have taken for the first an "inside" lot, planning for the man of moderate means, who desires all the charm and comfort of a permanent home the space limitations permit.

Majestic shade trees are beautiful and desirable, but their height would not be sufficient to offset the loss of fruit trees, and either one or the other must be sacrificed on a lot of this size. Fruit trees, too, are shade trees; particularly the cherry, and if desired that may change places with one of the apple trees. It will be noticed that berry and currant bushes were utilized to fringe the path and they are fully as decorative as the average shrub. The argument that fruit trees and berry bushes require care to cause them to produce abundantly falls flat, for shade trees and ornamental shrubbery, too, require care if they are to serve their only purpose. Here is a home establishment any family might be proud of, whether viewed from the æsthetic or the utilitarian side. It would please the lover of the artistic while providing fresh fruits, flowers, vegetables, eggs, and poultry in abundance.

The one and one-half story house, though it measures only 36x36 feet, has room enough for a large family and the necessary help. Provision is made for comfortable living rooms over the garage for the chauffeur and gardener. The help is completely separated from the family. The buildings at the rear, the drying yard, and the vegetable garden are effectively screened and the view to the rear is idyllic. The front lends itself particularly well to floral embellishment by means of porch boxes and vases.

1. Barberry (Berberis Thunbergii).*
2. Vases, in accordance with article No. 89, June 3.
3. German and Japanese iris, alternating.
4. Hardy yellow day lilies, mixed (Hemerocallis Sieboldii, H. aurantiaca, H. Thunbergii, and H. Florham).
5. Golden bell (Forsythia fortunei).
6. Weigela (Diervilla rosea).
7. Hydrangea (Hydrangea paniculata).
8. Persian lilac (syringa persica).
9. High bush cranberry (Viburnum ambericanum).
10. Honeysuckle (Lonicera tatarica).
11. Mock orange (Philadelphus coronarius, var. grandiflorus).
12. Eulalia grass (Miscanthus sinensis).
13. Banded eulalia (Misconthus sinensis zebrina).
14. Be sure to keep goldfish in the pool; otherwise it will become a mosquito hatchery. Not only remove the fish in winter, but cover the cement basin with straw or manure to prevent cracking. Plant dwarf red water lily (Nymphæa graciella), dwarf white water lily (Nymphæa pgymæa), and dwarf yellow water lily (Nmphæa pygmæa Helvola).
15. Koster's blue spruce (Picera pungens glauca, var. Koster).
16. Carolina restout (hybrid tea), perpetual flowering roses. Plant in two rows, alternate spacing, 20 to 24 inches apart.
17. Dogwood (Cornus paniculata).
18. Cornelian cherry (Cornus mas).
19. Chinese Tamarisk (Tamarix Chinensis).
20. Tamarisk (Tamarix hispida).
21. Arborvitæ (Thuya occidentalis).
22. The plum trees are placed in the poultry runs not merely to provide needed shade, but also that the chickens may be at hand when the plum curculio are shaken down.
23. Porch boxes, in accordance with article No. 83, May 27.
24. Adam's Needle (yucca filamentosa).

In the perennial border filling the narrow strip between the house and the southern lot line, plants should be selected with a view to having something in bloom throughout the growing season, the tallest toward the lot line and the lowest next to the path. Select carefully from the perennial list published April 22, No. 48. Preserve a certain color harmony. If fond of cut flowers, keep that in mind, selecting from those marked "*".

A CORRECTION. In the article of July 1, No. 116, the description of the 30 foot lot plan failed to give the shrub for No. 2, beside the front porch. It was intended to plant there Hydrangea paniculata.

It will be noticed that a space of only three feet is allowed for each shrub on all the plans. This is in accord with modern practice. The tendency is to crowd the shrubs for a denser, more pleasing effect. They will thrive just as well, but require pruning from time to time, as explained in the article of March 18, No. 15.

How I Overcame Nervousness

Did you save yourself from becoming a nervous wreck? How? By getting into a different kind of work—a different mode of living—a different frame of mind? Write and tell about it. Working in the Garden.

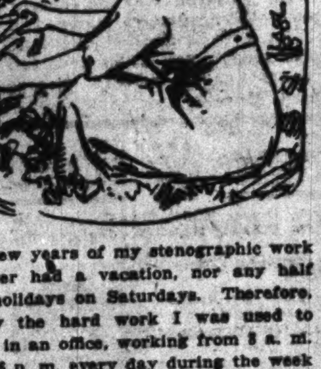
I have been a stenographer ever since I was 14 and as I am away up in the thirties now my first years of work date back to a time when vacations were not so readily given; in fact, until the last few years of my stenographic work I never had a vacation, nor any half day holidays on Saturdays. Therefore, finally the hard work I was used to doing in an office, working from 8 a. m. until 6 p. m. every day during the week began to be a little too much for me and I was almost a nervous wreck, even wishing for some sickness to overtake me just so I would get a chance to stay at home, lie quietly in bed with perhaps a nurse to take care of me, and rest, rest, rest.



We had always lived in a flat and my Sundays were usually spent either entertaining visitors or going to see my friends and acquaintances. The idea came to mother and myself to buy a little home, to be paid for on the installment plan. We are both great friends of nature and love flowers. We looked around and soon found a little cottage to suit our taste, and while it seemed rather hard for me to make the payments from my pay, still I managed to do it all right.

Then came the pleasure of making the garden. Our property is just the regular 25x125 foot lot and in back of the house it was all a piece of prairie land, but how soon it was changed! I did all the work myself, with the help of mother. We dug, weeded, and planted, brought bushes and trees from the nearby woods and soon the place was entirely changed. The work proved interesting to me and soon my nervousness began to vanish. The work in the open air was invigorating and strengthened me in every way.

I am still taking care of our little garden and my nervousness has been overcome as a consequence. Furthermore, nothing is so restful to the nerves (at least so far as I am concerned) as to sit under a shade tree in a comfortable steamer chair on Sunday afternoons, with a good book to read. I enjoy it more than any vacation trip to the country, with perhaps bad food, a hot room, mosquitoes, and other discomforts.

Let those who are nervous try working in the garden; it will surely give them a great deal of relief from their nervousness if not entirely cure them.

A Cold Water Cure.

I am the mother of four children. Several years ago when they were still small I was considered a nervous woman, suffering with spells that caused me to take to my bed. After doctoring for over a year there was absolutely no improvement. I had frequently noticed that my severe nervous spells were always preceded by a numbness in my hands and feet, so upon the suggestion of an old doctor I began a simple treatment which I firmly believe cured me entirely. Immediately upon noticing the symptoms of numbness I would place my feet and hands in cold water and after fifteen minutes I dried them. This treatment continued several times a day, and I continued it for about eight months, when to the surprise of my family and friends I was entirely cured.

Voice a Barometer.

A friend said recently that I didn't seem to have a nerve in my body. A few years ago I was extremely nervous, but became normal in the following manner: A teacher of expression started it by telling me to learn to listen to my own voice. I soon learned that when it became high pitched and rapid that I was in for a spell of nerves. Now whenever I am tempted to become excited I am warned by my voice and try to get my nerves in hand before they get the best of me. Then I've learned to eat enough nourishing food—cereals and bread and butter and milk. A week or so of careless diet always tends to bring back my old complaint. Most important of all, I've come to the conclusion that it's rather disgraceful to lose my self-control. At the first signal I begin to fight it out, and no matter how I'm twitching inside I'm outwardly calm and smiling.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

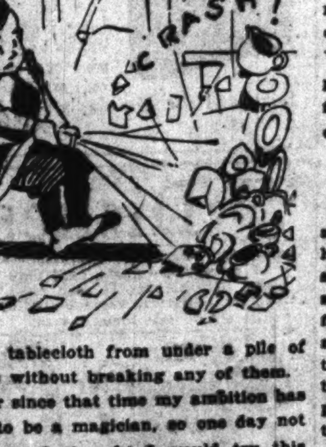
Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

To Be a Magician.

When I was a boy about 12 years old I saw a vaudeville show in which a magician performed some wonderful tricks. Among them was that of pulling a tablecloth from under a pile of dishes without breaking any of them.



Ever since that time my ambition has been to be a magician, so one day not long ago I thought I would try this trick myself. I piled a great many of mother's dishes on the table and gave the cloth a tremendous jerk. To my dismay the dishes came crashing to the floor.

The crash startled my mother, who was in the next room, and I got all that was coming to me.

His Fighting Nature.

I was a big, strong youngster and during my teens I took keen delight in licking all the boys in the neighborhood. My fame had spread, as such fame does, and I began to plan a future that would outshine either John L. Sullivan or Bob Fitzsimmons. But, alas for boyish dreams, I was only a young man when I wrestled with a foe that came almost downing me—tuberculosis. When I finally came out the victor, pronounced cured, I was glad that my fighting nature had made me game to conquer.

She Fell Short.

I have had a terribly great ambition, and that was to be a teacher. I used to have such wonderful day dreams while sitting near that beautiful fountain. To sit in the front of a large room, with flower pots on the window sills, and have a whole desk for myself always appealed to me as "great stuff." Well, I hate to admit it now, but I am a stenographer, sitting and pounding every day of the long year on that everlasting machine.

Still on the Job.

When I was a small chap my greatest ambition was to be a clerk in a grocery store. I thought it would be great to weigh out sugar and prunes. My brother had a boy friend who worked in a grocery and I would listen to his stories by the hour.

I have realized my ambition, but it did not quite come up to my expectations. I find it is no joke to carry potatoes from the basement nor unloading flour.

However, I am not a quitter and am still on the job.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Inclined to Despondency.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

If you were born during the week beginning today your nature shows a complexity of good and bad attributes that is perhaps not equaled anywhere else in the zodiac. You entered life under the tropical, changeable sign of Cancer, which makes of you a person difficult to understand, and is apt to result in an unusual manner of life. You are a unique combination of caustic criticism and kindly sympathy, but the maternal instinct is apt to predominate.

Economy, tenacity, and sympathy are your most prominent virtues, while despondency and extreme sensitiveness are perhaps your greatest failings. You are easily hurt, but yours is a sensitiveness of wounded pride and not misunderstood affection.

Persons born during this week are persistent and reflective, but they assume too readily the ills and worries of others. "Getting blue" should be regarded as a cardinal sin, and no matter what your natural inclinations are mingle freely with the pleasure seeking elements of the world. A healthful amount of recreation and companionship is absolutely essential to your well being. Cultivate a cheerful nature, because a tendency to morbidness is a serious handicap in life.

If circumstances are such that you must enter the business world you are fairly successful, but more noticeably so during the months of February and September, while Monday is given the preference over all other days. To this I might add that it would be well to cultivate a balance between duty and recreation, not allowing either to gain the upper hand.

Your genius is your home. Possessed of the maternal and home making instinct, Cancer people make model wives and husbands. Your sense of industry and economy, together with exquisite taste, go a long way toward making a successful home. You would also make a successful lawyer or physician, and your methods in either line would be characterized by originality and keen intuition.

Born on the 8th or 9th, you have great executive ability and nervous energy. These, together with the use of diplomacy, will pave a way to success and many friends.

Your colors are orange, green, and russet; birthstone, emerald and black onyx; you will be fortunate when the moon is on the rise, and should avoid entering on new business during its decrease.

A marriage with Pisces, Feb. 20-March 21, or with Taurus, April 21-May 21, will prove most harmonious.

Friendship Healthy and Harmless.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am the mother of a girl 14 years old. She has always been a homebody—not much for running around as I see other girls do. She graduated from grammar school a year ago and goes to high school now. There is a boy one year older than she is, who graduated a year before. They seem to like each other very much as friends (no love!). He always remembers her birthday with a card, also Valentine day.

"Do you think it very wrong if they go to the movies alone? I know his parents well, and they don't object at all to his asking her to go out. I always forbid her to talk to the boys on the corner, and tell her that if she must talk to them, to have them come to our house. What do you think about it? He is working, learning a trade.

"My husband and I both like the boy. He never runs the street, as his parents won't allow it, but stays at home evenings and tinkers around. Will you advise me as soon as possible?

"MOTHER."

Under the circumstances I think this girl and boy friendship cannot help but result beneficially to both. Undoubtedly your sympathy with the girl and your watchfulness over her is helping make of her the type of girl who is an influence for good with boy friends. Of course, you must be careful not to allow too many liberties, remembering fourteen is an age full of danger, and an age at which a firm, guiding hand must necessarily be at the helm. Some motion pictures are fraught with danger to the young, especially where certain unhealthy forms of emotionalism are presented, and your duty as a mother is to see that your daughter is protected from that sort of thing.

"Dear Miss Blake: When I went to school I met a girl whom I liked very much, and when I began to work I went to night school, and there again I met her. I took her home every night, and ever since school ended I haven't seen her. I know where she lives. Now I am 17 and she is near it, too. I would like to go out with her for good. I am crazy about her. I think of her all the time.

"GEORGE."

It ought not to be difficult, George, to get in touch with the girl now, so why don't you do it? You might either write to her or phone and make an engagement with her for some particular evening soon.

* *

Let Common Sense Dictate.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and for the last two years have loved a boy of 19. We have been out but a few times, but we meet quite often at a dance or at church. He asked me to kiss him once when he took me home, and when I refused, he got angry, and since then he has not sent me a letter and treats me coldly.

"I have gone out with others since then, just for spite, and now the people of the neighborhood are trying to make me marry a man that is as old as my mother (she is 32) and he is terribly jealous and will hardly let me talk to any one else.

"I am afraid that I have done wrong in going with others and I am terribly sorry and wish to know what I should do. Do you think that a girl of my age ought to go out with men? My mother says that as long as I don't do any harm I can go out. What ought I do? I cannot go on like this always, and I do not know whether to go and enjoy myself or try to get him back. I know I shall never love another.

"EMILY."

Some of these young men are very sensitive about being refused that which they have no right to, aren't they, Emily? He was not a bit of a good sport or he wouldn't have felt that way about your refusing to kiss him. I don't believe I would try to get him back, because you will fall in love with another, and I imagine before very many years have passed. Ignore what your neighbors have to say and let your common sense dictate your own heart affairs. And in the meantime go out with other men and have a good time so long as your mother approves and you come home early.

* *

Write and Explain.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a junior in high school and am 17. I am very fond of a boy my own age. He has shown me quite a little attention, such as taking me riding and walking home with me. But some one has said something untrue about me which has caused him to act very cold. What can I do to regain his friendship? I do not think he is much of a gentleman, or he would not believe what this person has said. Do you?

"EDNA."

At least he might be man enough to ask you whether the things were true or not, but then you cannot expect too much of human nature, because we all fall down one way or another at some time or another. So, if I were you, I would write a note to the chap and explain that the story was an untruth, and that you think it all wrong that an untruth should be the cause of your broken friendship.

Virginia's Problem.

"Dear Miss Blake: I would like to have your advice on the following:

"I am a young girl of 18 and have no boy friends. I always try to make myself as agreeable as possible, but it seems to me as though the boys don't care to make any dates with me. Probably it is because I do not flirt like a good many girls do. I do not believe in making an acquaintance through a flirtation. I am considered good looking by my friends.

"Please advise me how to win boy friends as well as girl friends. Your advice will be greatly appreciated.

"VIRGINIA B."

No, my dear Virginia, girls do not make friends through flirtation. They may make acquaintances and generally undesirable ones. And that is not the right way to attain popularity. Perhaps, Virginia, you do not go about enough with young people to get well acquainted. You undoubtedly are the type of a girl who stands the test of friendship well and I would advise you to lose no opportunity whatever of going out and meeting boys. It may be that you will meet a number of them before one becomes especially attracted to you. But lots of girls have had the same experience, so don't be discouraged.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

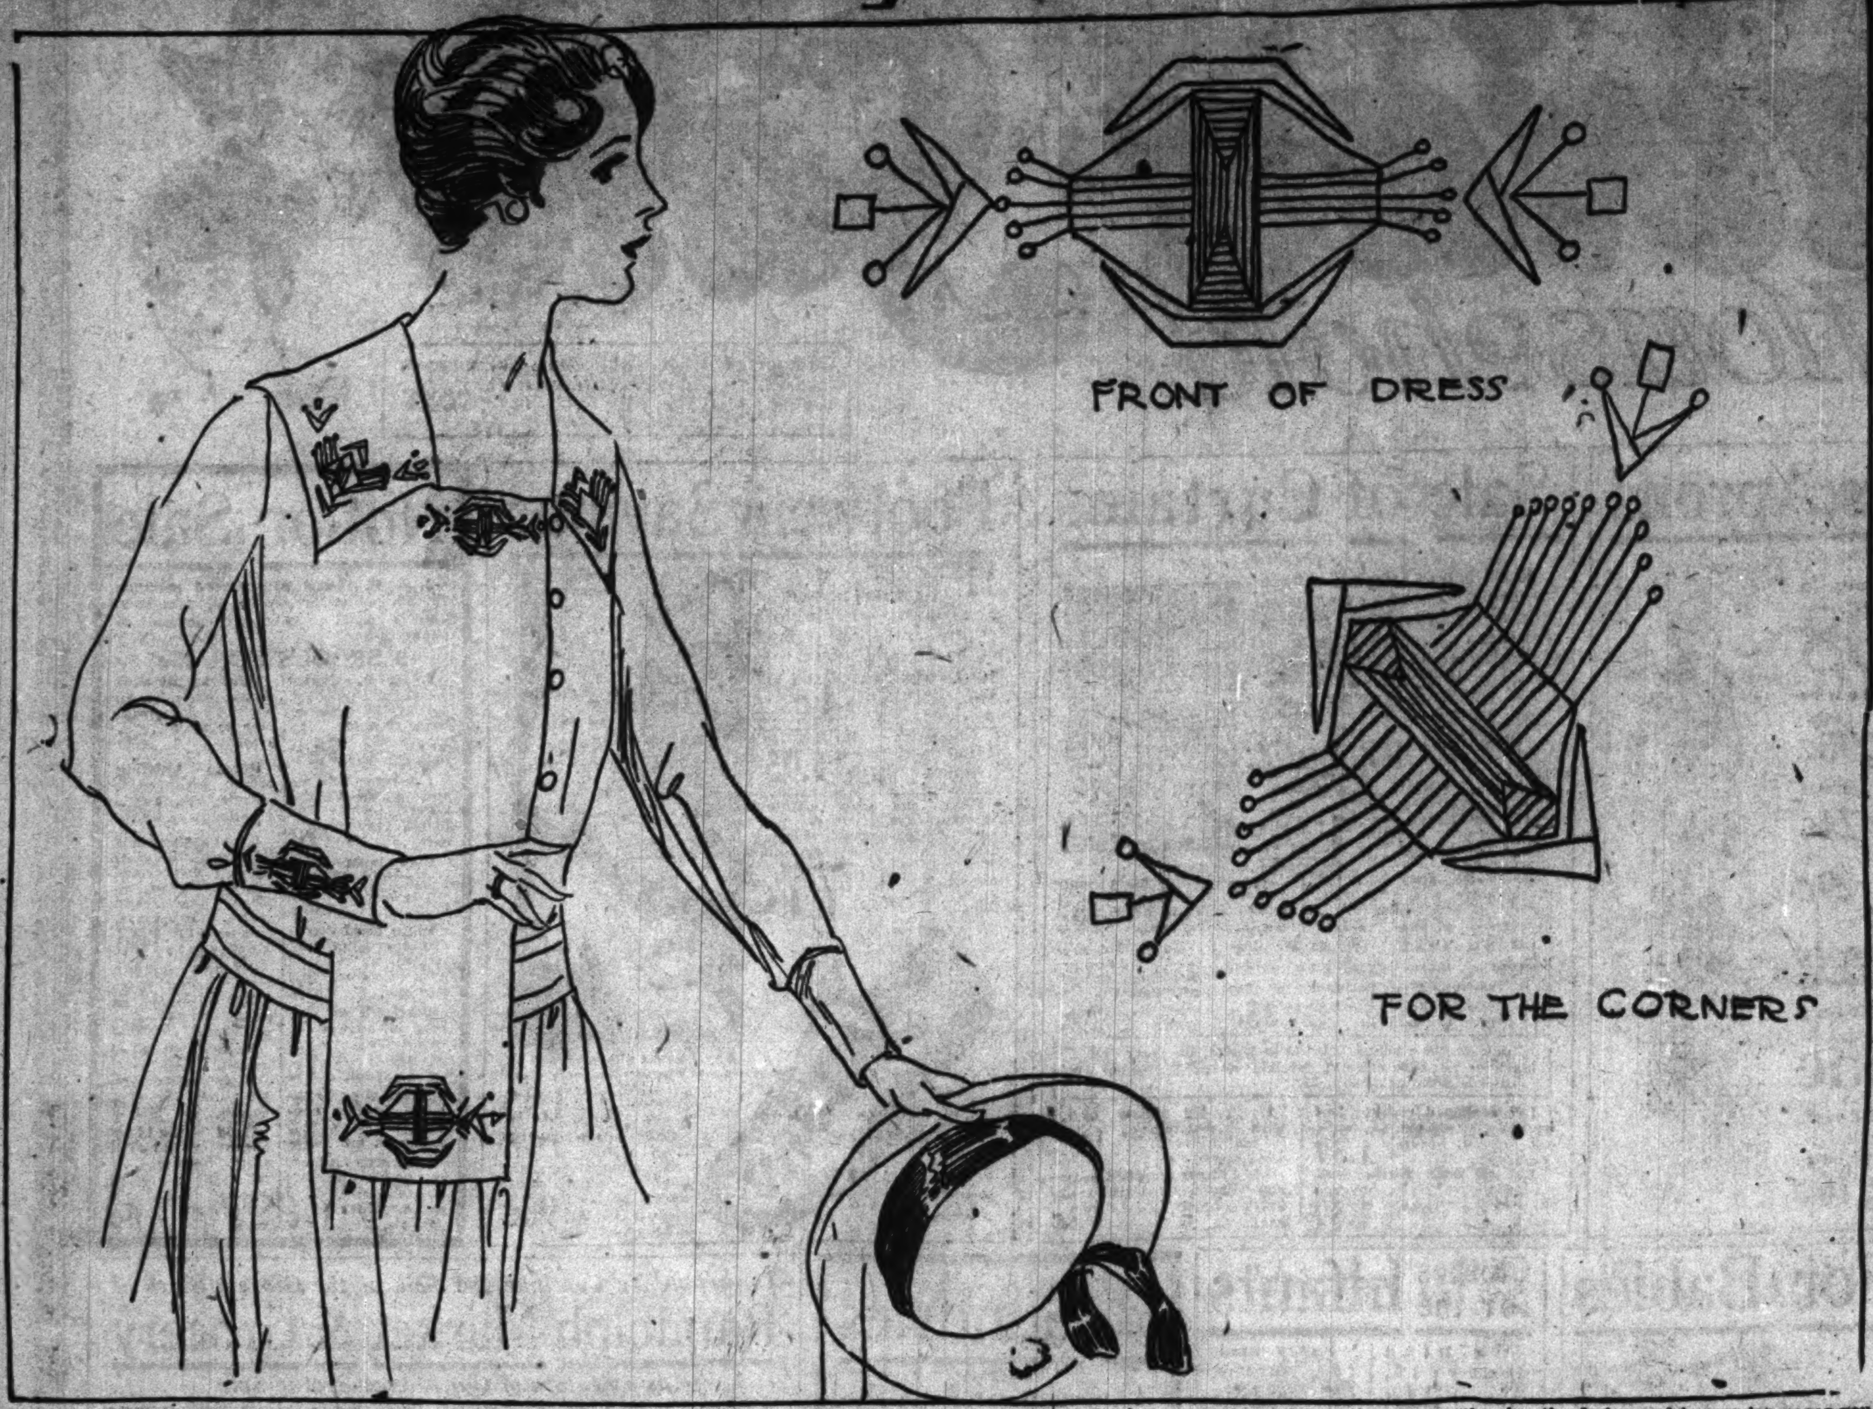
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By CLOTILDE



Now that embroidery patterns are so popular in waists, belts, pockets, and dresses, the accompanying pattern has been chosen both for its extreme smartness and its effective simplicity.

In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If your material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the material, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharply pointed lead pencil. If your material is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it over your material, place the design over it, and trace with a sharp pencil. On removing the design and impression paper you will find the pattern neatly transferred.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

PITFALLS FOR THE NOVICE.

THE girl in the business world is nearly always capable of taking care of herself under any circumstances. Her very situation has made her self-reliant and independent of the protection of others; indeed, the girl is rare who in her working career has not had some trying or harrowing experience which she has had to face alone and settle to the best of her ability.

In being buffeted around from one job to another it is not strange that the girl worker occasionally comes in contact with questionable individuals—unscrupulous and evil men and women. Since she has had experience with business people and knows the ways and workings of business concerns, she is on her guard at the least sign of irregularity.

But the girl who is just starting out to earn her own living, fresh from the schoolroom and the protective influence of the home, is in need of a warning to be on her guard against being drawn into dangerous situations. Her ignorance of business methods and business men is apt to be responsible for leading her into trouble—trouble which might embitter the remainder of her life.

The mother of a 17 year old girl has asked me to say a word to the girls who are just starting out to be wage earners. Last month thousands of young girls throughout the country finished their school courses and are preparing to make themselves independent by earning their own living. For the sake of those who have no mother or father to watch over their every step this mother wishes me to repeat her daughter's first experience in looking for a job, in order to warn them, when applying for a position, that if any irregularities creep into the interview, or if a suspicion attaches to a suggestion or a remark made by the prospective employer, just drop negotiations and look elsewhere for a job, no matter how bright or attractive the prospects of that particular position might appear.

"Lois," says her mother, "has been trained to use a billing machine and she is now looking for her first position. The other day she applied for a position in answer to an ad, and although she had quite a long interview with the manager, in conclusion he told her to return on the following Saturday afternoon at about 1 o'clock, as he was too busy at that time to give her a regular test before hiring her. When she told me her experience, I called the firm by telephone and asked the girl at the switchboard what time they closed on Saturdays and I was not surprised to learn that the place was closed at 1 o'clock. I said nothing to my daughter about this, but when Saturday came I decided to let her keep the appointment, but I accompanied her.

"When we arrived at our destination we found the place deserted but for the manager, and he certainly looked anything but pleased when he saw me. The interview was brief. He declared that the firm had decided not to discharge their present biller, but if my daughter would take a job as telephone operator he would have a place for her the following week. She declined to consider that and we left the place in a hurry.

"I am sure he had no position at his disposal that my daughter or any other good girl would have accepted."

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Adv.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

JELLY MAKING.

CAN fruit juices is a part of the general canning slogan of the day and use them later for jellies. The reason being given for this procedure is perhaps not the best one. Poor jellies may be quite palatable when first made, but will not keep well. Therefore, the woman who cannot make a high grade jelly does better by making only a little at a time, and just when wanted, as she can when she has canned juices ready.

When fruits come so thick and fast as they seem to, from the 1st of July to the later August days, it is an economy of time for the busy woman, perhaps, to can juices. Whether it is going to be a money economy this year is problematical. We cannot tell what sugar prices may rise to, and lately they have eased up so that it has been possible with special combinations to get sugar below the 7 cent mark, or at exactly 6½ cents per pound. Such prices may be a single day's allurement to buy. When sugar was selling at 10 cents a pound in most places I might one day have secured two pounds for 10 cents if I had been willing to stand in line a block long, winding in and out of one aisle after another in the place where it was sold.

A good fruit jelly is spoken of as an "elusive substance." Perfect jelly is seldom made, says one of the recent text books on cooking, because fruit juices vary so much in their composition that it is impossible to give general directions sufficiently exact as always to insure perfection. Perfection also is rare because so few people learn to cook sugar. For after all, a jelly is mainly cooked sugar or a confection beautifully flavored. Its food units, of which it has many, practically all come from the sugar. The fruit juices are tonics, not energy food.

Let us admit in the first place that no positive recipe can be given for any jelly, that is, one that will always work out perfectly. But sound principles may be learned, which will secure good success every time, and, with practice, perfection. If we will learn the whys and why nots of jellying, the how to make will take care of itself.

The first requisite to a perfect jelly may seem for a minute superficial, but is far from being so since it represents the sum of various perfections, though this one is settled by the eye. An ideally good jelly will be beautiful of color, and as clear or transparent and bright as fine glass. It cannot be perfectly clear if the bag in which the cooked fruit is drained is squeezed. It will not be brilliant and bright if the whole is boiled until the sugar cooks dark or partly caramelizes. Jellies must not be overcooked. When a jelly will not cook in from ten to twenty minutes, stop and change your plans.

An ideal jelly must be firm, but not solid. It must not be brittle, yet will break. It must quiver and be tender enough to cut with a spoon, yet retain the definite angles of the cut edges. If not enough sugar is used it will be tough and gummy; if too much is used it will fall down and be sirupy. Too much sugar is most commonly the fault.

N. E. Goldthwaite, Ph. D., says, in "The Principles of Jelly Making," that "Probably more jelly making material is spoiled through the use of an overproportion of sugar than from all other causes combined; and this is true because the would-be jelly maker blindly follows the old rule of a measure of sugar to a measure of juice." This bulletin by Dr. Goldthwaite is issued by the department of household science at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., and I think they will send it to any one wishing it, if a 2 cent stamp is inclosed.

Please note right here that a doctor of philosophy has given hours of the attention of a highly trained mind to what too many amateur cooks think may be settled in an offhand hour or two. Dr. Goldthwaite tells us what almost any one who has cooked much has observed—that a fruit juice if boiled down enough will jelly without sugar. It will have to be a good deal concentrated and will be tough and gummy.

There is a picture in this bulletin of the effects produced when the amount of juice used is the same for varying amounts of sugar. The amount of fruit juice is about three-fourths of a jelly glass. A half cup of sugar added to this gives only half a cup of jelly. Of course the water evaporated, because sugar increased the total volume as we used increased amounts. This jelly would stand alone, but is described as tough and sour. Three-fourths of a glass of sugar gave about the same bulk of jelly when added to the three-fourths of juice and gave a jelly which was tender and would stand alone.

This latter amount of sugar, three-fourths measure, is best for nearly all jellies, except those of the ideally good jelly making fruits, like currants, partially ripe grape, crab apple, etc. These are so perfectly adapted to jelly making that the proportion of sugar may be one to one.

The thickening or jelling agent in fruits, when dissolved out by cooking, is called pectin. It is accounted a curious fact that it takes cooking to develop this, even in the best fruits for jellies. It is not always necessary to add water for the cooking, although commonly they will take enough to cover—that is, both the pectin and the acid of the fruit may be diluted that much. Acid is also needed for jelly. Long boiling of either the fruit or the juice with the sugar destroys the pectin so that no jelly can be secured. Long boiling would be wasteful even if it did not destroy the jellying quality and darken the sugar, because so much skimming would be required.

It is necessary to get it out of our minds that we add sugar to fruit juice in proportion really to the water it contains. We rather add sugar in proportion to the pectin it contains, and the less there is the less sugar we must use. It may be economical, therefore, to use juices in which the pectin is diluted.

The way to discover how much pectin there is in fruit juice is simple. To a teaspoon of juice is added one teaspoon of ordinary alcohol, often called ethyl alcohol, mixing the two thoroughly, and cool or let stand for half an hour. The gelatinous mass is separated and may be taken up with a spoon.

A fruit may have so much pectin that it may be cooked five times over and still yield a juice which will jelly. Commonly now in cooking laboratories only three extracts are made. "Just as fine looking jellies may be made from the third as from the first, but in some of the most desirable qualities, of course, the first is superior. There is then no need of what is called "second quality" jelly, or a jelly from squeezing the pulp. This pulp is simply covered with water and cooked a second time, etc.

Two housekeepers, according to this bulletin, divided five quarts of stemmed grapes, the first getting the larger half, and worked them up. The first got two glasses of jelly and five glasses of "butter." The second made a second extraction from the grape pulp and got in all seven glasses of excellent quality jelly and the pulp would then probably have yielded a third extraction "containing a paying quantity of pectin." I have got better results than this.

Jelly should be cooked as quickly as possible, without simmering, but from my experience I should say it need never be cooked over a fire that could burn it. Because of the greater surface, a small amount will cook in the shorter time, and in general the best jelly makers use small kettles and cook only two or three glasses at a time in them, although they may have four kettles cooking if their glasses are already sterilized and hot. This, indeed, requires rapid action and a cool head because each mess must be thoroughly skimmed.

Fruit juices sometimes need concentrating, and boiling them down for this purpose also clarifies them, so there will be less need of skimming after the sugar is added. If too much sugar has been added to a liquid, hot to save longer cooking and stirred in so that it is certainly dissolved, there are two things that may be done. More fruit juice may be added, but because this requires more cooking the jelly will not be of the highest grade. More sugar can be added to make of the whole a thick sirup.

One has to learn more or less by experience when a jelly is cooked enough, because it takes only a minute or two thereafter to cook it too much as in the case of candy. The best test is the thick way it drops from the spoon, not all at once, but in two or more drops, but when a tiny bit like this seems to be stiff enough the whole is not always, although it may then be finished in the sun. Set in the sun with a glass over it, some of the water will evaporate, and with this evaporation the jelly is stiffened. Drops gather on the glass and are wiped off. Even with so poor a jellying material as strawberries jellies may be made in this way, when long cooking would destroy the slight amounts of pectin.

As to the characteristics of fruits, the mixtures that may be made, the helpful combinations, etc., that is another story. After we have any jelly made it is important that we protect it from mold spores. Hot paraffin will kill them and so will brandy. The paraffin also hinders evaporation of the moisture. When much is lost the jelly becomes gummy, flavorless, and unpalatable. The prime object of all our careful work is really to seize and preserve those volatile and appetizing flavors of fresh fruits. If we cannot do this we would better put our sugar into freshly made candy.

Varied Activities of Women.

Over 1,800,000 women are active farmers and gardeners in the United States.

Engineering work is now for the first time being offered to women in England.

The American women in Manila have organized for whatever service they can perform in the war.

Mrs. Louisa K. Thiors, aged 103, of Milwaukee, Wis., is probably the oldest subscribed to the Liberty loan.

If the war continues for three years more many of the railroads of the United States will be operated by women.

Twenty-one women are now employed as machinists in the Locust Point shops of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. They all wear overalls and caps, the same as the men.

A number of German women have cut off their hair and given it for war purposes. The longer strands are used to make belting for munition factories and the shorter ones are made into felt.

Mrs. Helen E. Taylor, aged 89 years, of Seattle, Wash., has applied to the United States army recruiting offices for the position as a sharpshooter in the army. Despite her age she is still a crack shot with a rifle.

Little Cripple Makes Plea.

"I AM coming to you with a plea that you will please try to find a tricycle for me. I have been reading of the many nice things you do for little boys and girls and I thought perhaps you might be able to help me. I am a little girl of 15, in a home for incurables, and have to use crutches, which is hard for me, and am unable to walk far at a time. As the home is close to the park, I could go over there sometimes if I had a tricycle, now that the nice warm days are here. How glad and thankful I would be if you could and would get one for me! I know I am asking a big favor, but maybe some little boy or girl has a tricycle that is no longer wanted and that would be of such use and help to a little crippled girl.
"J. S."

I confess that this letter brought a lump to my throat. At this time of year—when "the nice warm days are here," to quote the little girl, and when young things are indulging in outdoor sports and occupations—there is something moving to me in the thought of a child of 15 whose one desire is to have a means for getting out of doors without depending upon her crutches and who would be "glad and thankful" for a tricycle! The idea of a child in a home for incurables is heart wrenching in any conditions and I trust most fervently that there are others who feel as I do and who will try to do something to brighten the life of this cheery shut-in. I am much mistaken in my Cornerites if I do not receive prompt appeals for her address.

This Scout's Growing Up.

"Five years ago I asked for a scout suit for my boy of 11 and in those years he has grown tall and lanky and I have passed the suit along. I now venture to ask for a suit that will fit a boy of 16 and no matter how soiled and worn it may be it will be heartily appreciated by him. He will call anywhere in the city for it, or if it is sent by express I will pay all charges.
"A. R."

A scout suit may not be so easily acquired now that there is a breaking into uniform of boys all over the country, and yet I trust this request may be complied with. Boys do outgrow their clothes and I hope that the mother or father of a boy who has just accomplished this feat may be caught by this appeal and may write to me for the address of A. R. With no desire to foster militarism we wish to encourage patriotism in our boys and men by every means within our power and the boy scout movement is unquestionably a potent agent in this work.

His Embarrassing Moments.

"I am a boy, 17 years of age. I am not really bashful, but it seems when I get into a crowd talking or dancing, or even talking to those who are my superiors, my face becomes flushed, accompanied by heat waves. This is embarrassing at a dance or any other social gathering. Is there any way in which you can help me? C. R. C."

You must help yourself by accustoming yourself to mingling freely with your fellow creatures socially. Resolve that you will forget your diffidence and think only of the persons to whom you are speaking. Self-consciousness is the ruin of ease of manner and often of all pleasure one might have in society. Don't vex your soul with thoughts of how you are to look, or act, or speak. Force your mind into other channels. Get "outside of yourself," as it were. The ability to do this will not come to you all at once. Practice self-forgetfulness diligently. By degrees the bashfulness will drop away from you like an outworn garment.

White Goods Pieces Needed.

"I wish that some time you would ask for some hose for me. I would also like pieces of white goods large enough for caps and under-sleeves, as I use them. As you know, I am all alone and I piece silk quilts, make sofa pillows, do stenciling and anything else to turn a penny. There may be in some of the closets or piece bags scraps of crash suitable for center pieces or sofa pillows that I could use and turn into profit. If so, I would be most grateful for them. I have nervous indigestion and can eat so few things that I have to get milk and butter and you know what they cost now.
"MRS. J. M."

Can some one help out this Cornerite in any way? If the hose cannot be provided it is altogether likely that the scraps of material which she seeks may be found on a little search. If so, and if you wish to help her, will you send for her address?

Copperas Coloring Formula.

"I wrote a while ago for a recipe for coloring copperas. Some of the dear Cornerites must know it. I knew it myself years ago, but I have forgotten it and I want to color some white rags for some rugs. Copperas makes a beautiful and durable color, something on the orange tint, and harmonizes with any other color. If you should be so fortunate as to get the formula please insert it in the Helping Hand.

This request for coloring copperas was inserted in the Corner a few weeks ago and I do not yet despair of receiving an answer to the inquiry, but I repeat it again on the chance that before it may have escaped the notice of some one who could have replied to it. I should think that the ability to make it would be useful to a good many others at this time, when dyes of all sorts have become so expensive. I will hold the address of S. E. A. to be sent to any one who applies for it, or I will comply with her request and print the recipe when I get it.

DON'T LET SOAP SPOIL YOUR HAIR

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in; about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

Safe Home Treatment for Objectionable Hairs

(Boudoir Secrets)

The electric needle is not required for the removal of hair or fuzz, for with the use of plain delatone the most stubborn growth can be quickly banished. A paste is made with water and a little of the powder, then spread over the hairy surface. In about 2 minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed. This simple treatment not only removes the hair, but leaves the skin free from blemish. Be sure you get genuine delatone.—Advertisement.

A Gentle Reminder.

"Before" he was always polite and considerate, always assisting me over difficult places, always offering little courtly attentions which a woman appreciates.

After we were married we were going for a ride one day when he said: "Well, go climb in." I stood still and smiled.

When he got through fixing something about the horse's head he looked around to see if I was ready, when I said: "I don't know as I can get in alone now any more than I could before we were married." Then he laughed and came and offered his assistance.

We have been married a good many years and he seldom forgets. E. G.

The Last Word.

Some years ago my intimate friend married a young girl who was quiet and retiring. Last year I had the pleasure of visiting him, and while there he invited me to visit his lodge. We stayed until the small hours of the morning, and on the way home I asked him what he would say to his wife for an excuse. To my surprise he said: "I'll say hello, and she will say the rest." G. The HOME HARMONIOUS

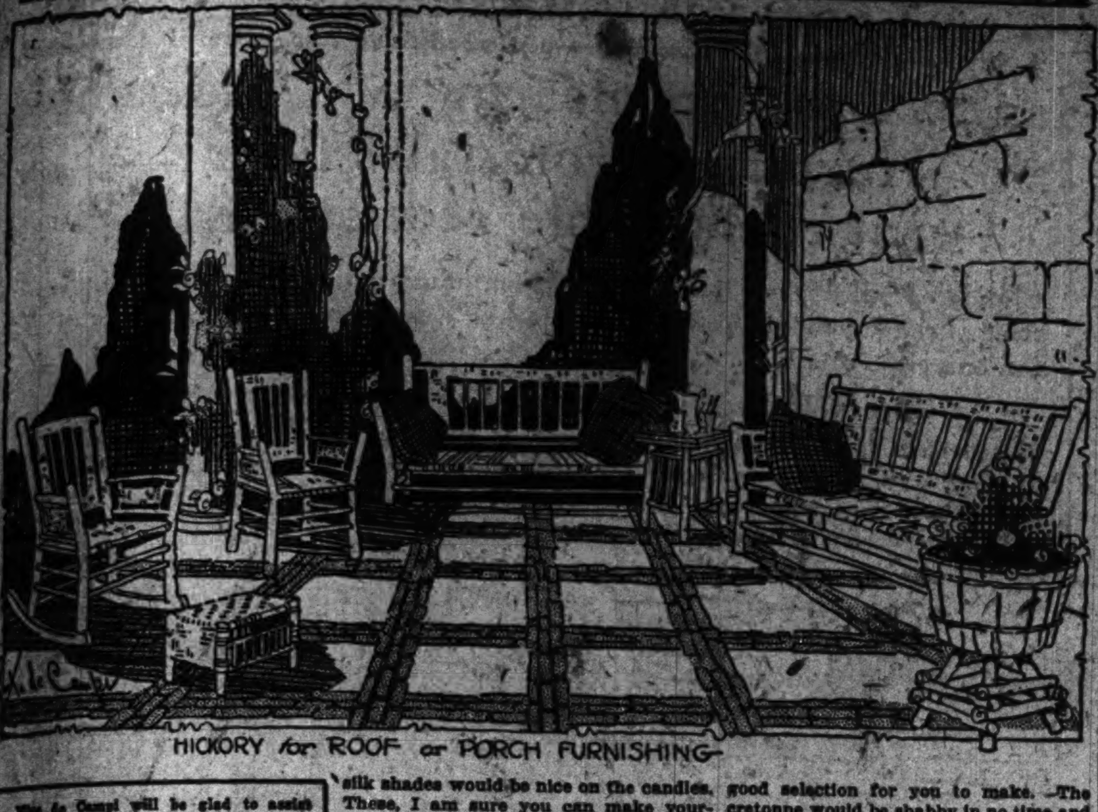
by Anita de Campi



HICKORY for ROOF or PORCH FURNISHING

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

WHY is it that families in cities do not make better use of their housetops? While ecstacies are indulged in over a little glass box of a sunroom because it gives a "sense of out of doors," the whole big flat space on top of the house, where the real out of doors lies smiling in the sun, is utterly ignored.

Why not have roof porches? Even for flat dwellers the roof could be portioned off, and screened, and made the scene of many merry hours.

The fitting up is easy. A few flowering plants, large enough to be placed in bucket sized pots, one or two settees and chairs, and tables, awnings, and awninged swing, lattice work, or a screen of some kind, and the thing is done. All of this, of course, can be elaborated upon. Pergolas may be added and electric lights, etc.

One Chicago woman who owns a flat building has a garden on the roof for her own private use. It is a wonderful garden, where load after load of black earth was hauled to start it, and part of it is sodded, and hundreds of dollars have been spent on perennials, and boxen trees, and well clipped hedges. Here vines and fountain spray tangle their woof across the warp of moonbeams to weave a filmy tapestry of dreams.

Now, all of this called for much money, as has been said, but, more than that, called for creative thought, not commonly possessed. Unusual practical preparations were required, too. The roof, to stand the weight, had to be finished with reinforced concrete, and a complicated system of draining pipes installed. Whereas, the average roof needs little or nothing to make it into a successful pleasure place.

The first and worst obstacle is the difficulty of getting up and down, but this is readily obviated by the permanent adjustment of a good stepladder fastened securely to the floor. Just go up on your roof and look around. You've no idea until you try what splendid possibilities the space affords.

If too much sunlight is objectionable, shade is easily arranged in this way. Place two rows of posts, such as you have in your back yard, at either side of the roof. Stretch clothesline in parallel lines between them. Now place a wide, long piece of awning material on the ropes. The awning stuff must have rows of curtain rings sewed securely to it, and the ropes must pass through these rings so that the whole awning may be pushed back and tied when it is not in use, that the wind may not blow it loose on a gusty day. If the awning is left extending down one side, or even both sides, the long ends may be tied to the bottom of the posts, to form end screens.

If preferred, split bamboo that may be raised and lowered may form the outer wall of the spaced in portion of the roof. These are inexpensive and form good screens without interfering with air circulation.

Grass and straw mattings, linen, Navajo or rag rugs make the best floor [or shall we say roof?] coverings.

If electric or other lights are used it becomes almost imperative to screen the place in, as all manner of minute winged beasties are quickly attracted—beetles, June bugs, "skeeters."

A big wooden box as part of the furnishing might serve as a seat and storing place for rugs and cushions.

The place may be made safe for children by fencing in with wire netting, lattice work, or any sort of fence. Let them have a sand box and toys.

The furniture for roofs as that for any big outdoor porch must be of rugged character, as it will be directly or indirectly exposed to the elements. An excellent old fashioned material is hickory. There is a rustic appearance to well made hickory furniture that is quite inimitable. This year practical furniture is being made in well modeled shapes, carried out in substantial wood, as heavy and durable as the old style mission, but more graceful in line. Things for roofs must obviously not be light in scale or actual weight.

Material for cushions is also puzzling. Waterproof fabrics are, of course, best. Good cushions are made of sail canvas or duck or cravenette, and filled with pine needles.

Have a porch swing above all things, with a cravenette covered mattress upon it, one on which you can lie full length and look up at the stars. Yield to the charm of having nothing between yourself and that "great inverted bowl we call the sky." Under the spell of such vast [illegible], the littleness of life will fall away. Just try it. Perch yourself up on top of the box of tricks we know as home, and see if it doesn't make you feel like a puppet come to life.

Answers to Inquiries.

C. E. H.: Any light neutral tint would be nice for your rooms. Yellow and cream stripe is popular in rooms with mahogany furniture. Either that or an old fashioned pattern in blue and white. If you have figured curtains use plain side walls and vice versa. I cannot make out from your sketch whether your lamp is intended for a table lamp or a wall bracket. In either case, little silk shades would be nice on the candles. These, I am sure you can make yourself, as they are simply gathered on to little wire frames, which may be bought from any one of the department stores. Have your ceilings in a much lightened tint of the same color that you use on your side walls.

* *

MRS. L. F. D.: Use old rose sunfast for casement curtains throughout. The same could be used inside the bookcase doors. Yes, you could use the dark blue draperies in your sun room if you finish the room in blue and if they can be arranged so as to be drawn well back from the windows.

* *

MISS HELEN E. D.: Use light oyster green for your side walls. With this use hangings of two tone striped in the same color. The furniture upholstered may be more effective. Brocaded satin damask is about the most popular fabric.

* *

MRS. P. T.: Delicate fawn color would be a good color for your living room. Could you not enamel the woodwork that is now stained mahogany? Would you not like slip covers made to go over your leather furniture? These would be good in printed linen.

* *

MRS. O. C. K.: Use a neutral cadet blue throughout. It is the fad this season to combine this shade with certain tints of green. With this you could use blue in a rather more intense tone in your dining room. I cannot say that I approve of the pink room.

* *

MRS. A. W. P.: Yes, it would be advisable to have the two rooms the same color. Delicate pearl color would be attractive. Let your picture molding be about six inches below the ceiling. Ecru curtains would be quite right for the dining room. Simple figured paper in gray and white would be nice for the hall. The most popular paper for bedrooms is small flowered paper on a white ground. In one of the rooms you might have any light color and white stripe, and in another room repeat the color of the stripe in a solid side wall.

* *

MRS. M. S.: There are so many English periods. Just which period do you mean? Yes, the blue floor lamp would be all right if you repeat touches of blue in some other part of the room. Loose cushions are popular now and are practical, as the covers are easily replaced. Tapestry is a standard material and will, I suppose, always be used. An old fashioned material that has come back into favor is brocatelle. Satin damasks are popular. The color that is most in favor is blue. It is in favor to combine this with a gray tone of wistaria. The blue in this case is a well grayed shade of blue.

* *

MRS. F. J.: With the furniture you have, I believe you would be better pleased with figured draperies than plain. A good quality of cretonne, printed in colors, on a tan ground, would be nice. Don't use lace, but simple voile or net.

* *

H. E. D.: Use plain sunfast for your casement curtains throughout. Draperies are frequently dispensed with unless they are needed in point of privacy. I don't believe you would like two oval portraits over the mantel. Better arrange them about the room, according to the wall space you have and hang them separately. Silk draw curtains are frequently used over colored glass windows and drawn together at night. A popular upholstery fabric is brocaded damask.

* *

MRS. R. M.: Whether you use paint or paper is a matter of personal preference. Any light neutral tint would be good in your rooms throughout the first floor. With such a flat background it is good to use figured draperies and a colored lamp shade, either robin's egg blue, flamingo red, or orange yellow. Olive color would be a well wearing tone for your hall carpet.

* *

MISS F. B.: Yes, all over carpeting is considered correct and is not unhygienic if you have an electric vacuum cleaner. A bronze taupe is an excellent color with a pale tint of the same for your side wall. Small rugs are sometimes used in conjunction with the all over carpet.

* *

LONG: The rug about which you inquired was bought from a limited stock which is already exhausted. I regret much to be unable to assist you in this matter. I am returning your illustration.

* *

B. B. B.: It is a generally accepted plan to dispense with portieres wherever they are not actually needed. Get a gate leg table for your library. Use thin voile in your sunroom for curtains and cretonne roller shades. Would you think of introducing a dark rose colored lamp shade and valance in your bedroom?

* *

MRS. H. M.: I congratulate you on the acquisition of the heirloom. I should advise you to send your bed to some really good decorator and have it refinished.

* *

MRS. H. D. M.: I think you will find it almost as cheap and far more satisfactory to buy some sort of inexpensive furniture rather than to try to cover boxes with cretonne for your summer cottage furniture. Wicker would be a good selection for you to make. The cretonne would be shabby in no time and the whole thing would look botchy, whereas inexpensive wicker would last you for several seasons.

* *

MRS. R. A. G.: Drop your picture molding to within six inches of the ceiling and calcimine the space above the molding the same as the ceiling. Use a simple side wall without a border.

* *

MRS. J. L.: Striped sunfast, repeating the two colors used in your upholstery would be about the best choice.

* *

SUMMER RESORT: I should curtain the cottage throughout with casement curtains of tan and light green. Have tan side walls in all of the rooms excepting the bedroom. Have this white paper sprigged with flowers. All of your rugs sound beautiful except the red Wilton. This, I should think, you could use in the bedroom. No, I don't believe I would use the lace curtains. They might be replaced with scrim.

* *

R. Z.: Have light putty colored side walls. Have the woodwork painted a few shades darker in the same color. Use a green silk shade for your table lamp with black and dull mustard color striped stuff for your inside draperies. This will repeat the touch of black you have in your furniture.

* *

MRS. HARLAN R.: For your sofa pillows combine sage green and turquoise blue. Trim these with heavy tassels of deeper, brighter green. Let the pillows be melon muff shape, quite large and loosely stuffed. Any bit of upholstery fabric would do for a table cover. These are made quite small.

* *

MRS. B. L.: Yes, I should have the two lamp shades alike and make them out of amber colored silk. Use a narrow table runner. Table covers are made quite small so as to show the surface of the woodwork.

* *

MRS. M. J. S.: I am sorry I cannot furnish you with a pattern of the draperies described. The battlements, however, were cut just about the size and shape of the stationery on which you wrote. I should advise you to try cutting a pattern out of some sort of cheap material, like paper cambric, and tack it up just to see the effect before you cut into the goods proper.

* *

MRS. L. B. C. O.: I rather like your "Dutchy" combination on the mantel piece. I should have draperies combining the colors of gray and mahogany, as, for example, gray ground printed over with autumn foliage or a gray silk overlaid with broken stripes in mahogany and edged with mahogany. This will serve as a tie to the colors which have hitherto refused to come together.

* *

D. M.: About the most satisfactory portiere material is the double faced velour. Some good figured materials are to be had and I think figures would be something of a relief in your solid brown rooms. Brown figures would make a good combination with olive green. Yes, I am sure you can find it in the upholstery departments. I should advise your making a personal selection, keeping these two colors in mind.

* *

MRS. G.: Have a light neutral color for your side walls throughout. A delicate faun is usually good with old ivory woodwork and gold colored cretonne hangings printed on a faun colored ground. Brown mahogany is the most popular furniture which I should advise you to have throughout. Instead of trying to devise a drapery to soften the entrance of the hall into the dining room why not employ a good decorative folding screen?

* *

JEANNETTE: A delicate corn color should be attractive for lamp shades in the room you describe.

Bright Sayings of Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Some time ago I contracted tin poisoning from eating tainted canned pineapple. During my illness a little cousin was sympathetic and attentive. Within a month he was stricken with appendicitis and was operated upon. The surgeon found a small stone had become lodged in the appendix, causing the inflammation. After the little fellow was out of danger I said to him: "John, you mustn't eat any more stones, for you have learned they are not good for little boys."

Turning his head on his pillow so that he faced me squarely he replied, rather sarcastically: "Well, I won't, and you better not eat any more tin cans, for they make you sick, too." C. E. M.

Last week my daughter, who had recently learned to skate on rollers, wanted me to write a post card for her to send to her grandfather, who was visiting in the country. After telling him that she would like to see him she said, "Tell him I can skate holding up one foot." Then, as an afterthought, she added, "Maybe by the time he comes home I can skate holding up both feet." D. J. M.

Ethel had a little girl playmate living next door, with whom she played every day. One morning, on ringing Caroline's doorbell, as usual, Ethel was surprised to see a strange face, that of a new maid. After waiting to be invited in, as was customary, and no invitation forthcoming, Ethel politely requested that Caroline be told "I'm the party Caroline has the 'pointment wiv."

Herbert was invited out to dinner with his mother, and when dessert was served, which consisted only of fresh fruit, Herbert said to the hostess: "I'd like a piece of cake, please." His mother rebuked him for asking for something not on the table, and he answered: "I thought maybe they had some for dinner and forgot to put it on the table." W. B. D.

Bobbie was telling grandmother of the delightful outing he had had with his mother and the women of her club. Grandmother teasingly remarked that she was insulted because she had not been invited. Bobbie remained thoughtful for a few moments and then said: "But, grandma, just think how you would have felt if the ladies would have said, 'What is that old woman doing in this party?'" I. S.

Our little neighbor, Johnnie, was fond of coming over to our house. One day when he came over I gave him a big banana. When he had finished it he asked me for another one, but my mother said, "Johnnie, bananas are too heavy for you." "Never mind," said Johnnie, "I can carry them." A. B.

A sudden change in weather gave Betty a bad cold. Her nose and lips were chapped and had received frequent applications of a healing lotion. One morning when she awakened she found that she could scarcely speak aloud. "O, mother," she sobbed, "now my voice is chapped, too!" M. C. R.

Dorothy's uncle gave her a quarter and told her to buy some candy and give her little sister, Ethel, half of it. When Ethel came back she had 20 cents worth for herself and 5 cents worth for sister. When she was asked the reason for this she said, "Does you fink I want to have my poor little sister sick in bed?" J. B.

Beatrice heard her father talking to a visitor who referred to his wife as his better half. A few days afterwards her twin brother was crying.

"Why, Bobbie," exclaimed her auntie coming into the room, "aren't you ashamed of yourself. Look at sister, she doesn't cry."

"That's cause I'se the better half," said Beatrice. S. B.

George was to have a birthday party and was selecting his friends to be invited. He wanted every one, and his mother tried to keep him within reasonable bounds by cautioning him not to invite too many. He extended an invitation to his friend Henry, who expressed regret that he had a prior engagement. "O, well," said George, "it doesn't matter—there will be plenty. There will be too many anyhow." C. E. C.

Harold and Helen had been amusing themselves with a game of marbles, when all at once little Helen accidentally swallowed one of them. Their mother after hearing the sudden scream ran out to see what had happened. All excited, she called to her neighbor and said: "My, what shall I do; little Helen has swallowed a marble?" But Harold corrected her with: "No, mother, it wasn't a marble, it was a shooter." K. R.

Trapped.

While on a train a young man in the seat in front of me was writing a letter in shorthand. Not so many years ago I was a stenographer myself, and for no other reason than to see how much I had forgotten I glanced over his shoulder and read what he wrote.

After a few minutes he wrote: "There is a red headed old maid with a wart on her nose in the seat behind, who I believe is a stenographer, and has read every word I have written."

Before I could check myself I jumped to my feet and demanded, "Whom do you mean by that?" Then I realized the ridiculous position I was in, and, believe me, it was a position I hope never to be in again. R. S.

Embarrassing a Drummer.

I am a traveling man and fat. I boarded a train at Gallatin, Mo., a few days ago, with a heavy grip in each hand.

Just as I entered the chair car a young woman jumped up from her seat, threw her arms around my neck, exclaiming, "O, you dear, sweet thing," and kissed me at least half a dozen times before the sheriff, who was taking her to a sanitarium, could pull her away and make her sit down.

I think you could have fried an egg on my face, it was so red from embarrassment. I did not go in the chair car. I retraced my steps to the smoker. L. T.

The Straphanger's Plight.

One day while riding in a crowded L train I was standing leisurely reading my paper. In the seat in front of me sat a young woman all dressed up with a large plume on her hat and chatting merrily with the young man at her side.

All was well until the train went round a curve, when I lost my balance and, in order to save myself from going through the window, I grabbed the first thing near me, which happened to be the plume on the girl's hat. Of course, I pulled it out of the hat, and, to make matters worse, I, so stunned by my action, stood holding the plume in my hand.

Finally I came to my senses, dropped the plume in the girl's lap, and, with a mortified look, left the indignant couple and a car of laughing people and got off at the next stop. H. G.

Flaming Mass of Pimples On Face and Neck Itching Burning Terrible. Cuticura Healed.

"I had eczema on my face and neck. The skin at first grew very red and after a time broke out into a flaming mass of pimples which caused disfigurement. The pimples were in patches all over my face, itching and burning terribly especially on very warm days, and when I scratched I felt as if the skin were being punctured with needles. I could scarcely get any rest at night.

"Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They gave almost immediate relief, and after using one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bars of Cuticura Soap I was entirely healed." (Signed) Miss Bessie Geddes, Viola, Wisc., Feb. 19, 1917.

It is so easy to prevent skin and scalp troubles by using Cuticura Soap, and no other, for all toilet purposes, assisted now and then by touches of Cuticura Ointment to first signs of pimples, rashes, dandruff or irritation. Bathe with Cuticura Soap and hot water, dry lightly and apply Cuticura Ointment. At once the itching ceases, and complete healment in most cases results in continued use of these super-creamy emollients.

For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c.

Tells women how to make a lemon beauty cream cheaply for the face, neck, arms and hands

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as sallowness, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of Orchard White at any pharmacy or toilet counter and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful to smoothen rough red hands.

Genuine Orchard White bears the name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Summer News of the Theater

FRANK KEENAN and his company will entrain for Town today, full of faith in "The Pawn" as a metropolitan entertainment. That play will be presented in New York next autumn with the original Chicago cast at one of the numerous theaters directed by the Messrs. Shubert.

Mr. Keenan's departure will leave the Garrick vacant for three weeks during which the usual summer renovation will take place. On July 29 an operetta entitled "You're In Love" will arrive, with Miss Marie Flynn, Laurance Wheat, Miss Florine Arnold, and Harry Clarke among the players. It is by Otto Hauerbach as to words and Rudolph Friml as to tunes.

Mr. Friml, by the way, has been sued for $25,000 damages by Arthur Hammerstein because he refuses to complete the score for a musical comedy named "Furs and Frills." The composer's odd excuse is that the libretto, by Edward Clark, is not good enough for his music.

The new season at the Illinois will begin Aug. 12 with Thomas A. Wise and William Courtenay in "Pals First," a comedy performed with success last season in New York. It is a dramatization by Lee Wilson Dodd of a tale by Frances Perry Elliott. The Olympic will resume business Aug. 9, offering Fiske O'Hara, an Irish actor, in "The Man from Wicklow." In case "Turn to the Right" leaves the Grand in August, Miss Edith Taliaferro will appear there in "Captain Kidd."

Miss Doris Keane's manager, Mr. Nethersole, writes that "Romance" is in its ninetieth week in London and that its popularity is unabated. Before she returns to America Miss Keane will produce another play by Edward Sheldon in London and also a comedy called "Roxana." Mr. Nethersole says that the greatest success there now is "General Post," which Charles Dillingham will present in the United States next season.

The managers of the new musical play which will be presented in a week or two at Powers' have decided that "Good Night, Paul," is the best name for it. Elizabeth Murray, Ralph Herz, Audrey Maple, Frank Lalor, and others will be in it.

Mme. Olga Petrova, an eminent filmeuse, proclaims with regret her withdrawal from the picture drama to become again an actress in audible plays. Her valedictory relates that she has found the movies an esthetic and ethical inspiration, but that she craves a greater propinquity to her public. Mme. Petrova will be her own manager.

Taylor Holmes, who announced recently the permanent severance of himself from the old fashioned or speaking theater, has changed his mind and will rejoin it next Sunday night via "Seven Chances." He will succeed Frank Craven, whom he in no way resembles, in the rôle of the assiduous suitor in the play at the Cort. Mr. Craven has contrived a comedy, "Needles and Pins," and will act its most important part.

Mr. Belasco has engaged Miss Leonore Ulrich, late of the films, for the leading part in his new melodrama, "Tiger Rose," written by himself and Willard Mack.

"The Statelake" is the name selected for the vaudeville theater soon to be built at State and Lake streets by Martin Beck, Mrs. C. E. Kohl, Herman Fehr, Mort Singer, Morris Meyerfeld, and others. A. H. Woods thinks that "The Randolph" would be a good title for his new house at Dearborn and Randolph, but his friends are trying to persuade him to call it "The Alwood."

German dialect comedians, long a staple feature of burlesque shows, are to be omitted from that style of entertainment next season, according to Variety. Managers fear that their presence might be an irritant to patriotic audiences.

William Faversham will not entirely abandon "Getting Married" next season, but will send it on a pilgrimage to California, with another actor in the rôle of the bishop. Mr. Faversham's medium will be "The Old Country," a play by Dion Calthrope, in which Gerald du Maurier has been successful in London. Another Faversham enterprise will be a production of "Mesalliance." A contemplated presentation of "The Devil's Disciple" is deferred at the suggestion of Mr. Shaw, who fears that its contents would be inimical to the friendly emotions prevailing between Americans and Englishmen.

Miss Adele Burleson, a dramatist well known in Washington, D. C., has made a short play of O. Henry's story, "The Gift of the Magi," and it pleases Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger so much that they will soon produce it.

Reports from Los Angeles are to the effect that the Hattons' new play, "Lombardi, Ltd.," with Leo Carillo in the principal rôle, is a popular and amusing exhibition.

Lyn Harding, it is said, will play the chief character in the Comstock-Elliott production of "Chu Chin Chow," performed in London at His Majesty's by Oscar Asche.

The other night in Detroit Miss Elizabeth Murray turned recruiting agent during her vaudeville act, and made an appeal for enlistments. "This is an appeal to the boys of this nation," she said. "My own dear boy marched off to service last night. I'm a mother and my heart goes out to you mothers here tonight. But I wouldn't hold him back, and you should not hold back your sons, no matter how much you love them, and God knows what it means to a mother's heart for a boy to go to war. But it is up to us to give our best, for it is a great big cause."

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—When the Charles Frohman company announced last week that next season Ethel Barrymore would leave the cinema to shift for itself and resume her place in the spoken drama, it provided Broadway with the most interesting topic of conversation it has had in some time. And when it was added that, furthermore, she would make her reëntrance as "Camille" it shook the very foundations of the curbs.

First of all, Miss Ethel has been given up as lost to the movies for some years to come. The life has been a pleasant change for her, she has been able to keep quite regular hours, make herself agreeably known to her growing family and entertain her friends quite as a normal hostess should.

Secondly, it was something of a surprise to the gossips that the Frohman company would consider turning the home theater, which is the Empire, over to any one of the old Frohman stars for an entire season—unless it were Maude Adams. And the fact that Miss Adams is counted out probably indicates that she plans to spend all of the next season touring.

And, thirdly, the idea that Miss Barrymore is eager to play the lady of the camellias is not only news to the general public, but is accepted by all the women creatures as an intimation that the actress is ready now to compromise with her advancing years. "My goodness, we must be getting on," they sighed dolefully. "I see Ethel is going to do 'Camille'."

Which is a silly conclusion. Because all the dear old ladies of the theater with any gift for simulated hysteria have kept the Dumas test rôle in their repertoires right up to their final exits, should not conceal the fact that Camille is essentially a young woman's rôle. True, Bernhardt played the lady at 67, and was really impressive in the part at 60, but she was only 36 when she created it, in 1880, and Ethel, born that very year, will have just turned 37 when she assumes the responsibility. Camille should be young and attractive, notwithstanding the complacent Anglo-Saxon tradition that she is best represented by the old and experienced and knowing type of actress. And herein lies the joker in this Barrymore announcement: Ethel will make Camille young and alluring, and the moment she does she is very likely to start a perfect drive of Camilles.

You know very well that Jane Cowl, for instance, wants to play Camille. She may say she doesn't, and she may withstand the temptation for several seasons. But eventually she is as sure to add the first of the weeping sisters to her repertoire as she is to continue acting at all. And if eventually, why not now?

Bernhardt herself has advised Laurette Taylor to take up the rôle before she is much older, and Laurette, though still suggesting youth so unmistakably in the slimness of her body and the childlike charm of her manner, is confessedly eager to establish herself as a "real" actress, which to Laurette means an actress not alone equal to the demands of a varied modern repertoire, but one who commands the best of the classics as well.

Nazimova is almost sure to accept the Barrymore challenge and play Camille with a Russian dressing, and though Elsie Ferguson is in pictures now (for $6,000 a week), in a year or two she will be turning back to her real love, and when she does it is Liberty bonds to batter cakes the first thing she will want to do will be to match Camille with the best of those who have taken advantage of her absence. If you can recall the haunting appeal of her heroine in "Outcast" you will rightly conclude that she would prove one of the best of them.

Florence Reed might make a sort of baby vampire out of the French lady, but there are few of the younger emotionalists who could play the part with more force or more convincingly than this steadily growing young person. And beside her there are at least a half dozen others—Julia Dean for one, Margaret Illington for another, Josephine Victor, and Mary Nash. Each of them has a decided flair for the emotional drama and each is well equipped for the test. Even Emily Stevens may want to have a try at the part, and there is no reason why there should not be a mentally alert, crisply independent Camille, such as she would offer, to vary somewhat the monotony of the clinging vines who have gone before.

The older women are not likely to feel themselves called back to the lady's defense. Margaret Anglin, who has the emotional equipment, but neither the heart nor the temperament for the part, was pretty well satisfied to let well enough alone after her season of matching tears with Henry Miller in their revival of the play some years ago. Julia Arthur is not likely to be interested, although her return to the stage appears to have revived her love of it sufficiently to keep her acting, even in vaudeville. And Bertha Kalisch, probably as well fitted as any of those in her division to meet the actual histrionic demand of the rôle, still lacks something in the matter of a fixed personal following to

Reasons for Ravania

By Frederick Donaghey

SEEKING to argue against the prevalent fallacy that opera is commercially futile, I some time since expressed the belief that Chicago's faint and fluttering reaction to the Auditorium venture was, in a measure, due to the well-meant but mistaken attitude of the newspapers: they, regarding the Opera as a civic and æsthetic asset, insisted from the beginning, in 1910, that the way to conserve it was to acclaim its activities regardless of positive or comparative value.

So, when Mary Garden gave a bad or an uninteresting performance, she was not chided; and, of course, there was nothing left to say when she performed brilliantly. Only the greatest of tenors could deserve what was printed, week after week for three seasons, about Dalmores: when the greatest tenor came along, language was all, as the waitress in the suburban hotel explains when, coming down late to breakfast, you ask for a dish which had a run with the early risers. The praise which belonged to Muratore had been worn out on a number two.

A reader recalls what was written in the vein, and makes it the basis of a communication about Ravinia Park. After all, he suggests, have not the Chicago papers, in their effort to boost that delectable retreat, succeeded only in saying too much in a single, unchanging strain? "I am for Ravinia," he adds, with hearty alacrity: "I go lots, and think it's the greatest summer-night place on the ample American hemisphere; and I was first moved to go by reading what the newspapers had to say. My letter is not to be printed—at least, not if you use my name—and is meant only to help you to help if you think what I say is to the point."

Boosting Ravinia is, I think, a different matter: the effort is mainly to create a clientele for the place, itself, by sending so many persons there that the appreciative residuum will take and keep it out of the mendicant catalogue. It is not a mercantile matter, save as its employés may regard it: nobody makes money from its operation. Chicago, in its "Where can we go tonight?" spirit, would take care of Ravinia if, the newspapers' effort succeeding, enough Chicagoans go there once or twice in the best conditions.

No other city in the United States possesses a hot-weather resort in kind so essentially lovely, or one with such inherent possibilities of good entertainment. I was there on Friday in untoward conditions—a damp, misty evening, following an afternoon of humid, drenching showers that kept ninety-nine per cent of all devotees off the links. I was able to get a good dinner: better, I suspect, than Mr. Hoover would countenance; and a good dinner is not among the traditional accessories of summer-night places of diversion. I heard a well-selected fifty of the best orchestra in the world—in the world: they were in service for opera on this occasion; but they double in Mr. Stock's own répertoire afternoons and some nights.

The bill for Friday was a shrewd adaptation of "Thaïs" to Ravinia's resources, time-tables, and prejudices—an arrangement made up of what are called in opera-house lingo the mirror-scene, the oasis-scene, and the death-scene, with Mr. Weisbach playing the Meditation out of place but in tune while the oasis was made over into the convent. Madame Bériza was, as last year, Thaïs—not, perhaps, her best part, but the one in which, it seems, she is best liked out there. The selected scenes involved the lady vis-à-vis with but one man, her shaggy and conscious celibate; and they played in Massenet's favorite mood of self-urgent ecstacy, and not at all in Anatole France's vein, which is, whenever she can make it work into the scheme of the opera, Mary Garden's: she, I always feel, would like to die reproaching the missioner with the words of the wife in "Little Eyolf"—"There stood your champagne; and you tasted it not!"

If you are not of a mind for opera, Ravinia has substitutes: dancing in a shimmering pagoda to jazz'd tunes in the prevalent rhythms, for one; and there are movies for those who must have their shot once in twenty-four hours.

Ravinia's first week in its annual ten was marked by a good average of weather; and weather remains, as always, the main worry of its operators. The casts for the season are, all-round, the best yet put together: last night's for "Hoffmann" was, for the purposes of the excerpts used, admirable. The raking of the seats in the pavilion is an immense improvement; the paring of the columns that support the roof is another.

All-in-all, Ravinia is the best reply any city in the land could possibly give to "Where shall we go tonight?" for most nights of the seventy in which it is active.

Notes

Those of you who saw the Ballet Russe in either Chicago visit remember Flora Revalles: you remember her even if Nijinsky was the lure. THE TRIBUNE announced months ago that she would, regardless of the future of the troupe, remain in this country, to sing with the Metropolitan. She did not sing with the Ballet Russe: nobody did; and she did not dance, which everybody else in the troupe did. But she was a singer in Paris before Diaghileff took her up to play cold, white sirens. She did her first singing on the continent the other night in New York City: she was flag-draped, and used "O Say!" and the jewel-song from "Faust."

Maggie Teyte, Luisa Villani, Mabel Riegelman, and Henry Weldon, who are known in Chicago, and Claudia Muzio and Lucca Botta, who are not, are to take part in some operas this summer in Columbia University. The Metropolitan is in complete sympathy with the project: Muzio, a soprano, and Botta, a tenor, are high in the roster of that institution. Marcel Charlier, of the Campanini list, is to conduct.

Mme. Carolina White

Madame White, one of this year's sopranos in the ten weeks of opera in Ravinia Park, is to sing next Thursday night at the food-conservation rally in the crystal room of the Hotel Sherman. The rally is one of the activities of the woman's division of the State Council of Defense, and is designed to interest not only housewives but also professional chefs, cooks who are specialists, and all who have to do with the buying and preparation of edibles. Leading Chicago clubs and hotels will be represented in the gathering.

Of course, the well-known singer's services were obtained by courtesy of Mr. Eckstein, president of the Ravinia Park Company: preparation of the répertoire in the early weeks of the season, with the essential rehearsals for all concerned, is a practical factor which makes his collaboration a favor out of the ordinary.

Whatever transpires, the Barrymore Camille is certain to be awaited with a lot of interest. The actress will, we assume, turn again to the rigorous physical exercises by which a few years ago she took off something like seventy pounds of the too, too solid flesh that clung affectionately to her She never has put this excess back, but there have been many dinner parties and afternoon teas since the movies have made social affairs possible for her, and you who have dieted know the result. Either a summer of eatandgrowthin or she will have to shuffle Camille off with the whooping cough in place of the well established white plague.

A second item that Broadway found interesting in the Barrymore announcement was that of her determination to revive "A School for Scandal" at the season's close and herself play Lady Teazle. Here the actress should be at her best. Her high comedy gifts are supreme, and with so much as half a success with the other plays of her répertoire this choice should conclude her season triumphantly. But how will she cast the comedy? Will Lionel and Jack Barrymore play Charles and Joseph Surface and Uncle John Drew the Sir Peter? The Barrymore boys would be ideal selections. Of Uncle John we are not so certain. He is not a particularly unctuous individual, but we are used to him and his ways, and he might prove a splendid surprise. Cyril Maude has been mentioned, and he would be wonderful, but he is in Australia and may not come back. In any event, this particular revival is sure to be a feature of the spring season it is scheduled to adorn.

Mention of Mme. Bernhardt reminds me that when she was seriously ill recently and the newspapers were keeping reporters detailed at the hospital for fear her brave soul might pass out at any moment, there were many prayers offered in her behalf that she might live to return to France, there to die, when die she must, in her own greatly beloved land.

But now that she is well and has so far recovered her strength that she is able to take quite long motor trips away from Long Beach, where she has been staying, the madame has no thought of hurrying the answer to the prayers. She has no intention of going home for some time. Not that she loves France less, but that she fears the submarines more. And probably, if the truth wer told, because she hopes yet to make up for some of the time and profits lost last fall.

It seems a pity that she still must think of earning money. We should rather think of her as comfortably housed in Paris, or at Belle Isle, with nothing to think of but favorable news from the front, and nothing to do but make occasional trips to the camps of her poilus, where the sight of her would be inspiration enough to send them singing back to the trenches to fight for her France and theirs. And, finally, in that great celebration of victory when the boys march back through the Champs Elysees and the Arc d'Triomphe, we would have her placed on a reviewing stand all her own that she might fairly drink in the joy and the spirit that will be France.

But it may be she is happier here, feeling that she still is a part of the world, her world, of the theater; preparing to resume her tour in September, talking over the plans with her managers, keeping, as it were, the armor buckled about her and her mind keenly set on the campaign.

In any event, here Mme. Bernhardt is and here she plans to stay. For weeks they have been trying to find a cottage for her, but none, so far, has met her needs. She motored across the island to Huntington the other day and had lunch with the William Favershams and a small party of guests. Hearing of the event the townspeople hung out their French flags and there was a committee of children to greet the actress when she arrived. Her companion and her physicians are always within call, as they have been for some months, but otherwise she lives as simply and as eagerly as ever.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Martyn and Florence:

The climate's pretty damp there, isn't it?

I should say so. It's really so damp the people can't raise anything but umbrellas.

I had a fall last night which rendered me unconscious for several hours.

You don't mean it? Where did you fall.

I fell asleep.

Reckon he wants people to know that he has money enough to retire on.

O! Well, everybody has his ups and downs.

That's right. Just at present I'm pretty low down because I'm hard up.

I think there are microbes in kisses.

Have you tried one of mine.

I went into a restaurant today and ordered a regular dinner. The waiter brought some soup to commence with, and as he put the plate on the table I noticed the tablecloth getting wet. I said: "Say, waiter, this plate must be cracked; the tablecloth is getting all wet." He looked at me and said: "O, the plate ain't cracked; there's only a leek in the soup."

It takes you a day and a night to tell a story.

I'd make a good bookkeeper, I should think.

Why?

Never short in my account.

My son, said a stern parent, I dislike your low ways. "Never mind, papa," said young hopeful; "when I grow up I'll be a highwayman."

We had a wooden wedding at the house last night.

Who got married?

Two poles.

Do you know that brother of yours is liable to get himself into trouble?

What has he been doing?

He's going around telling lies about me.

As long as he lies what do you care? But if he begins to tell the truth break his jaw.

McVICKER'S.

Curley and Welch:

Why did you eat so little while you were in Paris?

When I saw the prices I lost my appetite; and, besides, all they gave me was aeroplane chicken.

What kind of chicken is aeroplane chicken?

The kind that is all wings and machinery and no meat.

What kind of answer can I expect, after the way you embarrassed me while in Brussels?

What did I do in Brussels?

Do you remember that I introduced you to Pietro Mascagni, who composed "Cavalleria Rusticana"?

Yes, I remember.

I told you he was a famous conductor, and what was the result?

Well, what was the result?

You asked him for a transfer. And in London you behaved worse yet.

Say not so, Theosophiles.

Do you recall that I took you to the theater to see a play by Shakespeare?

Well, what of it?

At the finish of the second act you got up in your seat and hollered for the author.

I wanted to see him.

Why, you ninny, don't you know Shakespeare is dead?

I didn't even know he was sick.

Yes, after they got through Hamlet looked more like an omelet.

I certainly enjoyed our trip through Ireland.

Ireland? Were we in Ireland?

Why, yes; don't you remember, we made part of the trip by motor car and part by donkey. I sigh with pleasure when I think of it.

Then perhaps you can tell me the difference between a sigh, a motor car, and a donkey.

The difference between a sigh, a motor car, and a donkey? I'm sure I don't know.

A sigh is "O, dear!" a motor car is too dear, and—

Yes, but what is a donkey?

You, dear.

McVICKER'S.

Kennedy and La France:

I feel kind of chilly. Would you mind going to my home and getting my warm coat?

With pleasure. Where do you live?

29 Saint Mary's Lane—McCarty is the name on the door.

Not Michael McCarty?

Yes, Michael McCarty is the name.

Mike McCarty of County Mayo?

Why, yes. But how do you know all this?

Why, your father and my father were boys together in the old country and I've often heard dad tell how your father lent him a thousand dollars so he could come over to America and get a start in life. But before my father could repay the money your father had also immigrated to the land of the free—and try as he would he was never able to get a trace of his whereabouts.

Perhaps father had 'em in the wash.

MORE ABOUT THE CONVENTION

By Mae Tinée.

THE seventh annual convention will open next Saturday at the Coliseum. It will be in session until and including July 21. Arrangements are being made for the comfort and convenience of women and children. There will be rest rooms and the American hospital will have a tent for emergency calls with uniformed nurses in attendance. A nursery will also be a feature where, it is said, smaller children may be left in charge of competent attendants. The exposition will be thoroughly policed.

There will be a complete studio in operation with players from the various companies, and the public, it is said, will have an opportunity to take part in some of the screen plays. The managers promise to offer prizes for motion picture scenarios which are to be produced in the studio.

New York is actively in the field as a candidate for the eighth annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

A big movie ball which will wind up the convention will be held on Saturday night, July 21, in the new ballrooms of the Morrison hotel under the auspices of the Reel Fellows club of Chicago. One thousand couples can be accommodated and the public will have a chance to mingle with their favorites.

The Goldwyn Pictures corporation will show during the convention one picture each day at the Colonial theater to exhibitors.

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing company will keep open house at its laboratory and invites exhibitors and others interested in motion pictures to visit and learn the whys, ways, and wherefores of the manufacture of pictures. Here's how to get there:

Take the Northwestern elevated, get off at Diversey station, and walk four blocks west.

Take the Southport avenue car, get off at Diversey parkway, and walk east half a block.

Pearl White, it is said, while working in a southern city, was requested to call on Sarah Bernhardt, who was passing through on her farewell tour. It is said that Mme. Bernhardt told Miss White that she had long wished to meet her since seeing her in "The Exploits of Elaine," in Paris.

Frederick J. Harrington, who has the title of national originator of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, is a candidate for president of that organization.

They are busily buzzing around enlarging the Paralta studios at Hollywood, where the pictures of Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan will be produced. James Young is to be directing chief. He will be assisted by Emmet J. Flynn.

Douglas Fairbanks intends to tour the world next summer if the war conditions don't interfere with his present plans. He wants to do a series of five features to release through Artcraft dealing with the American touring abroad.

Ann Pennington is said to be recruiting a company of boy scouts through her own personal effort inspired by the youngsters who rallied and supported her in "The Little Boy Scout." They were troop 180 of the New York division of the Boy Scouts of America.

Bessie Love is a lonesome orphan these days. Her father and mother have gone to Texas for a stay of several weeks. Miss Love finds housekeeping a tedious task.

Gail Kane boasted that she had never been seasick. She boasts no longer, for while filming a picture one day the company struck some rough weather on the water, and Miss Kane, called upon for action, was located in a condition that caused the director to announce grouchily, "No more today!"

The factory girls at the American Film company's laboratory subscribed $1,000 to the Liberty loan.

Charles Ray has a new red car. His friends call it the "Red Devil," but his own name for it is "Tobasco."

The latest news of Kathlyn Williams is that she intends some day to establish an "old animals' home."

"That woman who doesn't care," Miss Eva Tanguay, will soon be seen in a Selznick production. It was over a year ago that she first engaged in negotiations with Mr. Selznick. This deal was called off and the new arrangement was completed recently.

Pslams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

WE MEET, BUT DO NOT SPEAK.

We do not speak, the wife and I,
We meet, but do not speak;
Our one time happy habitat
Is desolate and bleak.
A deep, sepulchral silence reigns
Within our humble hut;
Where lightsome chatter fluttered once
There now is nary flut.

Perhaps you wonder what became
Of our esprit de corps,
And why vamoosed the dove of peace
From our domestic shore?
If so your wonder cease a while
And read this deathless squeak,
And you will know then why we meet,
And pass—but do not speak.

Upon a lot adjoining us,
A lot of luscious loam,
I planted onions, beets, and things,
To garnish up my home,
To load my table with its yield—
Its succulent and bright
Convention of comestibles
Of esculent delight.

One fatal day wife volunteered
To help subdue the weeds,
And with a cruel, determined hoe
She dug up all my seeds,
She cut down each potato stalk,
Each onion, corn, and leek,
She thought them weeds, so now we meet
And pass—but do not speak.

THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

RIALTO.

Bob Hall: I was coming down the street the other day and I saw a little boy weeping most piteously, so I went over to him and said, "Sonny, what are you crying about?" He said, between sobs, "I had two quarters in my hand just now, when a great big fellow came along and grabbed one of them." Naturally being a very tender hearted guy, I sympathized with him and asked him what he did. He told me he cried out in a very feeble voice for help. I said to him, "Can't you shout any louder than that?" He said, "No, sir; I have the asthma; I can't yell out loud." So I took his other quarter.

I was meditating what to do with all this money, whether to get two whiskies and a beer or three beers and a whisky, and finally decided to toss up the coin to determine. I did, and as it came down a thief grabbed it and ran. I chased him yelling, "Stop, thief!" when a policeman grabbed me and demanded to know what I was making all that noise about. I told him I was pursuing a thief, and he said, "Well, stop right where you are; there'll be another one along in a minute or two."

"You have all heard of John Rockefeller and you all know he has a terrible nervous malady. After consulting all the doctors to no avail he went to a spiritualist and she told him that if he would get the shirt of a perfectly happy man and wear it his malady would be cured. So he sent agents out all over the world to find the happy man. I was sitting in the park thinking over some of the jokes I tell and laughing heartily all to myself when up comes one of these agents and says, "My friend, are you happy?" "I should say I am," I replied. "Perfectly happy?" he asked. "Perfectly happy," I replied. "I am the happiest man in the world." "Then you are the man I am hunting," he replied. "Mr. Rockefeller will give you $100,000 for the loan of your shirt for just one night." My, but that was a great offer. I almost fainted. I could scarcely realize it. But it didn't do me any good, for I didn't own a shirt at the time.

I got married not long ago, and as all you married men out here in front know, matrimony makes you very nervous. I married a very wealthy woman, but she wouldn't give me any money, and I got nervous right away, so I went to a doctor and he told me I had "matrimonial dyspepsia." He said my wife was too rich for me. I determined to have a smoke to quiet my nerves and went for a cigar. I got two or three—a quarter each. One of them was almost a whole one, but a fellow trod on it before I could get it. I lighted the longest one of the bunch and, strolling into the lobby of the first hotel I came to, I settled myself back in an easy chair and began puffing away to my heart's content. The clerk soon began sniffing as though he smelled something bad, and then, coming straight over to me, he said, "Young man, the guest died in room 13; that's the room we want fumigated, not the office." I told him I was just taking a smoke and not fumigating, so he said, "Well, if that's the case, smoke up, because you're going out," and I did. As I was leaving, he said, "For the love of heaven, if you must smoke, smoke smokeless tobacco." I had heard of horseless carriages, wireless telegraphy, and smokeless powder, but never of smokeless tobacco, so I went to the biggest tobacco store I could find and asked the man if there was such a thing as smokeless tobacco. "Of course there is," he said. It almost took my breath away. "What kind is it?" I asked. "Chewing tobacco, you yap," he said.

After that I thought I would take a little trip out into the country, so I wandered out to Union station to get a train for the suburbs. Since they have stopped lovemaking and kissing in the parks they do it all in the depots now. The minute a gateman called out a train and opened a gate there was a lineup of girls and young fellows desperately kissing each other good-by and they kept on kissing until the train pulled out and then they moved down to the next gate. I got so excited I tore off a few osculations myself and made a couple of old maids happy.

Solemnity Adds New Thrill on Nation's Holiday

By Mme. X.

EVEN the youngest and most casual American must have felt an extra Fourth o' July thrill last Wednesday. There was a solemnity about this year's national holiday that deprived the usual early morning celebrant of his pep. For the first time within the memory of its oldest member the X. family heard no cannon or giant firecrackers at dawn—the hitherto inevitable heralds of the day.

On every village green—and where's the self-respecting village without a green?—there were patriotic rallies, brass bands, singing of national airs, speeches, and, most popular of all, parades of soldiers and sailors. Sports this year take second place and the army and navy have precedence of all else.

Is there, by the way, any one who can pass through Evanston on Sheridan road without a mental comparison of the ununiformed, irregular, rather awkward band of men who daily drill there on the college campus and the husky looking men tennis players who frequent the adjacent courts? Probably the latter are as loyal citizens; perhaps they, too, have their daily military drill, but there is that in the juxtaposition of the two occupations disturbing to the thoughtful passerby. It is hard to be interested these days in preëminence in golf, tennis, baseball, or other sports. These distractions must go on, but they must take second place.

Bundesrath Blocks Sunday Golf.

Apropos of golf, the discussions as to the pros and cons of Sunday golf at Onwentsia are occupying a large part of the attention of the members of the club nowadays. Oddly enough, some of the most violent opponents of the proposed change in the by laws which shall enable those who will to play on those attractive, lush links on Sundays are men who play every Sabbath at Old Elm. Consistency is more of a bane than a jewel to these sturdy upholders of piety in others.

The sentiment in the club is overwhelmingly in favor of Sunday golf. The vote on the question stands some 376 to 20 or 30. But Onwentsia is run on somewhat the same lines as the German empire. The 376 represent the reichstag, the 20 or 30 the bundesrath, and it's the latter that controls the question at the Lake Forest club as in imperial affairs at Berlin, the Onwentsia bundesrath being composed largely of the early founders of the club or their descendants, who own the land which the club occupies.

If they should permit Sunday sports at Onwentsia it would be rather a blow to the new Shore Acres club, which was partly founded to supply the deficiency in Sunday occupations.

The whole controversy is but another example of the perennial struggle between the conservative and the liberal elements in the human race, and if the latter don't win this time they will another. It isn't the conservatives that promote progress.

Tell of Association Work.

Last Sunday at Lake Forest, in Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick's lovely gardens, several hundred of our most prominent suburban residents gathered in a big pavilion, erected for the occasion, to listen to Miss Martha McCook, Miss Holmquist, and Mr. Whitelair tell of the work and requirements of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

The achievements of the former organization in military camps and among soldiers have already been recognised and acclaimed in every one of the warring countries. The scope of the Y. W. C. A. is less extended and less recognized, and yet, as presented by the three exponents from the east, it seems to be an important factor in the nation's plans to protect and cherish the youth of the country, from whom we expect so much.

Certainly no cause ever had a more attractive, charming advocate than Miss McCook, who is young, "easy to look upon," appealing in manner, with large soft gray eyes, long lashes, and lovely complexion. She is a veritable "jeune femme du monde" and combines her undeniable good works with the traditional life of an eastern young woman of fashion and good family.

The Y. W. C. A. is a—to us—unexpectedly imposing organization, numbering as it does some 360,000 members, in 1,000 associations with 1,800 secretaries and 150 field secretaries to direct its activities. Its headquarters are in New York. Mrs. Robert Speer is its president. Mrs. James Cushman is chairman of its war council, Mrs. John R. Mott is first vice-chairman, Mrs. John Meiggs is second vice chairman, Mrs. Henry P. Davison is treasurer and Miss McCook is secretary.

Work About Military Camps.

It has established this war council "to shape its work in connection with military camps. Its best achievement so far is at Plattsburg, N. Y., where it has formed among the hundreds of young girls who are at work in various nearby factories, seven self-governing clubs with a central clubhouse in the town and what they call a "Hostess house" in the camp itself, a place to serve as a sort of headquarters for all women visitors to the camp.

At Niagara the Y. W. C. A. has also gathered many of the young working women into a club and also placed a "Hostess house" in the camp there. In connection with this work it is worth noting that the powers given by the national government to the federal commission on training camp activities, of which Raymond Fosdick is head, are remarkably wide. If this commission is dissatisfied with the moral atmosphere surrounding a military camp it can call upon the local authorities to improve this condition, and if this is not done the commission can notify the government of the state of affairs and the latter is pledged to move the camp to more desirable surroundings.

Just what Chicagoans will do at Fort Sheridan and the naval station in the sort of work the Y. W. C. A. advocates remains to be seen. To judge from the young and affectionate couples—girls in summer frocks and men in uniforms—that swarm up and down the north shore there's quite a field for some organization to curb and direct the demonstrative gratitude evinced on every hand towards the nation's young defenders.

Onlookers report that it is a frequent sight to see the jackies at the naval stations and young girls embracing each other through the cruel iron bars of the circumambient fence, recalling, as a prominent opera fan remarked, the famous scene in Wolf-Ferrari's "Jewels of the Madonna."

Perhaps the local maidens are drilling our warriors to enable them to receive with greater calm the kisses of the enthusisastic French women, which according to report embarrassed our regulars on arriving recently in France.

* *

Scion of Old Chicago Family.

It is interesting and inspiring to the old Chicagoan, to whom the city's past is as vivid as its present, to note that Capt. E. R. Tinkham, the first American officer reported as in the French trenches, was of a well known old Chicago family. Capt. Tinkham is the grandson and namesake of one of our distinguished pioneers.

Edward I. Tinkham was of the generation of William B. Ogden, Walter Newberry, Judge Mark Skinner, Isaac N. Arnold, and Ezra B. McCagg. His daughter, a delightful musician, was the late Mrs. James A. Hunt of Winnetka. His son, the father of Capt. Tinkham, is Julian Tinkham, who married Miss Mary Lord, a granddaughter of the celebrated Quaker anti-slavery agitator, Lucretia Mott, and now lives in Mont Clair, N. J.,

So young Tinkham has the best blood of America in his veins from both sides of his family.

Mrs. Ralph Hamill of Winnetka is his first cousin.

Soft Drinks for Motorists.

An enterprising group of north shore young women is planning a delightful and original way to raise money for the Red Cross. Mrs. Donald McPherson is chairman of the committee, which includes Mmes. Laird Bell, Francis P. Butler, Lawrence Howe, and Goddard Cheney, and Miss Harriott Houghteling. The scheme is to open a Sunday afternoon summer garden to sell cold soft drinks to passing motorists. The undertaking will be initiated today from 3 to 6 o'clock on the grounds of the Heyliger De Windt's place on Sheridan road, in Winnetka.

The place itself is one of the oldest in that neighborhood. The original house was built by a Capt. White a half a century or so ago. The Samuel Shackfords lived in it when "burnt out" by the Chicago fire of 1871. Then Gilbert Hubbard, a well known early citizen, for whom Hubbard Woods was named, built it over and enlarged it. The Henry D. Lloyds, the James Houghtelings, and Gen. and Mrs. Simpson all occupied the place at one time or another. The De Windts have kept the original, unpretentious, simple architecture of the early seventies unchanged—a decided comfort in these days of the Georgian, Tudor, and Rococo.

The young women in charge of the undertaking are engaging many of their friends to aid them in serving the refreshments which, it is to be hoped, a thirsty public will seek in this cool, green, fragrant, and thoroughly delectable spot.

So, direct your motor this afternoon along the lake shore on Sheridan road to Winnetka and give yourself a good time and the Red Cross a good boost. The road twixt Kenilworth and Winnetka is not of the best, and if you object to a mile of hard jolting, turn westward at Kenilworth avenue and approach Winnetka by the excellent highway that runs just east of the Milwaukee electric road. There will be signs posted along the way to guide you to the cooling beverages.

Home Charity Asks Support.

One of the chief concerns of the leaders of the local women's committee of the council of national defense is that home charities shall not be neglected in these stressful times. So it is with great emphasis that this column urges the support of one of Chicago's most appealing enterprises, the Society of Mental Hygiene, an undertaking that tries to provide profitable employment for those unfortunates who are not able to keep up with the tremendous pace of modern industrial life and yet are not qualified for the state institutions to which but for this society's endeavors they would be relegated.

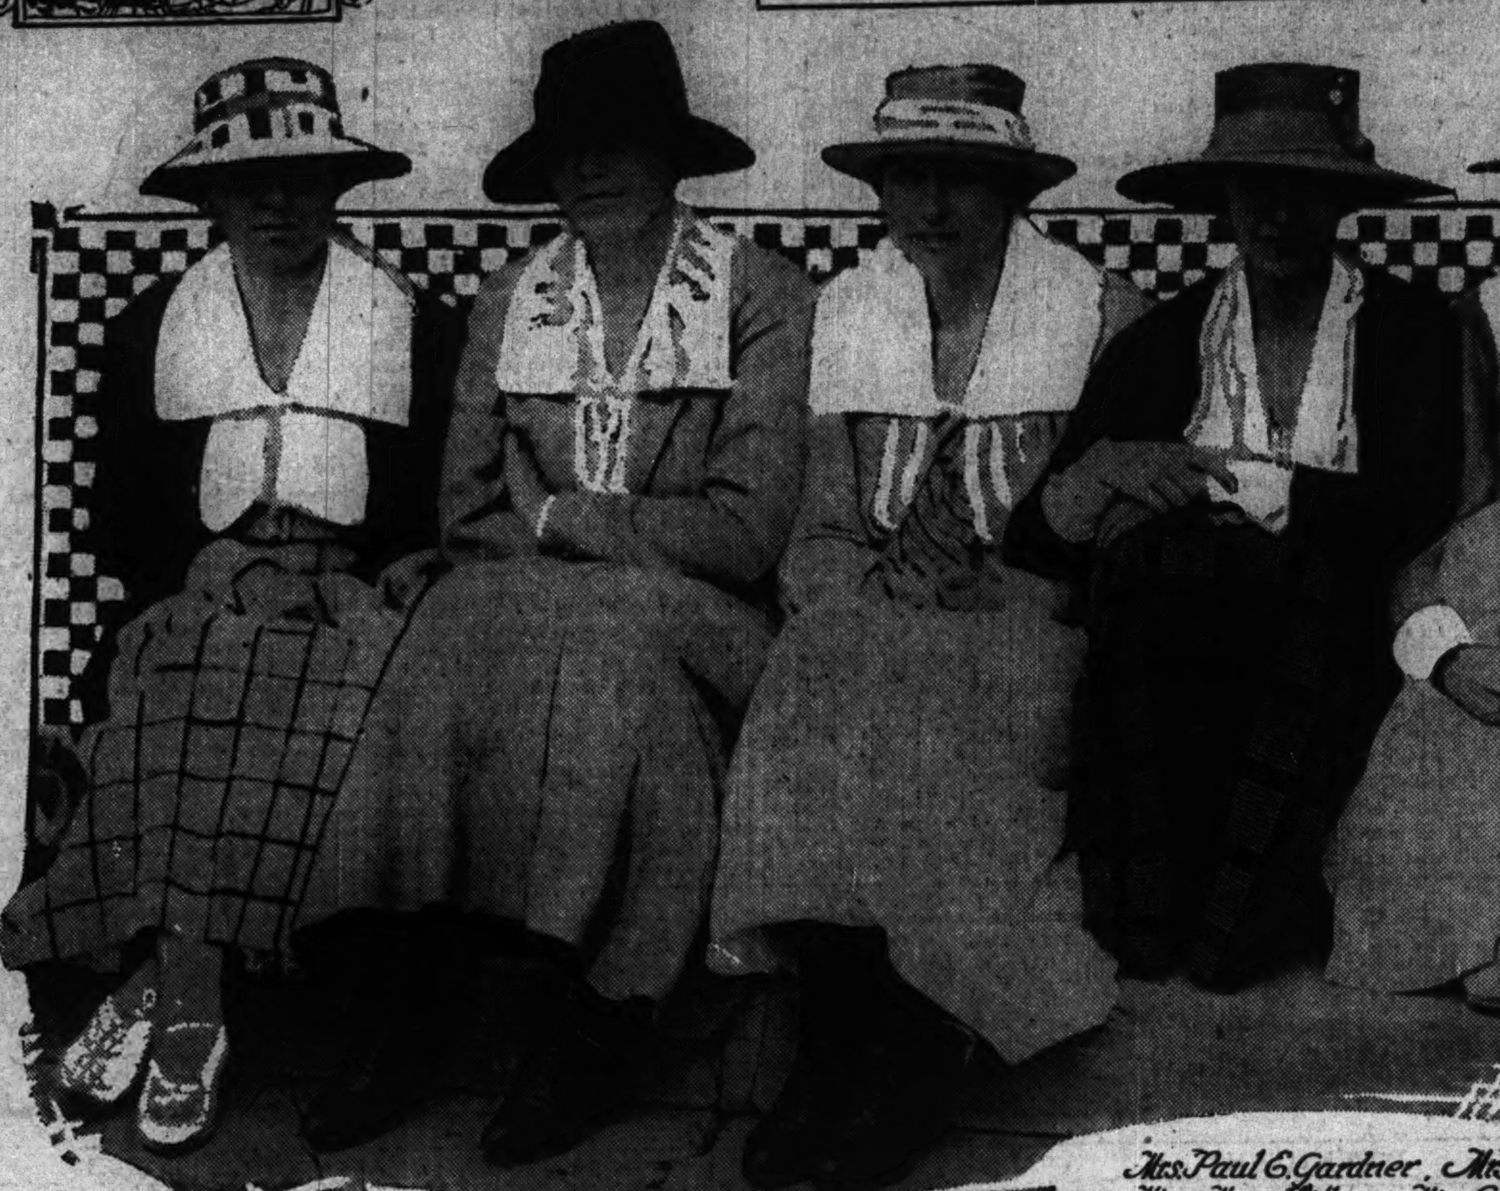
They are taught by the society to make a variety of pretty and useful articles which the society undertakes to sell, the sales thus made going to the support of the makers. They are thus given occupation and that wholesome, fortifying sense of financial independence which is soul saving.

A sale of these articles was carried on last week at Mrs. Ernest Hamill's Mrs. James Houghteling's in Winnetka. Mrs. William Monroe of 64 East Elm street is the mainstay and moving force of this charity and has for years carried it almost alone.

On Wednesday afternoon the grand Lake Forest massmeeting for cooks and their mistresses, organized by Mmes. Tiffany Blake and J. M. Patterson, will take place, when many practical and ethical aspects of the conservation movement will be presented to the audience. This campaign is growing and spreading as fast as its nature and necessity are understood.

There are a few—among housekeepers—who continue to serve the old fashioned dinners of many courses and several wines. It's curious how quickly we adapt ourselves to new ways of looking at things. These dinners, pleasant and friendly as they are, seem old fashioned and out of tune with the times. We're not criticizing those who provide them, only we don't quite understand their point of view in these times when united action is called for and means strength.

Fair Golfer Snapped After Weekly Tourney.



Mrs. Paul E. Gardner, Mrs. Stanley Keith
Miss Mary Withers, Miss Sarah G. Farwell
Mrs. J. M. Ely

There's one indulgence which the society women of the city and its adjacent country places allow themselves in these times of all day long Red Crossing, and that is a holiday now and then at golf. The Tuesday women's golf tournaments at the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest bring out scores of those who are on other days of the week to be found in the war relief shops of the city or in Red Cross nursing classes in the various hospitals in town. Mrs. Paul E. Gardner, Mrs. Stanley Keith, Miss Mary Withers, Miss Sarah Farwell, and Mrs. J. Morse Ely were "snapped" by the picture man just as they had finished their game and were about to go in for the weekly golf luncheon served at the clubhouse.

FUTURE EVENTS

Hundreds of little dogs will amuse us this week when they appear at the first annual bench show of the Woman's Kennel club of Illinois, which will be held on Friday and Saturday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Already more than 400 dogs have been entered. The proceeds will go to the Navy league, and the entries, with the prizes offered, indicate that the relief fund will be greatly increased by the affair. Among those offering trophies are Mrs. Prentiss L. Coonley, Mrs. Alexander H. Stewart, Mrs. Joseph A. Roach, Mrs. Henry R. Kasson, Mrs. Blanche Watson, Charles Casselman, Otto Lehmann, and the Dogs' Protective Association of America. Miss Catherine Spiegel has donated a little Pekinese named Ootah, to be disposed of at the show. An English sheep dog named Gray Friar of Evergreen will be exhibited by Mrs. Coonley. Those on the bench show committee are Mrs. Charles Clemmons, Mrs. Augusta V. Crawford, Mrs. Joseph Hughes, Mrs. Kasson, Mrs. H. W. Langzettel, Mrs. Roach, Mrs. B. W. Rosenheim, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. C. A. White, and Miss Sabina Johnson.

A new set of gay signs along Sheridan road will surprise the motorists who tour along the north shore today with their announcement of the starting up of a delightful tea garden—a sort of movable affair which will furnish to motorists scudding through Winnetka on a Sunday afternoon any sort of soft cold drinks they want, with goodies to eat with them. There is a committee of society women of Winnetka under the chairmanship of Mrs. Donald F. McPherson who are to be in charge of these tea gardens, the proceeds of which will go to the Red Cross. This afternoon the scene of the garden tea will be the lovely Sheridan road place of Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger A. de Windt, located near Elm street, in Winnetka.

Those on Mrs. McPherson's committee are Miss Harriot Houghteling, Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Lawrence Howe, Mrs. Francis P. Butler, and Mrs. F. Goddard Cheney. On each Sunday the tea garden will be found on a different estate along the motorists' line of travel.

The afternoon dance that will during the summer be a regular part of visitors' day at the naval training station at Great Lakes will be held this week on Wednesday afternoon in the drill hall of the station, following the drill and sham battle which are scheduled for 3 o'clock. Mrs. William A. Moffett, wife of the commandant of the station, and Mrs. Ford R. Carter are sponsors for the plan. A committee of north shore society women will attend to the arrangements.

The Kenwood club auxiliary will give a benefit card party on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock for its war fund. The party will be held in the clubhouse, East Forty-seventh street and Lake Park avenue. The officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. Clyde C. Paddleford, chairman; Mrs. A. B. Waughop, vice chairman; and Mrs. Frank H. Pitkin, secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Letitia V. Barnum will give a studio tea party tomorrow afternoon in her studio in the Fine Arts building.

Special outdoor parties on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday and dancing during the dinner hour on other days with a concert in the solarium make up a busy program at the South Shore Country club during the week. Announcement is also made of additional prizes to be competed for during the summer at the bridge parties held on Mondays.

Something distinctive in preparedness measures is the French dinner table which is to be instituted under the leadership of Mme. Alice Geubel de la Ruelle, who is in this country by commission of the French government to investigate industrial conditions among women and to lecture on home economics. The conversation at the table, which will be held every evening at the Brownleigh club, 16 North Wabash avenue, will be entirely in French, and the profits from the meals, which are to be furnished at $1 a plate under the guidance of Mme. de la Ruelle, will go toward the purchase of an ambulance to be sent to the French front. The opening dinner will be served on Monday evening, July 16, and many of the French colony of Chicago, including the French consul, are expected to be present." Guest tickets may be obtained at the Brownleigh club.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Help Red Cross in Spare Time, Plea to Women

THE patriotic committee of the Chicago branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae has sent out notices to its members calling their attention to the fact that in Canada every woman who is not self-supporting or tied down with housework is expected to give a day and a half a week to work for the Red Cross or kindred organizations, that every agency for the public good will need extra help and stimulus in our own country, and that American women, like Canadian women, ought to give as much of their time as possible to the service of their country.

One service which every woman, whether she be college bred or not, can perform is to look through her library, sort out every interesting book she can spare (not just those she doesn't want), and send them to the College club, Stevens building, marked for Mrs. M. B. Deadney, who will forward them to the soldiers and sailors wherever the need is greatest.

The services which specially trained women can render for the keeping up of the every day social service work in Chicago are listed by the bureau of volunteer social service and are recommended by the committee to the members of the association. So many social workers have been taken from their ordinary work and the work has become so much heavier with the mobilization of the army that the vacancies are many.

◆

If you wish to be of help in any of these capacities you may send your name to Mrs. E. D. Burbank, 5311 Woodlawn avenue, and your choice of work and the hours which you can spend at it, and she will put you in touch with some definite "bit" to do.

WOMEN IN WAR WORK

About a year and a half ago the chef of one of the great establishments in England called together the chefs of England and by appealing to their loyalty and patriotism brought about coöperation which resulted in a most substantial aid to conservation when the feeding of the nation had become one of its direst problems. The chefs of Chicago are planning the same coöperation with the government in its effort to feed its people, both at home and abroad, and the nations of the earth at the same time.

On Thursday evening in the crystal ballroom of the Sherman hotel at 8:15 o'clock the cooks of Chicago are to hold a patriotic rally in the interest of food conservation. The meeting was planned in coöperation with and under the auspices of the women's committee of the national council of defense. The meeting will be presided over by Albert Stalle, chef of the Sherman hotel.

Miss Mary Waller

Miss Mary Waller of River Forest is vice chairman of the publicity committee of the Illinois women's committee of the council of national defense, which is making a whirlwind publicity drive this week.

Miss Harriet Vittum will address the meeting as a representative of the woman's committee, and Dr. A. W. Evans will talk on food values. Carolina White of the Chicago Grand Opera company will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," "The Marseillaise," and other patriotic songs.

Invitations will go out in the form of hand bills inclosed in the packages that are sent out by the grocers and butchers of the city for the next few days. Besides individual invitations, the following organizations will be invited to attend in a body: The Progressive Culinary association, the Cosmopolitan Cooks' association, the International Stewards' association, and the International Cooks' association.

Two thousand Herbert Hoover buttons have been ordered from Washington for distribution to signers of the Hoover pledge, which will be distributed at the different meetings in the city.

Among other meetings is one to be held at Hinsdale on Tuesday, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Julian Mason; on Wednesday at 3 o'clock at River Forest, under the auspices of the Woman's club; also on Wednesday at 3 o'clock a meeting will be held at the Durand institute, Lake Forest, to which 600 invitations have been sent out to "You and the members of your household engaged in the handling of food," etc., and to the grocers and butchers. Russell Tyson, president of the University club, has promised coöperation in urging all those professionally engaged in the handling of food connected with the club to attend. Other presidents of clubs and hotel managers have also promised coöperation. A meeting of cooks of the Boy Scouts of Chicago is also being arranged. On the Lake Forest committee are Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Mrs. Robert McGann, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. Horace Martin, and Mrs. Keene Addington. The Chicago committee consists of Mrs. E. S. Beck, Mrs. Hopewell Rogers, Mrs. Othelia Myrhmann, Miss Agnes Greason, Albert Stalle, and Robert Muller.

A whirlwind campaign of publicity for the state of Illinois is the latest news from the publicity committee of the woman's committee of the council of national defense. The women are organizing, and even registering, all over the state, and they must have intelligent direction and close touch with the central office of the state in Chicago to make the coördination and clearing house idea, which is the design of the woman's committee, a success. The most representative woman in each town in the state which it is possible to procure as the live wire between Chicago and her station will be the press agent. Mrs. Cecil Barnes is chairman of the committee and Miss Mary Waller is vice chairman. Assisting Miss Waller are Mrs. E. S. Beck, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Mrs. Leigh Reilly, Mrs. James Keeley, Mrs. Charles Stanton, Mrs. Julian Mason, Mrs. Hopewell Rogers, Miss Helen Bennett, Miss Caroline Kirkland, and Miss Lucy Smith.

Miss Mary McDowell announces that the Friday noon class for volunteers who will teach foreign women the English language is now open at the Woman's City club. On last Friday fifteen young women volunteered. The only exaction made is that they will pledge themselves to be faithful for the length of time that they sign, whether the service given is for an hour, a week, or for a day or more. A great need for such teachers is felt just now, as there is more of a call for them to go into places vacated by men, and the lack of the English language is a great handicap. Miss McDowell is chairman of the foreign woman's committee of the national council of defense, and the new work is under its auspices. It is believed that if the work is a success it will be taken over by the College club in the fall.

Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, as chairman of the finance committee of the state branch of the woman's committee of the council of national defense, has to see to it that the exchequer of the committee does not fail. In response to several hundred letters asking for assistance already some $1,700 have come in, besides Mrs. Bowen's gift to the state committee of $1,000.

The philanthropy department of the West Side Coeducational club will give a lawn card party at the home of Mrs. E. A. Drake, 444 North Keystone avenue, River Forest, on Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Auto buses will meet trains at the Wisconsin avenue station of the Lake Street elevated. The proceeds will go to assist the First Illinois infantry. Mrs. William S. Haskell is chairman of this department. The Red Cross unit of the club, Mrs. D. D. O'Keefe in charge, has already sent 3,000 pieces of surgical dressings to the base hospital this year. The unit meets every second and fourth Friday of the month at St. Andrew's Episcopal church cottage, Washington boulevard and Robey street. Mrs. George Amerson, wife of Maj. Amerson, is president of the club.

The Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross has established a purchasing department in room 501, 112 West Adams street. E. B. Mower is director and Miss Marion Levin will act as secretary. This department will handle the purchase of all supplies necessary to the business of the Chicago chapter except materials to be made into supplies, which will be bought by the committee, auxiliary, and branch purchasing agents as in the past. The necessary requisition blanks will be furnished to the proper officers of the Red Cross organizations in Cook, Lake, and Du Page counties. Delivery receipts should be returned to this department in order that the receipt of the goods may be checked. The Chicago chapter announces that it has forty slides ready for lecture work. The work was done by the Art institute. Application for the loan of these slides may be made to the executive office of the Chicago chapter.

Four details of the National American Woman Suffrage association's war service are, plans for the raising and preservation of food, for the elimination of public and private waste, for the protection of women's labor in time of war, and for the Americanization of aliens.

On Thursday the members of the Perboyne Junior Art and Civic league will have an outdoor meeting in Lincoln park. They will meet at the North avenue entrance to the park at 2 o'clock. The caterpillar trains will take the party on a tour of the park, making ten stops. Mrs. William Grower will lecture on the principal statues. The boy choir of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church will sing in the band stand. This is to be a children's Red Cross day, and children and their escorts are invited to attend. Mrs. George Farley is chairman.

The first meeting of the Grand Crossing auxiliary of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross society will be held at the Cornell school, Seventy-sixth street and Drexel avenue, on Wednesday at 10 a. m., to work on supplies for emergency and base hospitals.

A Red Cross auxiliary has been formed in the parish of St. Ambrose and will meet in Kenrose hall on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday afternoons to sew and knit for the Red Cross. The officers are: Chairman, Miss M. A. Crowe; vice chairman, Mrs. M. V. Kannally; secretary, Miss Marie Mahoney; treasurer, Miss Gertrude Walsh.

A meeting will be held at the Daughters of the British Empire War Relief shop, 1202 Stevens building, on Wednesday at 2 p. m., to organize a chapter of the order composed of British born women residing in the Garfield park district. On Thursday a meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. William Patch, 6323 Winthrop avenue, to organize a chapter for the British born women of Edgewater. A card party will be given at the shop on Wednesday, July 18, Mrs. James C. Doud, chairman, for the benefit of the shop and purchase of supplies. The regular monthly meeting of the order will be held at 1202 Stevens building on Saturday at 2 p. m.

The Jolly Tar club in Waukegan will be open on Thursdays during July to visitors from the parent-teacher associations from Chicago and vicinity. The club is in charge of the Illinois congress of mothers, and is open to the naval boys from Lake Bluff over Saturday and Sunday, when they have shore leave.

CLUB NOTES

Lady Aberdeen chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, will meet with Mrs. Guy Read, 664 Englewood avenue, on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. Members are urged to bring their bazaar work.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. X

Kingdon Gould Chooses Bride to Suit Himself

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Of course everybody knew exactly what the Gould set would say as soon as they heard that Kingdon Gould had married Miss Annunziata Camilla Maria Lucci, who came into his young life a few years ago as the Italian tutor of his sister Vivienne.

"Like father, like son!" That was it. Varied occasionally by that equally characteristic observation, half censure, half triumphant deduction: "Well, what could they expect?"

As a matter of fact they tell me Kingdon is very little like his father. He takes, rather, after his mother. But there probably is reason in thinking that he did inherit from the Gould side of his house something of the spirit and determination that led his father to marry the pretty actress, Edith Kingdon, in the face of whatever parental objection there may have been raised at the time. The rest of it he probably absorbed subconsciously from hearing the Gould-Kingdon romance repeated again and again.

There have been many assertions and not a few denials regarding the attitude of the family toward this Gould-Lucci match. One story, to the effect that Edith Kingdon Gould, seeing what might happen, has been pleading for weeks with her son to wait another year at least—probably with the traditional maternal hope that before the year was over there would be other lips and other eyes their tales of love to tell the young heir.

* *

Parents Not Informed?

But the most generally believed story is that neither Mr. nor Mrs. Gould knew a thing of the young people's plans until three days before the wedding, when newspaper reporters called them up and asked politely for a confirmation of Kingdon's plans. Kingdon insisted both before and after the wedding that his parents were "perfectly agreed" about the matter, but it is worth noting that the perfection of this agreement did not prevent them from being rather conspicuously absent from the ceremony. And this neglect, I am sure, was not caused by any prejudice they might have had against the artist-bohemian friends of the bride.

The Gould home was made safe for democracy a good many years ago. No, I suspect rather that the arrangements for the wedding were too quickly made to fit in with the engagements at home. And this, added to the fact that there naturally was some little feeling of pique on the one hand and a desire to get the affair over with as simply and unostentatiously, as quietly and as quickly as possible, on the other, was responsible for the final arrangements.

And so the little party gathered in the big St. Patrick's cathedral, while outside a curious crowd, mostly reportorial, waited for Mgr. Ferrante, an Italian prelate, to complete the ceremony. Jay Gould was there, and I liked the human touch he gave the affair when he replied to one of the reporters who asked him how he happened to be the sole representative of the family: "O, I had to come. Kingdon is a bully good pal of mine."

The newspaper men were greatly impressed with the informality of the arrangements when one of the bride's friends, a Miss Gerardini, arrived and exhibited her invitation. It consisted of a plain sheet of note paper, on which was written: "I want you to come to my wedding this afternoon. It is private."

Another of the bride's friends who was singled out as reflecting local color was Mme. Enrico, at whose quite justly celebrated Italian table d'hote in West Eleventh street the spaghetti is said to meet the approval of some of our very best people, including the great tenor and connoisseur, Caruso himself. And where, we have it on the word of one who has seen him, Mme. Enrico's husband frequently presides over the kitchen range in person.

Well, the wedding has given the dear folks at home and in camp something to talk about, at any rate, and that is to be counted a blessing these dull society days. And, as the elders enjoyed recalling the older romance and other reminiscences, so did the debutantes and their gallants enjoy listening to them. Many had forgotten, for instance, the time Kingdon Gould entered Columbia university in 1904 and caused a minor riot by refusing, first, to wear a freshman cap when ordered to do so by the sophomores and, second, fired a revolver over the heads of the pursuing crowd of sophs bent on kidnaping him and using him for exhibition purposes at their dinner. They blackballed him the next year when he was up for king's crown and he was away from college for some time.

He went back later, however, and got his degree from the school of mines. It was this affair of the pestiferous sophs and the rebellious "freshie" that put a quietus on hazing at Columbia, though it added nothing to the popularity of Kingdon. Away from school he soon recovered a good measure of popularity, however, because he was a good sportsman. Jay has always been a bit the better of the two, winning the court tennis championship for one thing, but Kingdon plays a good game of polo, can ride like the fabled centaur, shoots well enough to qualify as a sharpshooter, and fences well.

* *

Like Father, Like Son.

Kingdon Gould is 29 years old. It was thirty-one years ago that his father set the custom of pleasing himself in the choice of a wife by taking Edith Kingdon out of the Augustin Daly company, where she shortly before had made her debut, and making her his wife at Lyndhurst, Irvington-on-Hudson, the then country home of the Goulds. He had met her first at the home of her mother in Fifty-eighth street, and Robert Hilliard is said to have served as the mutual friend who introduced them.

The George Goulds on that occasion spent the first days of their honeymoon at the Gould town house in Fifth avenue and then went on a brief honeymoon trip. And the Kingdon Goulds were not unlike them in this. They spent the first few days in the bride's apartments, 27 East Sixty-seventh street, and later started on a motor trip up the Hudson. They, at least, have this guarantee against boredom: They both speak French, English, and Italian, and if these fail them Mr. Gould can make love to his bride in four additional languages, including Arabic.

Newport Is Quiet.

It still is quiet at Newport, and nothing resembling a formal affair has either been attempted or discussed. Everybody is up to his ears, be they shell-like and pink or batlike and masculine, in war relief work, and they do say the work being done by the Newport branch is really of a superior grade. I have that from friends in Washington who have seen the contributions of the Newport Red Cross branch. There was even talk last week of taking the bandages, socks, sweaters, and pajamas sent in by these society women and using them as models for other branches to follow.

When you pause to reflect that a comparatively few months ago hardly one of the women engaged in this work knew how to hold a needle this report is greatly to their credit. And it is the old leaders who are most active—Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. Burke Roche, Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry.

The Astor place, Beechwood, will not be opened this summer at all. Vincent Astor is away with the officers' reserve and Mrs. Astor is in London, where she expects to join her mother-in-law, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, on a war relief mission to France.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, however, are going ahead with the alterations planned for their Bellevue avenue place and plan to open it later this month with a joint exhibition by three New York painters and three sculptors under the auspices of the Newport Art association.

To Dramatic Critics:

A Photo Play Advertisement With Only One Adjective

—The photo-drama which we are going to show at the Playhouse to-day is an ACCIDENT.

—We had no idea it was going to be so good when we started to make it.

—In scenario form it looked a little above the average, but as it unfolded and blossomed forth in the making, it developed into a corking good play.

—We intended to call it "Hands Up," but found that about four million other plays and photo-dramas had used that title, so we dubbed it "Come Through."

—Most of the successes of the screen and the stage are accidents, as one of you has so wisely said. We don't know which one of you said it, but it was probably YOU.

—We hope you'll be in a decent humor when you see and write up "Come Through." If your dyspepsia is bothering you, we'll suffer in the box office, and we don't think we should with an entertainment like "Come Through."

—We haven't used adjectives in this ad. We've saved them for you to use freely and carelessly when you write your review of "Come Through."

—If you do like the show, don't hesitate to say so. Don't hold back on our account. If you don't like it, we don't wish you any bad luck, but we hope you get writer's cramp when you start to write disagreeable things.

—Remember, the great Chicago public will grab tomorrow's papers with furious eagerness to hang on your word, so come through!

The opening performance will be at 11 A. M. today and thereafter daily, 11 A. M. to 11 P. M., continuous, Playhouse, Michigan Ave. near Van Buren St.

ART By Louise James Bargelt

Spirited Appeal in War Posters by American Artists

AMERICAN artists have every reason for self-congratulation in the poster exhibit at the Art institute. For three years England has been struggling valiantly in this same endeavor, rallying all her creative forces to the task of stirring patriotism in its various channels by posters of all sorts.

I have seen hundreds of those English posters, and from an American standpoint they do not compare in their degree of spirited appeal with the much smaller number of American posters we have turned out in the last three months. To be sure the English may prefer their English posters, considering the intrinsic difference between the temperament British and the temperament American. But our American posters have what Americans like, an appeal emotional, yet sturdy, vivid, and still sanely substantial, which strikes neither first at the heart nor first at the head but simultaneously embraces both elements of our nature, keeping fine the balance twixt the two.

There are a number of definite ways in which the American citizen can do his duty at this time. Of these the most immediate are the enlistments into the army, the navy, and the marines, the Red Cross by active service or pecuniary contribution, and in the cultivation of the soil and the conservation of food.

All of these branches have been graphically included in the present poster exhibit. Since there were practically no restrictions in regard to size or color, the individual idea of the artist had ample time to express itself in various individual ways.

For non-Chicago residents who will not have an opportunity to visit the exhibit and who have written asking about the prize posters and those which received honorable mention, the following list is given:

The committee of selection awarded honorable mention to the following:

ARMY.

1. Laura Bray—"On which side of the window are you?"
2. Janet Reid—"America to arms for world democracy."
3. Hazel Brown—"Be the first at the front."

NAVY.

1. Grace Freeburn—"S. O. S.—This means U."
2. J. B. Harrop—"Help make the history of tomorrow."
3. H. D. Simmons—"Join the navy."

MARINES.

1. Oscar B. Erickson—"Join the marines."

RED CROSS.

1. Rudolph F. Tandler—"The appeal."
2. M. B. Fowler—"Freedom's champion."
3. Ervine A. Metzl—"Help the hand that helps humanity."
4. Marjorie Hull—"The empty shelves."

LIBERTY LOAN.

1. Lillian M. Shedd—"Liberty loan."
2. Miriam Story—"Bonds or bondage."

CULTIVATION OF THE SOIL.
CONSERVATION OF FOOD.

1. William E. McKee Jr.—"Food."
2. Frances Robinson—"Helping Uncle."
3. Gus Stahnke—"As mighty as the sword."
4. Raymond Egert—"When the troops are away the wolf will play."
5. Bernice Wing—"Serve your nation by conserving your ration."

Some poster stamps have been added to this exhibit, diminutive affairs which make up for their lack of size by the degree of enthusiasm they breathe forth. They are dedicated to the Red Cross, the Liberty bond, and the cultivation of the soil, and are daintily and tastefully drawn.

The Chicago Woman's club is cooperating with the Art institute in its effort to make the visits of the soldiers and sailors at the institute pleasant in every way. Mrs. Herman Hall, who is their representative at the museum, has appointed a committee as guides. They will be stationed in Blackstone hall to act as guides through the sculptural galleries and in the Field room to serve in the same capacity among the painting exhibitions. During the weeks that Mrs. Hall will be out of Chicago various of the clubwomen will endeavor to make the visitors welcome.

The Friends of American Art have just presented another painting to the Art institute. This picture, "Snow Bound," is by John H. Twachtman and is the first painting by the artist to be in the permanent possession of the institute.

In the Ryerson loan collection, which has just been hung at the institute for an indefinite period, there is another painting by Twachtman, "The White Road." Other artists shown in this collection are Sargent, Gifford Beal, Arthur B. Davies, Inness, and Mazzanovich.

Four other loan collections were hung on Saturday at the institute and will remain there for the summer months. They are in the galleries of the annex, and many of the pictures by students of the school were removed to make way for them.

There is the Edward B. Butler exhibit, in which are to be seen paintings by Wendt, Hogarth, Siddaner, and Weisenbruch. In the Cyrus McCormick collection are pictures by Van Marcke, Wyant, Corot, Jacque, Lawrence, Harpigny, Ziem, and Redfield. In the exhibit of paintings owned by Charles Hutchinson one sees canvases signed by Netcher and Van der Neer, Baron Leys and Corot, and in the Mrs. E. H. Harriman loan collection there are forty pastels by McLure Hamilton.

MOTION OF THE SCORPIO STARS

ANTARES AND SCORPIO SYSTEM.

MANY groups of bright stars are physically connected. The Great Dipper, the Hyade, the Pleiades, and Orion are families of suns and not mere fanciful groupings.

Scorpio is one of the southern constellations. Its brightest star, Antares, is the only first magnitude star to be found in the southern sky on July evenings.

Fifteen stars of this group are known to have identical distances and motions. The system lies about 400 light years away. It is receding from the earth with a velocity of eleven and one-half miles per second, but in so nearly a direct line from the earth that there will be no spreading due to perspective for many millions of years. Three stars in Scorpio do not belong to this cluster, but lie much closer to the earth, and hence their motions are quite apparent.

In the next 50,000 years the whole of the Scorpio cluster will drift slightly toward the south, keeping its present relations, while the stars which are merely in line with it will travel entirely away and others will take their places.

The great sun of Scorpio is Antares, three times larger than any other sun in the group. It has a diameter of 160,000,000 miles, which is nearly as much as the diameter of the earth's orbit. In light giving power it is the equal of 3,400 of our suns.

Antares is a double star. The companion would barely be visible on a clear, dark night if it stood alone, but because of its nearness to Antares, it is difficult to see. It was by the aid of the moon that its existence was first discovered. The moon's path across the sky runs close to Antares, and it sometimes happens that our satellite passes directly between the earth and this star.

The moon has no atmosphere to soften or bend a beam of light just grazing its surface, and consequently, when a star is occulted it disappears and reappears instantly. It was observed that five seconds before Antares should reappear from behind the moon a tiny star always flashed out, and almost before it would be seen, Antares itself would leap out and drown its faint glimmerings in a blaze of red light.

With the exception of Antares all the stars of Scorpio are young. The contrast between its redness and the fiery white of the others is great. Whenever large and small stars are found together in a group the larger stars are invariably in a more advanced stage of evolution than the smaller.

At first this seems strange, because for two suns of equal age it might be thought that the smaller one would cool the more rapidly. The process of ageing, however, is more than simple radiation, it involves the strength of gravity as well. The sun and all the stars maintain their heat by shrinking and contracting under their own weights. The greater the force of gravity on a star the faster the heat is given off. For this reason giant suns, rather than small ones, are relatively short lived in spite of their great sizes and small radiating surfaces.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Dr. Dornblaser to Speak at a Patriotic Rally

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE REV. THOMAS F. DORNBLASER, a veteran of the civil war and ready to go into the present war if the services of a minister past 75 years of age can be accepted, will be the speaker at a patriotic rally today at 10:45 at the People's Evangelical Lutheran church, One Hundred and Tenth and State streets. The Wyman post, G. A. R., camps of the Patriotic Sons and Daughters of America, and other organizations will be present. A fife and drum corps will furnish music.

Dr. Dornblaser is an ardent believer in the war as a promoter of the spirit of self-sacrifice, unity, and comradeship, and says he can be as religious in leading a push into battle as he can in a prayer meeting. He was for many years pastor of Grace Evangelical Lutheran church and resigned at the age of 75 years one year ago to go to Mexico with the last expedition. He offered his services to Gov. Dunne as chaplain. He also applied to Theodore Roosevelt for a position in his expedition should it go to France. Dr. Dornblaser offered the prayer at the first national Progressive party convention, which nominated Roosevelt for the presidency.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal church, it is announced, expects to return to Chicago tomorrow from his wedding trip. Bishop and Mrs. Nicholson will not, however, open their Chicago home until Oct. 1.

Bishop C. P. Anderson of the Protestant Episcopal church is at Phelps, Wis., and Suffragan Bishop S. M. Griswold is at Richards' Landing, St. Joseph Island, Ont., where they expect to be during July and August.

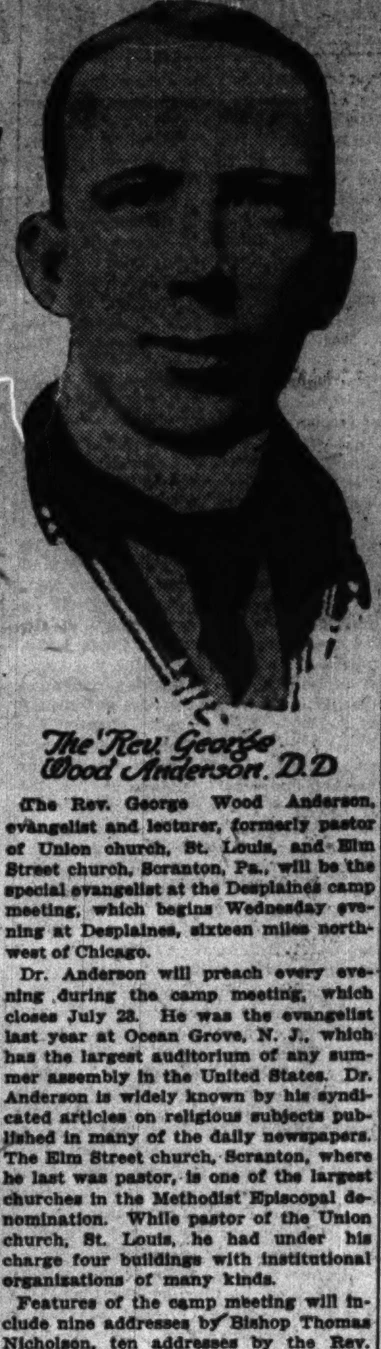
The Messiah English Lutheran church, Seminary avenue and School street, held a sunrise meeting July 4 and contributed $20 to the Red Cross. On the previous Sunday morning the school contributed $15 for the same purpose.

The war department at Washington, D. C., has announced that the Roman Catholic church is entitled to 48 out of the 144 regular army chaplains and 116 out of the 350 to be appointed for the new army. The Rev. Father Lewis J. O'Hern will represent the church in dealing with the authorities.

Mrs. B. W. Firman, for whose late husband Firman house was named, has returned to Chicago after a journey to Arabia to visit a daughter who is a missionary there. She will spend the summer at Crystal Lake, Mich.

The Ewing Street Congregational church, Gilpin place, near South Halsted street, will hereafter be known as the Firman Congregational church. The pastor, the Rev. W. A. Roberts, has resigned, and will leave Aug. 1. He will probably go to Colorado, it is said.

New Methodist Episcopal churches have been recently organized in North Austin, Pullman Gardens, near Washington Heights, and Indian Hill, north of Wilmette, so says the July issue of "The City Foursquare," published by the Rev. John Thompson, superintendent of the board of home missions and church extension.



The Rev. George Wood Anderson. D.D

The Rev. George Wood Anderson, evangelist and lecturer, formerly pastor of Union church, St. Louis, and Elm Street church, Scranton, Pa., will be the special evangelist at the Desplaines camp meeting, which begins Wednesday evening at Desplaines, sixteen miles northwest of Chicago.

Dr. Anderson will preach every evening during the camp meeting, which closes July 23. He was the evangelist last year at Ocean Grove, N. J., which has the largest auditorium of any summer assembly in the United States. Dr. Anderson is widely known by his syndicated articles on religious subjects published in many of the daily newspapers. The Elm Street church, Scranton, where he last was pastor, is one of the largest churches in the Methodist Episcopal denomination. While pastor of the Union church, St. Louis, he had under his charge four buildings with institutional organizations of many kinds.

Features of the camp meeting will include nine addresses by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, ten addresses by the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, pastor of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago; two by Bishop J. W. Bashford, Peking, China; six by the Rev. Harry Farmer of the Philippine islands, and other sermons and addresses by the district superintendents, the Rev. L. F. W. Leesemann and the Rev. J. L. Walker, and by several pastors.

Thursday will be Woman's day. The Woman's Foreign Missionary society will have the program at 10:45, the Woman's Home Missionary society at 1:30, and the Deaconess federation at 3 o'clock. The speakers will be Miss Carrie J. Carnahan, Philadelphia; the Rev. Roy L. Smith, St. Paul's church, Chicago, and the Rev. T. P. Frost, First church, Evanston. Saturday will be Epworth League day and Bishop Nicholson will make the principal address. The boys' camp will open on Tuesday and the girls' camp the following Tuesday, July 17. Improvements of several thousand dollars have been made in the physical equipment and no entrance fees are charged. The Rev. C. A. Gage, Olivet church, will be musical director.

A shower of a thousand flags will be one feature in an elaborate and novel scheme of patriotic decorations being planned for the patriotic service this evening at the Jackson Boulevard Christian church, Jackson boulevard, near Western avenue. Louis S. Adams, a member of the church, has provided the decorations. The address will be delivered by Maj. Farrell, who saw service in the Spanish-American war. The Rev. Austin Hunter is the pastor.

There was an estimated attendance of 5,000 at mass for the fifty recruits who have enlisted from the parish of Queen of Angels Roman Catholic church the morning of July 4. The Rev. Terence O'Brien, the pastor, was the celebrant of the mass.

A contest in which it is hoped to interest 10,000 children is being prepared by the Chicago Church Federation council, of which the Rev. W. B. Millard is executive secretary. Prizes of gold, silver, and bronze will be given to children of various grades as to age in and out of Chicago for the writing of the best sketches of the life of Christ. There will be prizes for three groups in Chicago and three groups outside of Chicago. A meeting will be held at Marshall Field's Tuesday noon to arrange for the details. It is believed the educational value to the children in the contest will be of great value.

The First Congregational church of Canton, O., has opened a roof garden accommodating 1,000 persons. The Presbyterian church in Dallas, Tex., where the Presbyterian general assembly was held last May, has a roof garden. The Sheridan Road Methodist Episcopal church has announced its intention of opening one on its new building which is now being erected. We do not know of any such roof garden in Chicago.

The Ravenswood Congregational auxiliary will give a benefit program tomorrow evening at the Wilson avenue Young Men's Christian association. The proceeds will be devoted to the purchase of materials for making supplies for the Navy league. Miss Mary Gates, reader, and other artists will furnish the program.

For the five Sundays in July the Rev. G. C. Whimsett, pastor of the Weaver Memorial United Brethren church, Kedzie and Dickens avenues, announces that one-tenth of the evening offerings will be devoted to the Red Cross. He will give a series of illustrated sermons and have a special soloist each evening to furnish the music. This evening the subject illustrated will be "Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress'" and Miss Marjorie Schuler will be soloist. Next Sunday evening his subject will be "Dante's Inferno and Paradise." Sheldon's "In His Steps" and Wallace's "Ben Hur" will be given successive Sunday evenings.

Miss Gladys E. Holton

Miss Gladys E. Holton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Holton, of 6035 South Michigan avenue, will be married soon to A. C. Chinn, of Lexington, Ky.

Today the Woman's City club will take a trip to Beverly Hills, leaving Chicago at 10 a. m. At 2:30 p. m. the Boys' Clean Life club will meet at the Garfield Park refectory and at 3:30 there will be a municipal concert at the refectory. Tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. the committee on public institutions will meet in the clubrooms. On Tuesday at [illegible] o'clock there will be a meeting of the playground committee, and at 12:30 o'clock the police committee will meet in the clubrooms, where it will also serve luncheon. The sanitation committee will meet on Thursday at the College club at 12:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Joseph R. Blair of 5909 Winthrop avenue, governor of the Ship of States Montana, entertained for the twenty-five members of the state cabinet on Friday afternoon. Plans were formulated for the fall work, which included cooperation in the local Red Cross activities and the extension of immediate aid to needy persons in Chicago. Committees were appointed to make a survey of local charity and patriotic movements and report with recommendations at the next meeting.

The University of Chicago Settlement league announces two mid-summer dances which will be held in the gymnasium of the Ida Noyes hall on Friday and Saturday evenings. The proceeds will go toward the work of the University of Chicago settlement. Refreshments will be served in the cloister by a committee of young college women.

The regular monthly meeting of the Children's South Side Free dispensary will be held at the South Shore Country club on Thursday at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. William R. Cubbins, chairman of the woman's club committee of the New City Contagious Disease hospital, will address the meeting.

Preparations for opening the new day nursery at the Catholic Social center are about completed. The building at [illegible] South Sangamon street is too small for the demands made upon the center, so additional quarters facing Jackson boulevard have been secured. From sixty-five to seventy-five children are daily cared for at the center and as many refused because of crowded quarters. On Friday afternoon a party will be given at the center for the benefit of the new nursery. On the committee in charge are Mrs. T. M. Schollenberger, Mrs. George B. Quinn, Mrs. George Farley, Mrs. James W. Sherdian, Mrs. A. R. Martin, and Mrs. W. J. Anderson.

Mrs. Henry Wilbeck of Riverside will be hostess to the members and friends of the King Alfred chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, Tuesday.

The poems must be original, must be not less than fourteen nor more than fifty lines, and must have been written in 1917. There will be a first prize of $50 and two prizes of $25. The competition closes Oct. 1. No poems will be returned unless sufficient stamps are inclosed. Each poem must be signed with a nom de plume and the real name of the writer must be sent along with the contribution in a sealed envelope, the nom de plume being written on the outside of the envelope.

Tomorrow the members of the Home-makers' guild will meet at the end of the Cicero car line at 9:30 a. m. for an excursion into the country for the study of edible weeds and to learn how to arrange to have country produce delivered direct. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Mark Henry, Mrs. T. Vernon Morse, Mrs. George W. Davis, and Miss Grace Michella.

Mrs. Robert E. Gregory, president of the Girls' Friendly society of Chicago, will meet the secretaries of the various branches on Wednesday for luncheon at the [illegible] club, Stevens building, when arrangements will be made to hold a bazaar at the Auditorium hotel next November in aid of war and local relief funds.

Motorists Waste Millions Through Neglect of Tires

The men who compiled the tire advice given below guarantee that it will effect a saving of at least $30 a year to every motorist who heeds it. In 1916, they declare, neglect of tires in the United States cost automobile drivers, at a conservative estimate, $150,000,000. A deliberate effort to educate the public in buying less of its product is not common among manufacturing concerns, but that is precisely what this article represents. It was prepared for "The Tribune" by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company.

WE Americans have been extravagant. We have literally educated ourselves to be careless with the most expensive things we buy. Price has been no object and our prosperity has led us on and on until now we are obliged to face a period of economy. We begin with food. You are told to buy less of the necessities and to entirely use what you do purchase. This economy isn't going to prove a hardship to you. You are still going to get all the food you actually require, and in addition you are going to save yourself some real money.

You have been brought to realize that a general food conservation is a dire necessity, but this isn't going to work any real hardship, for you will merely save what you wasted before. Nor will a "tire economy" reduce the pleasure of driving your car. On the other hand, you will save much expense that you wasted through carelessness or abuse of your tires the past season.

If you follow the advice give in this article you will get more service from your tires, regardless of what make they may be, and at the end of the season your expense will have been so much less than it ever was before that you will no longer neglect your tires.

The pictures shown here are of genuine abused tires, hundreds of which are discarded every day throughout the United States before they have given the service for which they were built. It isn't the manufacturers' fault. The mileage was built into each tire, but the car driver lost it through carelessness.

Injured by Chains.

Illustration No. 1 shows the result of improper application of tire chains. When chains are used they should not be applied tightly. Leave them just loose enough so that every time the wheel turns the cross chains will not strike the same spot in the tire. If you do not heed this advice you might preserve this illustration as an actual photograph of your tire.

Faulty Alignment.

A more common tire injury is shown in illustration No. 2. This effect is due to faulty alignment of the front wheels. A bent axle or steering knuckle may be responsible, or possibly the demountable rim was not perfectly applied.

Accidents are not always responsible for the front wheels being out of alignment, but frequently this is the case. All cars, through no fault in manufacture, are subject to this condition, and the first indication will be given when you notice the tread of one or both tires wearing as though a rough file had been used on them. If the tread becomes worn through, and the fabric affected, then the tire is beyond repair. Correct trouble quickly to avoid necessity of this. There is but one remedy, and that is care. Test your front wheels frequently and be sure that they are in proper alignment. See illustration No. 16.

Under Inflation.

Underinflation is the "white plague" of the pneumatic tire. More damage, such as shown in illustration No. 3, is done, possibly, by underinflation than by any other cause. The wavy condition of the tread of this tire is due to its having been run soft, with insufficient air, and consequently becoming loose from the fabric through no fault of manufacture. Most tire manufacturers have inflation schedules which they are anxious to place in the hands of every motorist.

A tire caliper is the best method of measuring the air pressure in your tires. It is a recent invention of one of the large rubber companies and is made adjustable to all sizes of tires. When adjusted to the size of tire you are using, if the tire is properly inflated, it should slip over the tire snugly. If it does not fit your tire, then the pressure is too high or too low.

Use of Tire Caliper.

Illustration No. 4 shows the correct use of the tire caliper in judging the proper amount of air pressure to carry in the tires. A scale is arranged along the polished steel surface along which the two prongs that fit over the tire slide. In this way the pressure in the tires is determined without disturbing the valve of the tube.

Neglected Cuts.

Illustration No. 5 shows a casing with two-thirds of its life wasted, for neglected cuts in the tough rubber tread have caused it to blister. In this instance sand and dirt had been forced into the cuts and worked around under the tread. Note the several large bumps where the sand and dirt have accumulated. If a tire is carefully watched for these cuts a little plastic will heal them quickly and no damage will result.

Skidding.

Tire No. 6 shows the effect of skidding caused by a sudden application of the brakes. Ever fall and skin your knee? This poor tire has experienced worse than that. Part of its face has been scraped off. Purely carelessness.

"Gum" Blowout.

Tire No. 7 has been a victim of a slow leak which caused a surface or "gum" blowout. Frequently slow leaks are caused by picking up loose nails or tacks. The head of the nail or tack prevents the air from coming out of the casing at the punctured spot, but not so of the tube. Possibly before the slow leak is noticed the head of the nail or tack has been worn off so that it cannot be located from the outside. This happens every day and generally the motorist will put several tubes in the casing, with the result that they are punctured by the concealed nail or tack. Take the precaution always in changing a tire to run your hand carefully around the inside of the casing in search of these sharp objects which puncture your tubes.

The casing originally was punctured in the center of its tread. While usually the air would escape through the puncture, in this case it has followed the fabric plies and come out between the outer ply and the rubber tread. In seeking the point of least resistance it has accumulated where the rubber was thinnest and formed an air pocket. The thin rubber soon gave way to a blowout.

This casing could have been easily repaired. A new tube should have been put in the casing and at the earliest opportunity the loose rubber should have been vulcanized to the carcass of the casing where it had become loose.

Rut Worn.

Illustration No. 8 shows a tire that has been run in ruts. Whether the ruts in the road are too large or too small for the tire, this wear on the sidewalls occurs regardless. What's the answer? Keep out of the ruts. Tires were not made to withstand wear of this kind.

Bent Rims.

Illustration No. 9 shows a tire that has been applied to a clincher rim that had a bent flange. Many flanges are bent by running with a flat tire and striking stones or ruts in the road. The rim looks as though it had been pounded with a hammer in the place where this damage was done. Of course the tire would not seat properly at this point and resulted in being severely cut and placed out of commission. This is a common occurrence nowadays.

Straight Side Tire on Clincher Rim.

Without the lip on the bead, it naturally follows that when a straight side casing is used on a clincher rim there is only a narrow line of contact between the clinch on the rim and the side of the bead. This causes the bead core to loosen as shown in illustration No. 10 and the tire is beyond repair. It seems impossible that such an error could be made, but here is an example:

Inside Protectors.

The owner of tire No. 11 had applied an inside protector to a new tire, thereby hoping to lengthen its life. Instead, it has reduced the resilience of the tire, added more thickness to it, which created excessive heat, and has finally so weakened the adhesive qualities of the rubber between the plies of fabric that it became badly blistered and beyond repair. Inside protectors should be used only as a means of prolonging the life of old and practically worn out tires, or in cases of emergency with new ones, and then temporarily only.

Tire Applied Hastily.

Tire No. 12 has been hastily applied and the flap has been allowed to extend under the bead in several places, not allowing it to seat properly. The tire has broken at each of these points just above the bead and produced the same effect as a rim cut. Needless to say, this tire is beyond repair.

Clincher Tire on Straight Side Rim.

Illustration No. 13 is of a clincher tire that has been used on a straight side rim. In spite of the fact that such a mistake seems impossible, it happens quite often. The toe of the bead has become flattened and the abnormal strain has resulted in the bead being torn loose, rendering the tire useless and beyond repair.

Running in Car Tracks.

Tire No. 14 has been fighting car tracks. Street cars are mighty handy, but their tracks play havoc with tires. This tire has seen less than 2,000 miles service, but it has been run in car tracks and the rubber is worn down to the fabric in a line following the circumference of the tire. Furthermore, the fabric has become worn and blistered. The casing is beyond repair.

Blowouts.

Illustration No. 15 is of a tire whose necessary repairs have been neglected. To begin with, the tire was cut entirely through by some sharp object. An inside patch was applied by the owner, but he neglected to have the patch removed and a permanent repair made at the first opportunity. This temporary patch has gradually pulled away from the position it originally held and has been forced through the break. When inside patches are used an outside emergency band should also be applied, but both removed as quickly as it is possible to make the repair. Don't wait until the tire gives out, but look up a repairman at once. Have the tire repaired while the injury is small.

Lining Up the Wheels.

Illustration No. 16 shows how easily the front wheels of your car can be lined up. The front and rear wheels on one side of the car should be put straight in line so that a string as shown in the illustration will come in contact with the tires at the front and the rear of each. Having lined the wheels on the side, a string should be carried to the other side of the car, where the process is repeated. Should a distance of more than a quarter of an inch be found to exist between the side of the tire and the string, the wheel is out of alignment. The greater this distance the greater the wear on the tread. Having discovered this, the wheel should be properly adjusted.

Stone Bruises.

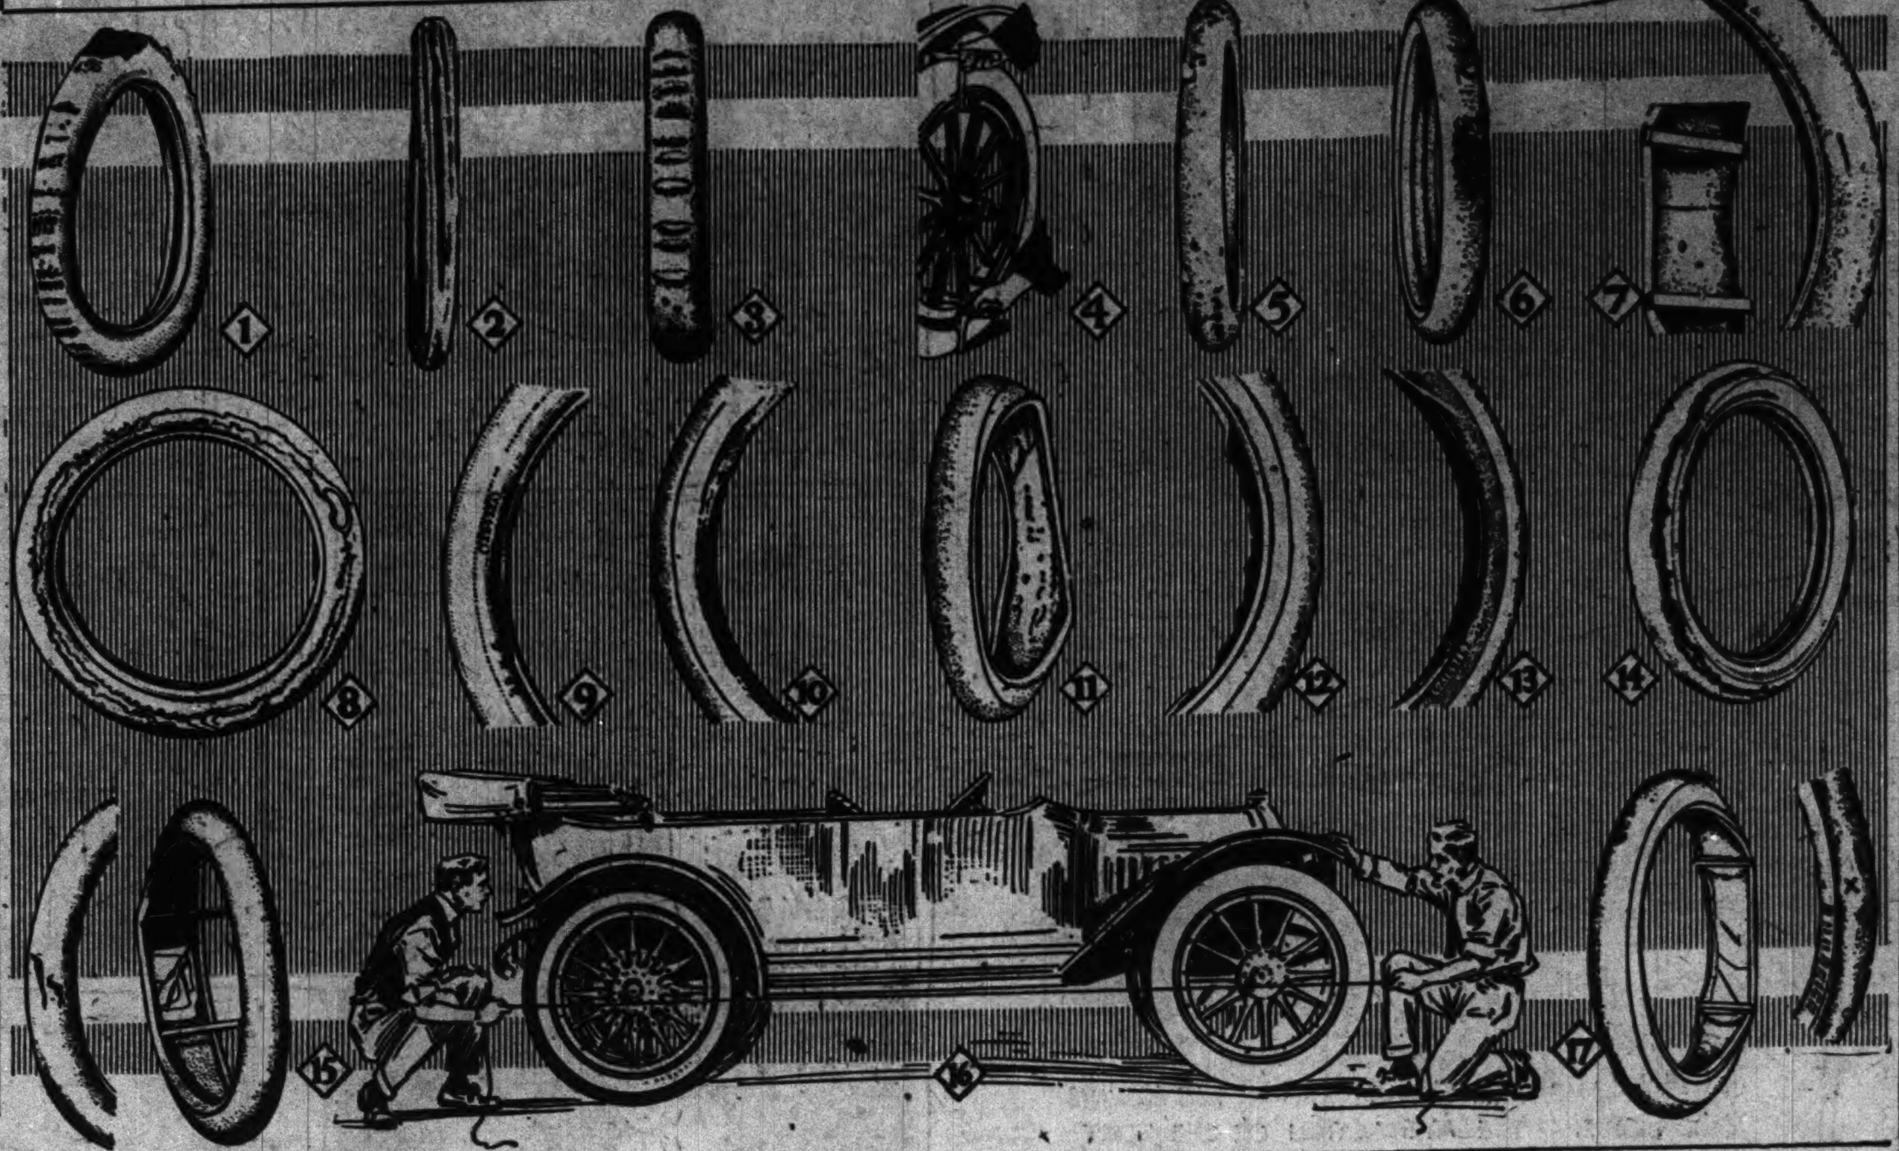
Tire No. 17 is a fine illustration of what a stone bruise will do. This tire has struck an obstruction in the road, generally a stone about the size of your fist. The tough rubber tread did not break, for it is elastic, but the fabric of the tire is not built to receive such shocks. The sudden blow caused the fabric to break, whihc was quickly followed by a blowout. It is well to avoid stones or other obstructions in the road, however small.

Every one of these instances is taken from real life and the tire manufacturers of the country could show thousands of such illustrations every day. They offer indisputable evidence of the general carelessness of motor car drivers toward their tires. Tire economy or care has never been advised to save a shortage in tires, but right now this is an eminent danger, for the demand seems to be growing greater than the supply.

These warnings are designed to serve a further and double service, for they must educate motor car owners to get every cent's worth of value of his tires that the manufacturer has built into them. A close observance of these warnings will positively effect a saving of at least $30 a year to every motorist who heeds them. More miles for less money will be the result.

WHAT'S YOUR TIRE BILL?

It May Be Less This Year If You Will Consider the Object Lessons Depicted Herewith.



EXTRA!

Does This Mean That the Millennium's Nearer than We Thought?

PENALTY for having bad stretches of road near farms is exacted by an agreement passed at a meeting of Burleigh county, North Dakota, farmers. This is to the effect that $5 for dragging a motor car out of the mud is too much and shall be cut to $1. The resolution also declares that a farmer who allowed a car to be mired in front of his farm should apologise to the owner and pull the car out free.

What Italy Likes.

Six cylinder engines are rare, while eights and twelves are altogether unknown in Italian service. Practically all these cars have a tread of fifty-five inches and a wheel base of 100 inches, but not often exceeding 118 inches.

When Battery Lies Down, Do You Know Why?

WHEN you go out to your garage in the morning and find that for some reason or other your starter won't work, it gives you a lot of satisfaction to know exactly what the trouble is, although you may not be able yourself to remedy it.

If the trouble is in the battery, certain definite symptoms will denote it.

If you find that your battery has not energy enough to turn over the starting motor, the first thing you do naturally is to test it with your hydrometer. Nine times out of ten you will find that the trouble is—starving. The hydrometer will infallibly uncover this condition, for instead of registering 1,280 to 1,300, as it would if the battery were fully charged, it will register below 1,200.

◆

All right. You've discovered that your battery is starved. But going back a step farther. "What causes it to be starved? How did it come about that the battery which is to supply you with energy and to spare for starting and lighting gets into a condition that it has not power enough for either one of these things?"

How are you running your car? If you are running it in the city, short distances, stopping frequently, you are using a large amount of current for cranking the engine without giving the generator a chance to restore to the battery power enough to offset this drain.

While it is impossible to state just how much the car should be run to keep the battery in a fully charged condition, this much can be said: Every time you crank your engine the battery for a few moments is putting forth two horsepower of energy. Very obviously, if it is called upon to do this long at a time, or at too frequent intervals, it is not going to be long before the battery is exhausted. If, however, the machine is run a considerable distance at a fair rate of speed, say from fifteen to twenty miles per hour, the generator gets a chance to restore energy to the battery and the dangers of starving are reduced just in that proportion.

Some days, perhaps, in testing your battery you find one cell or two cells show the normal reading, but the third shows a very low reading. This can only be interpreted in one way, the entire battery is in poor condition. The fact that two cells show a higher reading than the third is merely accidental. The fact at the bottom of the whole thing is this: The measure of energy in the discharged cell is very probably the measure of energy of the whole battery. In such a case the battery should be recharged at once at the battery service station.

What Uncle Sam Expects Car Owners to Pay When War Tax Bill Becomes a Law.

Here are the provisions for taxing automobile owners contained in the federal war revenue bill as it was sent to the senate in completed form last week by the committee on finance:

ON the date this act takes effect and thereafter on July 1 in each year, and also at the time of the original purchase of a new automobile or motorcycle by a user, if on any other date than July 1, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon the use of automobiles and motorcycles not exclusively for business an excise tax at basic rates, as follows: Motorcycles, $2.50; automobiles the original listed retail price of which is not over $500, $5; original listed price over $700 and not over $750, $7.50; original listed retail price over $750 and not over $1,000, $10; for each further increase of $500 or fractional part thereof of original listed retail price an additional tax of $5.

In the case of a tax imposed at the time of the original purchase of a new automobile or motorcycle on any other date than July 1, the amount to be paid shall be the same number of twelfths or the amount of the tax as the number of calendar months, including the month of sale, remaining prior to the following July 1.

The tax payable in any year shall be reduced by 10 per centum of its basic amount for each twelve months elapsed since the original sale of the automobile or motorcycle by the manufacturer or importer, but in no case shall it be reduced to less than 50 per centum of such basic amount.

Gasoline Waste.

Although this is the age of self-starters, motorists are prone to let their engines run idle to an unnecessary degree. Some economists approximate that each of more than 2,000,000 cars in the United States wastes an average of a pint of gasoline a week in this way. Figured even at 20 cents a gallon, this gasoline waste would amount to more than $2,600,000 a year.

Be Good to Your Motor Car; Give It a Real Home

[By the Superintendent of Service, Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company.]

No prospective owner hesitates to ask about the proper way to take care of his car, but he frequently overlooks the matter of providing himself with the facilities to make such care easy. If a man looks after his car himself he should see to it that his home garage is a place of order and tidiness. A clean, well ordered, well equipped garage means longer life for the car.

Owners frequently allow their cars to get into bad condition because the garage has been allowed to run down to such an extent that, to find any given article, a dozen and one other things have to be turned over or upside down, ending very often in a vain search and a ruffled temper.

There should be a few shelves around the garage on which to place oil and grease tins, boxes for dusters, cotton waste, and the many other accessories which accumulate so quickly. All boxes should have a label outside giving details of their contents.

Several pieces of wood across the garage near the roof, or across one corner, will do to store away old outer covers and tubes until there are a sufficient number to send away.

A work bench on which a vise can be fixed is invaluable if there is room for it.

One of the most useful things in a garage is a tool rack. This is easily made and consists of a fairly thick board large enough to hold all the tools which are kept in the garage for general repairs, as apart from those that are carried in the car.

First of all, however, place the tools on a large piece of paper and arrange them so that they take up as little room as possible, although sufficient room should be left between each for you to be able to pick up any one without disturbing the one next to it. Put them into groups, keeping tools of the same kind together, ranging from the largest to the smallest.

The best positions having been found, you will now know what size your board will be, but it is advisable to get one larger than you immediately require, so that new tools may be added as they are bought. The board procured, proceed to drive in nails, screws, staples, or hooks on which to hang the tools.

Now, paint an outline of each implement on the board, so that when a number of tools are removed at the same time you will be able to see at a glance exactly where they go when you wish to replace them.

Another useful article is a chest of drawers in which to keep such things as washers, splitpins, and nuts. A convenient place for it is on a shelf, not too high up. Any carpenter would make one for a small sum, but during the long evenings it is quite a pleasant occupation to make it yourself, particularly as it does not require many tools or an expert carpenter to carry out the job in a satisfactory manner.

A handle placed on the top of the chest will enable it to be carried to wherever you may be working, in the same manner as the tool rack. It is very convenient to be able to do this, as it saves much walking about.

Down on the Farm.

The Canadian Pacific wires from Calgary that a Lethbridge automobile dealer has ordered a million dollars' worth of automobiles for the southern Alberta farmers. Southern Alberta has had two immense crops and expects a record again this year, with the result that farmers are buying automobiles.

The Experts Say---???

If you have detachable wheels, remember that metal parts may rust. Every time you change a wheel cover the metal contact surface with grease, otherwise the detachable wheel will be detachable no longer.

Always cross railroad tracks in second speed. You will, of course, run over them slowly to avoid damage to the tires, but the engine is easily stalled when throttled down on high speed. Go over in second and you are more likely to be safe.

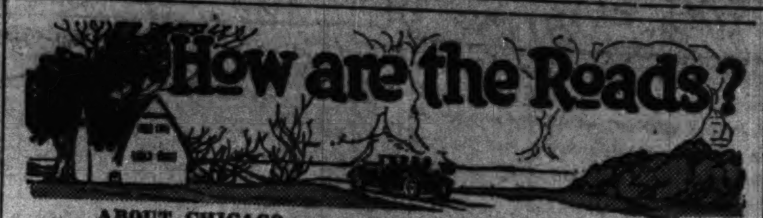
Watch your wheel spokes, especially if your car be an old one. If the spokes can be shaken, tighten the bolts on the flanges of the hub. If they remain loose after that consult a wheelwright, for your life may be endangered by the breaking of a wheel.

A cause of overheating that is frequently overlooked is a slipping fan belt. The fan must run at the speed intended by the designer or it will not cool the water properly. If you can take hold of the blades of the fan and spin it the belt is too loose. An excellent arrangement, found on some cars, provides a spring which takes up the tension of the belt automatically.

Motorists frequently overload their storage batteries by the use of electrical accessories not included in the car's regular equipment and then wonder what's wrong. The storage battery provided, of course, is designed to operate standard electrical equipment and no more. The addition and use of cigar lighters, electrical cookers, spotlights, etc., means an overload. If several of these "extras" are to be used the safe way is to find out from a battery expert whether one's battery is of sufficient capacity to meet the added demands.

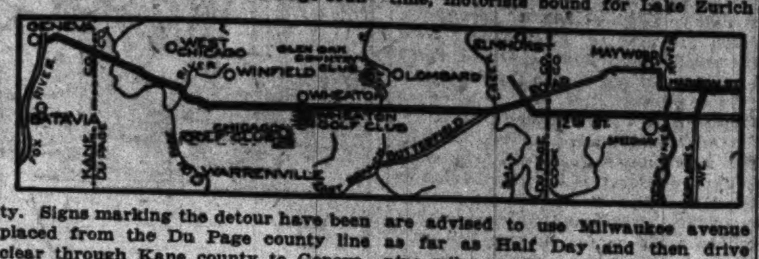
A lap robe, a gunny sack, or even some old newspapers will frequently be enough to get a car out of deep sand or a mudhole if placed in front of the rear wheels to produce traction. A big armful of straw or hay, also, will turn the trick. Anything, in fact, that will keep the wheels from spinning will suffice. Many motorists carry a few old sacks for this purpose, and they can testify to the fact that they are worth many times their cost as emergency equip-

How are the Roads?



ABOUT CHICAGO.

Tourists traveling from Chicago west to the Lincoln highway may now easily follow the new detour via Twelfth street, which offers better roads than the old way via the St. Charles road through Elmhurst and Lombard. The new way is shown on the accompanying map, which was prepared by Arthur L. Webster, drainage engineer of Du Page county.



Signs marking the detour have been placed from the Du Page county line clear through Kane county to Geneva, where the highway proper comes in from Aurora.

The first markers will be found about five miles west of the Desplaines river, or one-half mile east of the end of the concrete pavement at the Du Page county line. Those driving from Chicago may go out Washington boulevard to its end at Marengo avenue, turn left to Madison street, right to Desplaines avenue, and left to Twelfth street, where the new concrete road is picked up and followed west past Speedway park. This gixes six miles of concrete road. At the end of this distance a turn is made north for one-half mile, or to the first road (Butterfield road). Then turn west for one and one-half miles, cross the bridge over Salt creek, and at the schoolhouse one-quarter mile beyond take the Twelfth street road straight west, passing between the village of Wheaton and the Wheaton Golf club. The markers continue west three miles, cross the Du Page river, go north one-half mile, and then run directly west to Geneva. But at present there is a stretch of road west of Wheaton that is bad in wet weather. To get around this the Du Page county people have marked a short detour that is easily followed to the main road.

A party of Milwaukee motorists who drove from the Cream city to Chicago during the week have discovered what they describe as a "fair" combination route between the two cities. This followed the shore roads through South Milwaukee and Racine to Kenosha, from which city Holland avenue was followed over a new road southwest to the state line. From that point the route lay east to the Green Bay road and into Fort Sheridan. Here Sheridan road was taken into Chicago. The tourists reported that only one mile of the route was really bad. That stretch was encountered four miles north of Kenosha.

Work is proceeding on several sections of the Rand road, which is closed for its entire length while reconstruction is going on. When it is finished and thrown open to traffic late in the summer, tourists will have a fine, new concrete road extending from the Milwaukee avenue concrete northwest to the Lake county line, or within four miles of Lake Zurich. In the meantime, motorists bound for Lake Zurich are advised to use Milwaukee avenue as far as Half Day and then drive nine miles west over a good road that is mostly gravel.

Motorists should look out for speed traps in Highwood, near Fort Sheridan. Several arrests were made there last week, offenders being charged with speeds in the neighborhood of twenty miles an hour and warned that they "can't go more than ten." Arrests are being made in Forest Park for speed exceeding twenty miles an hour in Madison street from Harlem to Desplaines and in Desplaines avenue south to Twelfth street — congested districts where the speed limit, of course, is entirely reasonable. The village of Riverside has a motorcycle officer, and drivers will do well to keep within the speed limit while passing through.

ELSEWHERE.

Western railway offices have received word that the Yellowstone National park is recovering from the heaviest June snowstorm ever experienced in that section. From eighteen inches to two feet fell in the park, and in the cañons along Cody gateway the snow drifted to a depth of from ten to twelve feet. As it melted, it left the automobile roads in bad condition, and it is feared they will not be "good going" for some time to come.

San Bernardino, Cal., on the much used Santa Fé trail to Los Angeles, reports that as a result of the terrific heat on the Mohave and Colorado deserts, the district attorney has issued instructions to officers at desert points to halt all automobile parties containing women and children, and, if necessary to enforce the order, to arrest the driver. No women and children are to be permitted to cross the desert between Barstow and Needles, Cal., by automobile until the weather changes. In some of the sinks of the desert the heat is so oppressive that children could not survive should mechanical trouble develop with automobiles.

Touring Club to Work for Better Roads to Chicago

Malcolm MacKinnon of Rockford, Ill., widely known as the originator of many marked highways in the middle west, was made manager of the newly organized Touring Club of America last week. He outlines herewith one of the first good roads campaigns to be undertaken by the organization.

By Malcolm MacKinnon.

The approaches to Chicago for motor travel are so few that they furnish already a serious problem to be solved through coöperation of city, county, state, and nation. In spite of the length of the city's boundaries, one can count almost on the fingers of one hand the roads upon which the travel of thousands of more distant highways converges Chicago bound, and by which motor traffic—pleasure cars and trucks—is distributed to all parts of the United States.

These main leads, in and out of the city, have been in wretched condition and they have been worst, as every tourist knows, within twenty-five miles of the limits, because the congestion of traffic has been greatest within that distance.

Recently the construction of permanent roads in Cook county has ameliorated this condition to a considerable extent. The work of the county highway department in this direction has been intelligent and thoroughgoing.

With the help of the state and with aid from the federal appropriation to Illinois for building post roads, more and wider highways may be constructed in the near future to take adequate care of the growing volume of travel. None of the approaches to Chicago should be less than thirty-five feet wide, and they ought really to be fifty feet. In the future they will doubtless be 100 feet wide and will have separate roadways for travel in either direction.

About $700,000 of federal money is available at this moment for road building in Illinois, together with an equal amount of state money voted by the present legislature to meet the federal appropriation. None of this, S. E. Bradt, state superintendent of highways under the new state government system, reports, has been assigned to any part of the state, and Cook and adjoining counties ought to get their share. By next year the federal funds available for Illinois will total $1,326,000, and the state contribution to meet it a like amount, giving a grand total of $2,652,000 in this extraordinary fund, which is over and above the usual state aid.

Playing Safe on Rules of the Highways as They Are Written

By carefully following the rules set forth below the motorist who ventures on a public highway this year may be able to avoid arrest for some real or imaginary infraction of the laws regulating motor vehicle traffic. And then again he may not. The regulations given here were compiled by a Columbus (O.) motorist and published in the bulletin of the Columbus Automobile club. It is possible that motor vehicle regulations which apply to Columbus may not be in force in other municipalities. Still, if one desires to play safe he can follow these rules in every locality, provided he first goes to his family alienist and obtains a certificate of sanity. If motorists in other cities have any strictly local regulations which they desire to add to this list they would confer a favor on their fellow men by keeping them secret.

In case a horse will not pass an automobile the automobilist will take the machine apart as rapidly as possible and conceal the parts in the grass.

Upon discovering an approaching team the automobilist must stop offside and cover his machine with a blanket painted to correspond with the scenery.

The speed limit on country roads this year will be a secret, and the penalty for violation will be $10 for every mile an offender is caught exceeding it.

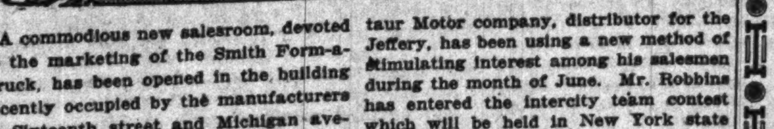
In case an automobile makes a team run away the penalty will be $50 for the first mile, $100 for the second and $200 for the third, etc., that the team runs, in addition to the damage done.

On approaching a corner where the automobilist cannot command a view of the road he must stop not less than 100 yards from the turn, toot his horn, rattle bones, fire a revolver, halloo and send up three bombs at intervals of five minutes.

Automobiles running on country roads at night must send up a rocket every mile and wait ten minutes for the road to clear. They may then proceed, carefully blowing their horns and shooting Roman candles.

In case an automobile approaches a house when the roads are dusty, it will slow down to one mile an hour and the chauffeur will sprinkle the dust in front of the house with a hand sprinkler before proceeding.

Gossip of the Auto Trade



A commodious new salesroom, devoted to the marketing of the Smith Form-a-Truck, has been opened in the building recently occupied by the manufacturers at Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. A wide variety of truck attachment body types is on display. D. W. Figgis has been made president of the Smith Motor Truck corporation, succeeding E. I. Rosenfeld, who becomes chairman of the board.

"The matter rightfully uppermost in the minds of all American business men is the immediate future. It is hard to predict it. We have never had any circumstances parallel to those we are facing today. How far the hysteria of not spending will affect the situation remains to be seen. I feel that after this temporary condition of unsettled affairs has passed we shall get down to a normal and sensible basis, as England and Canada have done." The words are those of Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car company, addressing 300 Packard dealers and salesmen at their recent annual convention.

Liberty dealers throughout the United States have just finished celebrating "anniversary week" with festivities of one kind and another. July 4, as it happens, is the birthday of the Liberty car as well as of the land we live in.

A. M. Robbins, president of the Centaur Motor company, distributor for the Jeffery, has been using a new method of stimulating interest among his salesmen during the month of June. Mr. Robbins has entered the intercity team contest which will be held in New York state July 17, 18, and 19. The conditions of this contest require that each contestant furnish an observer for the entire trip. Mr. Robbins will appoint a salesman from his own force as observer and the lucky man will be the one who has sold the largest number of cars during the month of June.

O. G. Heffinger, Chicago distributor for the Jordan, is brushing up on his use of "originality," "distinctiveness," and other gems from the w. k. dictionary. The explanation lies in an offer to Jordan customers throughout the United States of their choice of six unusual color combinations, the same to be available during the month of July only. The tints are officially designated as liberty blue, Pershing gray, Italian tan, Jordan maroon, Mercedes red, and Venetian green. My dear, you should ought to see them.

E. F. Kirchberger, president of the Commercial Truckmobile company, tells of a "White Cross Gospel Mobile" which is touring hither and yon as the focal point of a series of evangelistic meetings. "I am convinced now," says Mr. Kirchberger, "that there is nothing the Truckmobile can't be used for."

> —Stephen Decatur.

Our country is at war with Germany.

This fact does not seem to have been grasped by some individuals in public and private life who pretend to be loyal American citizens.

War permits of but two classes in this country, those who are for the United States and those who are for Germany. Those who are not for this country are against it.

There must be no more quibbling over this principle. The nation has gone into the world war without passion, but it does not follow that the duty of citizenship is relaxed in any degree. Men must choose now whether they are Americans or not Americans.

Loyal citizenship demands more than passive obedience, inaction, or lip service. It demands whole hearted effort to assist the government and the country in the prosecution of the war and the achievement of victory.

We cannot accept ancestry or tradition or personal opinions as justification for any failure to render this support to the utmost of the individual's ability. This may be a painful duty, but it is absolutely essential. During our civil war men fought their blood brothers, and thousands who were with the south on the issue of slavery fought loyally against her. Now that war again strikes across ties of kindred and conviction the republic demands once more the sacrifice and expects it to be freely made.

THE TRIBUNE has never doubted and does not now doubt that the great mass of citizens whose birth or ancestry is of central Europe are loyal to this country and will continue so in all circumstances. But there is evidence of the existence of a minority which has a very inadequate sense of its citizen responsibility. This minority seems to think that it can be American and German at the same time; that it can be made to appear compatible with loyal Americanism to attack the measures adopted by the American government to prosecute the war against Germany to which we are committed and which without any question the majority of the nation is ready and determined to support. If this attack were directed at the defects of these measures and were intended to clear the way for a more efficient prosecution of the war against the public foe it would be consistent with loyalty. But it is intended to prevent the United States from succeeding in war, and no amount of debate about the rights and wrongs of the conflict can obscure the fact that it is an act of aid to the enemy, an act of disloyalty to the United States. In Germany, Austria, or Hungary it would be branded traitorous and stamped out with an iron heel.

The United States has entered war by solemn act of the constituted authorities. It has pledged its honor and it has committed its interests and its safety to the arbitrament of war, exactly as Germany, France, England, and other belligerents have done. Men who try to weaken our action, who advance policies which would make our strength futile, are enemies of America's safety, honor, and interest.

This is fully understood by every true American, as it is fully understood in every other nation, even including distracted Russia. For nonresistant idealists who would compel peace at any cost there is more justification than for men who, because their hearts are more deeply committed to the place of their origin than to the place of their adoption, are, under one guise or another of specious argument, trying to retard vigorous action by the government and to stir up opposition or rebellion among the people.

The anti-American propaganda takes several forms. It preaches the fallacy that American security calls for a retention of all our army at home. It tries to stir up revolt against our military measures by preaching against sending American boys to die in Europe. It fought the draft and supported the volunteer system because the former was effectual and the latter futile. It does all possible to spread hatred and suspicion of our allies.

This propaganda is foredoomed to failure, for the American public is not easily gullible and is sound and loyal. The American people are not quitters, and they will not quit at the behest of influences whose un-American motives are clear. But the propaganda is deplorable, not because there is any danger that it will induce the great republic to an act of repudiation and retreat to which Russia, in the midst of the agony of rebirth, would not stoop. It is deplorable because it cannot fail to create internal division, mutual distrust, and deep resentment in our country. The reaction against the victims of this propaganda, against any individual or class which does not prove whole heartedly loyal in this trial, will be serious and of long duration. The fate of politicians or others who are dabbling with treason in these days will be well merited, but the upgrowth of divided sympathies and of distrust among citizens is an evil we hope our country may escape.

We trust this anti-American propaganda will be repudiated by those to whom it is directed and that wiser counsels and a more loyal spirit of leadership will appear. In any case it must be marked for what it is wherever it appears, a propaganda of disloyalty, which goes very near to treason.

CRIBBED?

By way of a clincher to his appeal for a Russian advance, War Minister Kerensky called out to the troops, "Attack, or I'll march upon the enemy's trenches alone." Great was the effect. They hugged him. They kissed him. With Kerensky at their head, they began a triumphant onslaught.

As some may argue that Kerensky had read of the passage—from a life of Victor Hugo—and let our readers judge.

Hugo, it seems, was entertaining some friends at dinner one night during the siege of Paris. "Ah, messieurs!" said he. "I have a plan to raise the siege. I, Victor Hugo, will put on my uniform, take my sword, and go out alone against the Germans. I shall be killed. But when the Germans see that they have killed Victor Hugo it will be the end of the siege."

"Yes, yes!" cried a guest, adding cheerfully, "for you!"

WOMAN'S WORK IN WAR TIME.

The editors of woman's journals are racking their brains to devise war time occupations for their readers. They know that every woman wants to do her part, and it is up to the editor to give her a cue.

The straits to which these journals have been reduced is illustrated by the work suggested in a recent issue of a popular woman's magazine. It consists in embroidering the symbol of the Red Cross on various things, such as wash rags and the like, and then presenting the articles to the Red Cross organization. It doesn't involve making anything useful; it merely consists in putting on a decoration.

From a perusal of the labor reports from Great Britain we conclude that it won't be very long before the editors of our woman's journals may cease to worry about patriotic occupations for women. And the women won't be sewing decorations, either, if we may judge by what they are doing in England.

It is generally known that women in both England and France are doing the work of man, but the figures on the extent of this replacement are remarkable. A recent bulletin of the bureau of labor, summarizing the experience of Great Britain, estimates there are 523,000 women directly replacing men in England, and 787,000 replacing men either directly or indirectly. These women are working in shell factories, in engineering and metal trades, and in many other industries.

It is, therefore, no longer a question in Great Britain as to how women can do their bit. They are doing it on a large scale, and they are doing it well. Their work is an important factor in the defense of the realm.

In anticipating the extension of woman's work in industry in this country we will do well to keep in mind the conclusions of British students of labor conditions. They agree that the efficiency of woman's work is in a large measure dependent on the maintenance of reasonably high standards for employés.

Adequate pay and limited hours are considered essential. Many large factories have found it advisable to furnish meals and opportunities for rest and recreation. If the standards must be lowered in one direction because of the exigencies of war, it is the practice to raise them in other directions. The British government, for example, does not approve night work for women, but if it is necessary to employ them on night shifts better accommodations are furnished and higher wages are paid.

We in this country can afford to improve even the British standards for woman workers. In the English shell factories the women work fifty-four hours a week for $4.87. This wage is, of course, inadequate according to our standard, but woman workers in the United States frequently have to work longer hours.

COHENOPOLIS

In New York's new city directory the Cohens have forty-nine and one-half columns and the Smiths only forty-six and one-half. Sic transit gloria. Rapid transit at that. Barely ten years ago one might have overheard, "Come on, Ikey! Let's go up in the Christian quarter," but today there is hardly a Christian sixteenth. New York has a million Jews. They own Manhattan. They control the real estate business, the clothing business, the theatrical business. They are fast winning places in the fire department and on "the force." Everywhere they succeed, and New York, which admires success, admires Jews—likes them, in fact. In no other Hebraized metropolis are Hebrews so amiably regarded. Ask one of them how it feels to be a Jew in New York. He will answer, "It doesn't."

That is to New York's credit. Still more, it is to his own credit. Jews have got on famously in New York by dint of honesty, earnestness, and a modest dignity that commands respect. When it comes to spunk and sticktoittiveness they outdo the Gentile. If this continues the Gentiles in New York will be only a name.

Happily, the Jews are doing much to perpetuate Gentile names. We suspect that perhaps three columns of Smiths were anciently Cohens, and when east side Jews weary of being Diamondsteins, Pinkussohns, Rosenblums, and Silvermans they adopt the names of the streets where they live. As these were christened for the old Dutch settlers of Manhattan, the results are indeed wonderful. Among Jews occupying high seats in the synagogue behold Messrs. Van Rensselaer and Schuyler!

Well, why not? It will bother the genealogists, of course. They will be hard put to it, by and by, to tell whether this or that nabob is descended from a Dutch oven or a pushcart. But who cares? If the most of us could meet our remote ancestors we should yell for the police.

Editorial of the Day

MRS. BRICKLEY TO SEE IT THROUGH.

[From the Philadelphia Ledger.]

Mrs. Brickley of Boston, one of whose sons is a Harvard football star, has five sons, four of whom are now working for Uncle Sam in the war, while the fifth is to "do his bit" as soon as he is a little older. This is a way of seeing it through that "Mr. Britling" came to believe in after he realised that England was actually at war, and it is the way we shall have to see it through over here to the tune of hundreds of thousands of Mrs. Brickleys.

That there are such Spartan mothers as Mrs. Brickley and the West Virginia patriot to whom the president wrote the other day proves that there is nothing the matter with the real American strain in this world crisis. Flemington, for instance, comes up strongly with Judge Herr, who has four sons in the service, and the people of the true type are responding nobly, the readiness to make sacrifices marking all sections, which have one thing in common: an abiding love of country and the realization that this love must be expressed in other ways than a mere lip service.

It is the "internationals," who would "carry on government" and "save society" by mere word of mouth, who are the real "men without a country"; but it is the Brickley type that makes nation-

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]

THEODORE ROOSEVELT is the only chief magistrate of the United States to have received a foreign order of knighthood. It is not the Order of the Garter of England nor the Golden Fleece of Spain and Austria, nor yet the Legion of Honor of France, but came to him from Africa, being the grand cross of the Order of Solomon, bestowed upon him by the late negus or Emperor Menelik of Abyssinia, who claimed lineal descent from King Solomon of Israel and the Biblical Queen of Sheba, who is on record as having become infatuated with him during her memorable visit to Jerusalem. Theodore Roosevelt has the diploma of the order. But its insignia are packed away in the strong room of the state department at Washington, along with numerous other tokens of admiration, of regard, and of gratitude to American citizens on the part of a score or more of foreign governments.

If the state department has become the custodian of all these gifts it is because of the clause in the constitution which forbids any official from accepting gifts from foreign rulers or governments without the sanction of congress. And congress has in the past shown itself exceedingly reluctant to sanction anything of the kind.

But now that American officers and soldiers are fighting under the American flag in France, shoulder to shoulder with the armies of the allies—that is to say, with French, British, Belgian, Russian, Portuguese, and Italian troops—against the kaiser and his dupes it will be placing Uncle Sam's men in khaki in an altogether invidious position if they continue to be debarred from any share in the rewards accorded to their foreign comrades for acts of heroism and of valor in the face of the enemy.

Whatever prejudice may have prevailed a hundred years ago against such orders and badges of honor has disappeared. American newspapers and the American people generally have hailed with satisfaction the news of the bestowal of the French cross of the Legion of Honor, of the military cross, and of the medaille militaire for deeds of daring performed at the front in France by American aviators, surgeons, stretcher bearers, and ambulance drivers while serving under the French or the English flags.

At length the mystery in connection with the will of the late Archduke Louis Salvator of Austria has been set at rest by the opening of the sealed envelope containing his testamentary dispositions, at the Austrian embassy at Madrid, in the presence of the ambassador, the principal members of his staff, the Spanish ministers of foreign affairs and of justice, and of the Spanish and Austrian counsel employed by the sovereign house of Hapsburg.

When this particularly gifted but very eccentric recluse archduke died in 1915 in Germany at the castle of Brandeis, on the Elbe, a search was made for his will, and finally a sealed envelope was found in his palace of Miramar, on the Spanish island of Majorca, the envelope bearing an inscription to the effect that it contained his will. Instead of its being opened by the local Spanish authorities, as required by law in the case of any ordinary Spanish citizen or foreign resident in Spain, it was, in obedience to telegraphic instructions from Madrid, transmitted thither unopened to the minister of justice, who evidently foresaw complications. For whereas the archduke was entitled as prince of a foreign sovereign house to ex-territorial prerogatives while visiting or sojourning temporarily in Spain it was doubtful whether these immunities retained their force where the prince's ownership of real estate in Spain was concerned.

The Spanish minister of justice was well advised. A demand was made upon him by the Austrian ambassador for the surrender of the will, on the ground that the archduke was entitled to ex-territorial immunities and that, therefore, the document did not concern the Spanish authorities or courts of law. This the Spanish government declined to admit, being sustained in their attitude by the people of Majorca, whom the archduke had always given to understand that he would bequeath to them his palace and park of Miramar for use as a public park and museum, along with a sufficient amount of money for their upkeep. They feared that if the will got into Austrian hands it would be destroyed and that they would be deprived of their bequest.

Finally, after two years of protracted diplomatic negotiation and legal discussion, a compromise was effected, largely through the influence of the queen mother, Christina, who is a Hapsburg archduchess, and the sealed envelope containing the will was solemnly opened the other day, as above described.

The contents proved a disappointment alike to the Spanish authorities, who had the interests of the good people of Majorca at heart, and to the Austrian officials representing the interests of the imperial house of Hapsburg. For the will was found to bequeath the palace and park of Miramar, with all the costly contents of the palace, and the entire fortune of the dead archduke, in Spain, in other foreign countries, in Austria-Hungary, and in Germany; his villa at Ramleh, in Egypt; his palace at Venice, and his fine steam yacht, the Nixie (Syren) to the sons of a man of the name of Antonio Vives, who had been his private secretary for some thirty years and whose wife had been a very attractive and fascinating woman.

The archduke had seen all these boys grow up from infancy. Antonio Vives, his wife, and her children constituted the archduke's exclusive entourage, and when, prior to the war, he was living in Egypt, under the strict incognito of a "Prof. Neufeld," they were regarded as part and parcel of his family. According to some, the sons of Mme. Vives were his own offspring, and the remarkable nature of his will would seem to bear out this belief. Others, again, insist that the sons of Mme. Vives were in no way related to him and that his interest in her was purely platonic, in support of which argument it may be mentioned that he was a profoundly religious man, devoted to botanical, natural history, and geographical researches and also that he entertained a romantic attachment for the murdered Empress Elizabeth, whom he revered as a saint and to whom all his books, including those crowned by

REASONS FOR HOSPITALS, ESPECIALLY IN WAR TIMES.

THERE is some tendency to lessen the support given hospitals in order to give larger support to military purposes. Unless this tendency is checked material harm will be done both to civil and military life.

A hospital is the best place in which to care for sick people. In the first place it gives the sick the best chance to get well. The death rates of most diseases are lower among the patients cared for in hospitals than among those cared for in homes.

The death rate in hospitals of babies under 2 years of age is higher than that in homes. Babies need mothering, for one thing. They need breast feeding for another. They need more individual attention than they can get in hospitals. The possibility of the spread of diarrhœas by flies and fingers is greater where there are a score of babies in one room than where each household has but one baby.

With the exception of baby's troubles the hospital has the lower death rates and is for that reason the better place for sick people.

In the second place hospitalizing is the most economic way of caring for the sick. Home care is wasteful. When we aggregate the cost of caring for a hundred thousand sick people and set it over against the cost of caring for the same number of people in hospitals we find that the waste is enormous. Homes are adjusted on the basis of well people; hospitals on the basis of sick ones. A case of sickness in the home throws everything out of adjustment and the waste is by no means limited to the increase in cost of food, heating, lights, nursing, and medical service.

There is some reason for thinking that the increased use of hospitals is causing disease to be less violent. Many of us can remember when the medical and especially the obstetrical wards of hospitals were constantly in dread of infection which threatened to flow over into them from the surgical wards. During the last quarter century the surgical wards have been kept so clean that they are in constant dread of infection flowing into them from the medical wards. The higher standards of cleanliness in hospitals is responsible in great part for the increased use of hospitals.

That contagion is less virulent than it was a generation ago is generally accepted. Dr. H. W. Hill claims that the decrease in virulence of these diseases is due to our generally much higher standards of cleanliness. If his argument be held valid as the medical wards come to be as cleanly as the surgical wards now are bacterial diseases will be milder. As the standard of cleanliness of the medical wards is now far higher than that of homes increased hospitalization will mean further decrease in the severity of contagion and other forms of bacterial disease.

The care of the sick in hospitals is growing. There is no necessity for furnishing either statistics or arguments to prove this point since it is a matter of common information. But since hospital care is relatively economical and war time is one for preventing waste there should be a development of hospitals just now. The great bulk of the disabling illness is still cared for in homes.

In the metropolitan study of disease in Rochester, N. Y., it was found that but 10.7 per cent of those unable to work on account of illness were being cared for in hospitals. The percentage in Trenton, N. J., was 14.4. These figures show, if any proof were needed, not only that not all sickness is cared for in hospitals, but that there is great waste due to the small part of the sickness that is hospitalized.

In various physical audits of large groups of people it has been found that at least 90 per cent are in need of some kind of medical or health service. More than half of these people are unaware of their needs. For example, in a survey of the physical condition of the employés of the New York City health department it was found that 30 per cent had Bright's disease and 13.2 per cent had heart disease. Out of the groups of people who think themselves well and who are at work, there are a certain proportion who would work better if they had the hospital care which their condition cares for. That they are not cared for is wasteful, and wartime is no time for waste. But the larger field for increase of use lies in those who are not working because of illness.

The Rochester survey indicates that about 2½ per cent of the entire population is always laid off on account of illness. The need for munitions is never so great but that two men from each 100 are not at work because they are ill. Even when the cotton is whitest in the field and when the grain is ripest and rain impends, two out of every 100 at least are laid up on account of illness. Of these who have illness that is serious enough to prevent work, about 60 per cent is cared for by physicians. The other 40 per cent is among people who cannot afford or do not afford medical care. In Rochester the percentage of sickness cared for by physicians was 61. That the percentage was about the same in the rural districts of North Carolina is shown by a similar survey made there. In North Carolina only 90 per cent of the pneumonia and only 50 per cent of the rheumatism had medical attention. In Rochester only 27.3 per cent of the women who stopped work on account of neuralgia had medical attention.

◆

It is wasteful not to have proper medical care for all of those who need it. The most economic care of sick people is orthodox medical care—in spite of all its wastefulness and lack of organization. In spite of our tendency to run after medical fads and fancies, no great army, no government, no great employer considers for a moment any other policy than caring for the sick and disabled with orthodox medical service. A medical service which embodied the principles of organization would be less waste- that, such figures as the reports from Rochester, Trenton, and North Carolina give us show that we are very wasteful in that so much of our sickness is uncared for, just as other figures from the same source show that we waste by caring for our sick in their homes.

As bearing on this point I quote as follows from the Rochester report:

"Our unemployment survey, made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company in conjunction with the bureau of labor statistics of the federal government during 1915 and covering over a million wage earners in selected cities in the United States, developed the interesting fact that 11 per cent of the unemployment was caused by sickness or accident disability. Over 1 per cent of all the wage earners canvassed were unemployed on account of illness. The figure varied somewhat from city to city. The maximum was in Duluth, where 24 per cent of all wage earners were unemployed because of illness; the minimum was in Milwaukee, where .08 per cent were so unemployed.

"Computing the loss of wages due to illness among the 92,552 male workers over 15 years of age, we find 644,000 days of disability, which at $2 a day means an economic loss yearly in Rochester of $1,288,000. This does not include loss of wages by females nor loss by males from any source except wages."

What hospital equipment does a community need? We can get some idea from the present equipment of communities. Figures for America are difficult to get. I learn from Burdett that in Great Britain in 1914 there were 842 hospitals, with 54,311 beds, of which 77 per cent were constantly occupied in 1914. In that year 822,276 patients passed through these hospitals. There was an average of 14.7 patients per bed, and the average stay of each patient in a hospital was twenty-five days. The hospital equipment per 100,000 inhabitants of different parts of the kingdom was: Scotland, 136; Ireland, 119; England and Wales, 118; London, 279; and elsewhere in England, 95. For the United Kingdom, 120. The number of hospital patients per 100,000 population during the year in the different sections was: London, 3,317; England and Wales, 1,088; Scotland, 1,640; and Ireland, 1,135. The number of patients cared for during the year in the average bed in the different parts of the kingdom was: London, 11.7; England and Wales, 11.4; Scotland, 12; Ireland, 9.7.

Another way to figure the need is to estimate that in a population of 100,000, 2,500 on the average are away from work each day. If 10 per cent are cared for in hospitals, that would mean that under present conditions 250 beds would be required to serve a population of 100,000. But it would be unsafe to limit the hospital equipment of any community to this figure.

In the first place, the character of the community must be taken into consideration. A manufacturing community requires more hospital beds than a rural community; a congested community more than one that is spread over more territory; an apartment and hotel living community more than one in which the custom of living in separate houses prevails. Speaking generally, the cities must provide hospital equipment for the people of the surrounding country as well as for themselves. A great city like Boston, New York, or Chicago must have some beds for people from Alaska, Arizona, and Nevada as well as for their own people.

The Modern Hospital, in an article on the, "Planning of the Small Community Hospital," says:

"But over and above all else the community spirit of the people is to be taken into account. If there is a disposition on the part of citizens to look elsewhere for whatever they need, if they have no community pride, and if their residence is an enforced one, so to speak, for financial or business reasons, with their minds ever turning to the day in the future when they may move away, that must be taken into account, because in such a community the people will patronize their home hospital only when they are obliged to. A town of a thousand people made up of citizens who have civic pride is worth more as a hospital asset than a town of ten times the number made up of people who have no ties in common and no community interest."

And finally the future growth is to be taken into account, the growth of the community and the growth of the tendency to use hospitals. St. Anthony's hospital at Rock Island, Ill., gives all the hospital care given in that city. In the last six years Rock Island has had a normal growth, the hospital has not been increased in size nor materially in equipment, yet the number of patients in 1912 was 656; in 1916, 1,203. An equipment of 500 beds for each 100,000 inhabitants would be moderate enough. An industrial center, a medical center, or a forward looking community should have more.

The reports which come from England and France are that they are suffering very much from lack of hospital facilities. In the first rush of the war they threw every ounce into support of the military. They were compelled to create in a few months an army able to hold the greatest military machine in history—a machine that has been building for fifty years. Within a year the authorities had gone to Liverpool and taken over half of their hospitals for the use of invalided soldiers. The people of Liverpool had been turned out of these beds that the soldiers might have them. About six-sevenths of the equipment of trained men in the Liverpool department were commandeered for the first line of defense.

What happened in Liverpool happened all over England, Scotland, and France. England now sees very clearly that not even the great emergency warranted them in building up the first line of defense at the expense of the supporting lines to the degree that it was done. They see that the best way of building up the first line permanently is simultaneously to develop the supporting lines coördinately.

England is in war. Waste in war is doubly harmful. Uncared for illness is wasteful, and yet in spite of all this she had to turn her sick munition workers, farmers, and other civilians out of hospitals. The beds were needed by [illegible]

PAVING AN ALLEY.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly advise me whether or not it is a settled thing that the alley between Halsted and Green streets, running from Marquette road to Sixty-eighth street, is to be paved? A petition was carried around by one or two parties who wished it paved, but they could get but few signatures. Now I understand that this alley will positively be paved, without consent of majority of property owners. Can this be done? ARTHUR A. ALBRO.

No proceedings have been started by the board for the paving of the alley between Halsted street, Green street, Marquette road, and Sixty-eighth street. If property owners desire the alley paved by the city they should present a petition stating the kind of improvement desired and in due course the board will investigate the matter and if considered necessary commence proceedings to pave it as soon as possible. I have no knowledge as to whether the alley will be paved without the consent of the property owners.

RUBBISH ORDERED REMOVED.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I would like to know if anything can be done to stop people from throwing tin cans, boxes, papers, and such things in a vacant lot between 5482 Woodlawn avenue and Fifty-fifth street.

It not only looks bad but is very insanitary. M. P. C.

Notice has been served by the ward superintendent on the contractor responsible to remove the pile of old tin placed on vacant lot from repairs on building at 1210 East Fifty-fifth street.
F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of Streets.

PAVING DICKENS AVENUE.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Friend of the People]—Is Dickens avenue west of Cicero to be paved this year? K. G.

At the public hearing on March 23 the paving of Dickens avenue between Cicero avenue and Laramie avenue was ordered stayed indefinitely at the request of the Cragin Improvement club. M. J. FAHERTY, President Board of Local Improvements.

BUILDING PROTECTION.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a piece of ground upon which there is a residence and a barn in the rear. All ground in this locality is several feet above the grade of the street. The adjoining property in the rear comes up to my ground, there being no alley. The owner of this ground has excavated his property to my lot line and my barn is about to fall in.

Can he be made to protect my buildings? PROPERTY OWNER.

He is under legal obligation to furnish sufficient support for your land in its natural state, but need not furnish the additional support made necessary by your buildings.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People]—Can an heir to an estate receive money bequest mentioned in will of deceased before balance of estate, real estate, railroad bonds, etc., are disposed of?

CANNOT FORCE SALE.

Homer, Ill., July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to know if an Ohio state bank can in any way deprive one of its stockholders of their stock by reorganization or any other means. I have held my stock for some years in this growing bank and because I am not an active depositor they wish me to relinquish my stock. C.

There are proceedings, such as bankruptcy, which would render the old stock of no value. They might so manipulate matters that no dividends would be paid on your stock. In general, however, they cannot force you to sell or exchange.

PROTECTION FOR NEGROES IN NORTH.

Chicago, July 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Will the north ever do anything to protect the Negroes who live here? Will the men of family, position, and influence remain idle while insensate mobs, with vengefulness built upon ignorance and prejudice, take the lives of such poor creatures—country darkies for the most part, who are lured to the north on promise of good pay and humane treatment?

Born and raised in the south, I have been dumfounded, since living in the north, to find a strong prejudice here against the Negro as an individual. There is much word kindness for the Negro as a race, but I have found the Negro singularly lacking in personal friendship among the people of the north. Is that a general truth? Is my observation correct? There are new race troubles in East St. Louis.

Are there no men there of intelligence and well born enough to see that it is their duty to protect the more unfortunate and ignorant race? During the "Charles riots" in New Orleans some years ago, who was it armed themselves and individually and by companies and battalions defended the innocent Negroes of that city against mob violence? The very flower of New Orleans—the men of wealth, position, social standing, and public influence. They were hooted at and cursed by the mob rabble; they were stoned and vilified by women and men of the class with whom the Negro comes into competition as an industrial factor.

Yet these men held back the mobs, dominated them, and protected the innocent and terrorized Negroes from their would be persecutors. Do you think I would have let any one harm a hair of the head of my good old family servant—fat, good tempered, and imperious old Aunt Mary? Not by a damned sight. And every man of respectability felt as I did and acted as I did. For the few criminal Negroes who commit the unnamable crime there is but one ending. But the vast majority of respectable, law abiding, and industrious Negroes of the south are as sure of protection from mob violence as they appear not to be in East St. Louis.

If the north must take Negroes from the South, if the north must offer them better wages, then the north must give them better social protection and see to it that the reputation for race prejudice is not picked up bodily and transferred across Mason and Dixon's line.

REFORMERS AGAIN.

Chicago, July 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE and some of its correspondents seem disgusted at our count of "our own simon pure American passion for regulating other people's habits" and sneer at the "puritan autocracy." ALLAN UPDEGRAFF has done in "Second Youth" (Harper's) something new under the sun of American fiction. He has written about something that no American writer has taken the trouble to chronicle, and he has done it with a delicacy and a sophistication which is too, too rare. Without one hint of the mechanics of sex, he has written the epic of the sex awakening of the man of 35 who has spent his life being in love with a vague romance and suddenly finds that he, too, may love in reality. Nobody yet has seen the possibility for a romantic tale in the silk salesman of a department store. The tale of the poor working girl back of the glove counter and her temptations has been done countless times, but no one has written the life story of the unsophisticated salesman, past his first youth, who is importuned by a "lady" customer.

Sex in real life, not the life of the Dresier-Glyn school of literature, is usually something unconscious, something ephemeral, delicate, a matter of casual meetings which are not at all memorable in themselves but which form the basis for long moments of figuring out just what he really did mean by saying he'd never seen a "girl just like you," before meetings which indirectly made you hurry to buy a pongee shirt because she said she liked 'em, or which unconsciously are the reason for your being vaguely miserable when you're alone on a moonlight night.

Sex is sometimes a white heat scourge, but a thousand times more often it is something that bubbles, like boiling mush, never doing more than sputtering now and then and being per se very homely and usually very, very funny. The bubbling mush of a 35 year old salesman's heart is the experience which Allan Updegraff immortalizes.

Nothing could be funnier than "Second Youth." It is a joy. But it is something more than exquisitely humorous. It is a new picture of a phase of life which everyone has either gone through himself or watched some one else go through, and it is as eternally true as, O, "Seventeen," for example, and in almost the same way. It is consistently and charmingly "in character" in its style. There is a journal in it that for sheer naïveté is unrivaled. It makes the literary operating rooms of Marie Bashkirtsheff and Mary MacLane seem the crudest makeshifts of the days when surgery was done with a bowie knife. And, finally, it is an authentic picture of modern life, modern women, with all of its eternal verity. High praise? Mebby. But don't tilt with me until you've read "Second Youth."

Going camping this summer? Then why not guard against the mishaps which always overtake a camping party by knowing before you start just what you'll need? The public library has a list of books on camping which will tell you many things that you didn't know before. Just as the day of inefficient housewifery has past, so the day of inefficient vacationing has past. A cake isn't a success by instinct and the grace of God these days. No miracle is going to happen to save you from chigger bites. But you can take something along to soothe 'em after they've bitten. A new book of camping which is as complete as any I ever saw is a small pocket volume called "The Book of Camping" (Knopf), by A. Hyatt Verrill, a camper himself of many moons and many places.

The years of Joseph Conrad's violet-by-a-mossybank existence are past forever. In a few months two volumes of intimacy have come from his publishers, "The Shadow Line" (Doubleday-Page) and "A Personal Record." "The Shadow Line" is the record of approaching age, and, although it doesn't purport to be autobiographical in any sense, it is so keenly a revelation that it could not be mere surmise. "A Personal Record" is frank self-revelation in the impressionistic style. It was published first in 1912, but made little impression, for at that time Conrad had not yet become the wonder of the literary age. It is especially fitting that the first bust of Conrad should be the work of an American, J. Davidson, for it was America that discovered Conrad.

Members of Maurice Hewlett's family are doing their bit for their country. The only son of the family, Flight Commander Francis Hewlett, is one of the most useful men in the naval air service. He had the narrowest escape from capture by the Germans in the history of the war. For over a week England mourned him as dead. But he wasn't. His adventures since then are as thrilling as any of his father's novels. Mrs. Hewlett, who was one of the first women in England to take up flying and who won her pilot's certificate, carries on an aeroplane factory in which are made government machines. Miss Pia Hewlett, Maurice Hewlett's daughter, a capable translator, is now working at the war office. She, too, is skilled in the art of making aeroplanes. She was forewoman for some time in her mother's factory.

In one week John Buchan, author of "Greenmantle" (Doran) and "The Battle of the Somme," the new chief of the British foreign office publicity department, lost both his brother and his business partner in the flame of battle. His brother, Lieut. Alastair Bucha.. of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, only 22 years old, went straight from college to join the army in the first week of the war. Capt. Nelson, John Buchan's partner in the publishing firm of Thomas Nelson & Co., was the most brilliant Rugby footballer of his time. John Buchan was for a time on the staff of the British army in France and it was in one of his official press dispatches that he quoted Kipling's line, "The captains and the kings depart," which the field censor prophylactized by deleting "and the kings" and thus gained immortality.

Grant Richards, one of London's largest publishers, has in preparation for publication a series of studies in literature by S. P. B. Maise, which will have the comprehensive title, "From Shakespeare to O. Henry." 'Strue. I saw it in a London book note.

"Masterpieces of Modern Spanish Drama" (Duffield), "How to Produce Amateur Plays" (Little Brown), and "European Theories of the Drama" (Stewart & Kidd), are Barrett Clark's contributions to literature for the last few months. I don't see how he does it, unless he has pedals on his typewriter and thinks with the two lobes of his brain simultaneously and separately. He was director of the Chicago Dramatic club at the University of Chicago in his undergraduate days, and there are many paragraphs [illegible] result of the practical work he did then. He was with Mrs. Fiske later and is now head of the department of dramatic study at Chautauqua and has been many important things in the Drama League of America. And he's young enough to carry a registration card.

Eric Fisher Wood, author of "The Note Book of an Attaché" and "The Handwriting on the Wall" (Century), was among the wounded recently on the French front. It wasn't until he and his fellow soldiers had gone through four lines of German trenches, though, that he fell.

From a London correspondent comes this bit of news about Hall Caine: "Hall Caine, whose dramatic version of his novel 'The Woman Thou Gavest Me' will have been produced for the first time anywhere in Boston, Mass., by the time you read these lines, has been in more or less indifferent health for some time. He has been working in London of late and is living, he told me yesterday, 'on top of Hempstead hill,' one of the highest parts of the metropolitan district, which he finds decidedly frigid and not conducive to recovering from bronchial troubles, to which he is something of a martyr. The verdict of Boston of his play, which his son Derwent is producing in conjunction with Lee Shubert, means much to Hall Caine, who is more interested in the theme which he treated in 'The Woman Thou Gavest Me' than in that of any other of his novels, so he told me. Meanwhile he is at work on another novel which has religion for its motif, and has completed, he said, about fifteen chapters. He looks more like Shakespeare every day!"

"The Shield" (Knopf) is a book of unusual interest, for it is the speaking out of a group of Russia's most intellectual men about the Russian Jewish question. The Society for the Study of Jewish Life is an organization which admits only pure blooded Russians. "The Shield" is a publication of that society and it is edited by three of Russia's most distinguished writers—Maxim Gorky, Leonid Andreyev, and Feoder Sologub. William English Walling has written an introduction to the English edition, which consists of translations of the best of the many contributions which appeared in the original Russian edition.

With the outbreaking of the Sinn Feiners in Cork lately, Margaret Skinnider's "Doing My Bit for Ireland" (Century) becomes a peculiarly timely book. It is her record of the futile poets' revolution of Easter week, 1916, in which she took part to the extent of being wounded three times. She was a teacher of mathematics in Scotland, but went to Dublin to join the revolution. For her services she was presented with the Irish cross. She is now in Boston, teaching mathematics.

"Women and War" (Stokes) is a selection from Olive Schreiner's "Women and Labor"—itself an indictment of war, since the manuscript and notes which she had been working on since her early youth were ruthlessly destroyed during the Boer war. The tale of that destruction is a chronicle of one of the keenest tragedies of a human life. That tale is merely outlined in a short introduction to this reprint.

Hanns Heinz Ewers, who has himself been called the German Poe, has written a small volume on "Poe" (Huebsch), which is a unique addition to the literature about that most weird of all our American writers of imaginative literature. The book isn't still sizzling from the fire of the presses, but you probably haven't seen it yet—it was a spring book.

In the July number of "Poetry" there is a group of poems by children which are amazingly good free verse besides being charmingly childlike. The one which I like best is

IN THE GARDEN.

I have come into the garden.
It is springtime and there are flowers everywhere—
Even on the tails of the peacocks.

Malcolm Edward Erskine, 7 years old, wrote it one day as a get-well-quickly-grandma tonic for Mrs. Peattie, who had assured him that there wasn't anything he could do for her headache. "Couldn't I write you a little poem?" he urged, and when he came back he had concocted this elixir. Isn't the last line enough to make any grandma get well immediately? He comes by his poetic gift naturally. His mother, Barbara Peattie Erskine, wrote some of the most delicately beautiful and spiritual bits of verse that I have ever read.

JULY

Wild Grapes

JULY comes with the fragrance of the wild grape. The blossoms of the grape, odorous with the most delicate sweetness which can fill the air in the freshness of the morning or in the cool of the evening, are tokens of its Bacchic influence.

Whatever wrong the full body of the grape may do to man when its essence has fermented in the lap of time, there is no iniquity in the perfume of its blossoms, and this fragrance is an intoxicant, making the warm, moist night inebriate for the minor perceptions which are in truth the esthetic, if not ecstatic, whole of life.

It is the triumph of the wild grape that in its blossoming it performs a service of beauty by the delicacy of its appeal to a sense which generally is most useful when it is most offended. The blossoms of the wild grape, which offer nothing for the eye, raise that coarse instrument of perception, the sense of smell, to an esthetic value and give to all outdoors the delicacy of a beauty which cannot be seen but which is palpably existent.

The ways begin to color with the waving fox grass and to yellow with snap dragons. The wild rose is yet in blossom and bud, but the helianthus has raised its tall and graceful body ready to unfold its golden cap. The wood thrush sings the sadness and the whippoorwill the complaint of life which again has seen the sun turn on its way towards the snow.

HOLLWEG'S COUP

BERLIN, June 6.—[Correspondence.]—The official organ of the German Socialist party, Vorwaerts, has created a sensation by publishing the following letters exchanged in May, 1915, between Gen. von Gebsattel, president of the Pan-German league, and Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. Gen. von Gebsattel, in forwarding to the chancellor a list of demands formulated by the Pan-German league, wrote in behalf of the executive committee:

"The sentiment prevailing today in the widest sections of the nation is embittered. It borders on despair. There are too many indications that the imperial government pursues a too narrow political war aim, and that the most loyal and politically most dependable circles must infer therefrom a renunciation by the government of the full exploitation of our assured victory.

"My conscience impels me to warn the government against such renunciation. It would be the most disastrous political mistake that could be committed and its immediate consequence would be revolution. The word must be spoken.

"We must place ourselves in the souls of the returning warriors, each of whom certainly hopes for some form of reward. Instead of this reward are they to find a greatly increased burden of taxes when they come home from the front? Terrible disappointment and bitterness will be the results. There will be no halt to these feelings, and the disappointed people will rise. The monarchy will be menaced, yea, will be overthrown. That will seal the fate of our nation."

* *

A WEEK later the chancellor sent the following reply: "The merits of the demands submitted to me by the Pan-German league with regard to the war aims may be considered after a complete victory has been gained over all our enemies. For the moment the interests of foreign policy and the defense of our country, which supersede all other considerations, forbid a discussion of the material purport of the demands.

"Your excellency dares in the personal letter accompanying the Pan-German league's demands to assert that the sentiment among wide sections of our people is bitter and borders on despair because, as you say, the imperial government's war aims are too narrow and would forego full exploitation of the, for us, certain victory.

"Moreover, you do not shrink from asserting that the nation, disappointed after such heroic achievements, will rise and overthrow the monarchy unless, as the only effective means to avert such a revolution, a peace is brought about which will fulfill the necessities of the people in every direction—i. e., as the Pan-German league understands these necessities.

"To these statements I have this to reply: I recognize the services rendered by the Pan-German league before the war in elevating the nation's consciousness of power and in combating the ideology of international fraternization. Unhappily, however, the league has combined with this national will so much lack of political prudence that even in the days before the war the empire's political affairs were often made difficult and that every government which did not want its windows smashed has been forced into opposition to the league.

"The war and its lessons, it is true, have made the national will to power, upon whose furtherance rests the right of existence of the Pan-German league, the common property of the German people. However, as I deduce from your excellency's letter, the lack of political prudence prevailing in the circles of the Pan-German league has not only not disappeared but has become truly grotesque.

"The loyal monarchical circles which your excellency pretends to represent would grossly violate their duty to the crown if, instead of waiting until the government considers the moment for open discussion appropriate, it were to stir up unrest among the people over a nonexistent weak and narrow-minded policy of which there is not the slightest proof. According to your excellency's assertions, this unrest has assumed the proportions of bitterness, and even despair, and has cropped out in threatening allusions to a revolution.

"There are only two possibilities: Either that is true, and, if so, the blame hits those who, owing to lack of political judgment and national discipline and despite all the unmistakable declarations by the government, have fanned this sentiment instead of combating it, or your assertion is false, and in that case I must see in it a threat and an attempt by the minority to make those who have been called by the crown to direct the empire's affairs submissive to its will.

"There are no objections to a publication of this correspondence through the Pan-German league. On my part I reserve publication until such a time as I may deem appropriate.

VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG."

QUO VADIS?

By Gabriel Hanotaux

Following is a translation of an article by M. Hanotaux, which appeared in a recent issue of Le Figaro, Paris. M. Hanotaux is a member of the Academie Francaise.

THE new development resulting from the position taken by the Russian extremists is not to be understood without considering its relation to the general diplomatic situation. It seems to me that we may well refuse to be hypnotized by an "end the war" agitation on the part of deserters whose sole object is precisely that of turning their backs on war. Their cry of "no annexations and no indemnities" means this and this only. It is a demand for peace at any price.

How strong are the Russian parties which, openly or secretly, are so minded? On the other hand, how strong is the provisional government that seeks to restrain these undisciplined souls and restore them to a sense of duty? No Frenchman—indeed, no man anywhere who is alive to the issues of the day—can remain indifferent toward these questions. If we wait for light to break in upon the "mystic soul" of a Lenine, we shall wait a long time. It will be wiser to take the bull by the horns, admit that an appreciable part of the Russian people and the Russian army are discouraged, and consider what counter checks may be found elsewhere in the length and breadth of a world-wide situation.

Ought this behavior of the advanced parties in Russia to lead us to Stockholm and make us submit our future and our honor to the "tribunal of neutrals" got up by Schiedemann? At all events, we are not there. Public conscience in France has restrained our French Socialists. Kept at home by their inability to obtain passports, they have leisure to reflect upon the consequences of such dangerous connections.

Meanwhile things are happening the world over. Although the congress of workmen and soldiers believes itself qualified to settle the affairs of the universe, the universe declines the favor and settles its affairs to suit itself.

* *

THE pendulum of the war swings afresh, this time set going by the weight newly added by America's intervention. The American people have acted. Motives at once moral and sentimental impel them. They will have no patience any longer with half way measures towards the assassins of the Lusitania. They have thrown themselves into the arena and are fired with warlike enthusiasm. A great democratic power, America charges full force against German military despotism. With irresistible logic President Wilson has spoken the fateful words that bind him and his people: "We shall never treat with the Hohenzollern dynasty."

This means war to the bitter end. The Americans so understand it. Once in, nothing has dismayed them. They have adopted compulsory recruiting, pledged all their national power and resources, and determined to collaborate with the allied armies in Europe to the full extent of their strength and as speedily as possible.

Meanwhile the antics of the Russian revolutionists have had merely the effect of proving to democratic America that there is not a moment to be lost if the world is to escape ruin at the hands of Prussian military tyranny. Our friends the Americans have ripped open their purses and poured out their treasure with a free hand. They feel the urgency of the crisis and will move quickly. Very soon we shall know the weight of Washington's sword.

Already much has been achieved elsewhere; the republics of South America have reckoned with the reasons that impelled the United States, and the majority of them support its policy. The great republic of Brazil is reaching a decision; M. Azeredo, vice president of the senate, confirms what Ruy Barbosa said to M. Ribot: "By a unanimous vote the senate has just passed a bill revoking neutrality."

Brazil's action has had a tremendous effect throughout the whole length and breadth of South America. The unanimity of feeling was clearly evident at Versailles, where a leading South American spoke with entire candor regarding his government's intentions, though he had been almost morbidly close mouthed until then. A little more and the transatlantic continent will be closed to German expansion. Both coasts are united for the war and for any future war. It is one of the biggest things that history has ever witnessed. The economic and financial forces of the new continent accordingly drop into one balance of the scales, and this, too, is important.

* *

BUT not by any means the whole of what has happened. Until recently the countries of the far east seemed to hold aloof, taking no part in the conflict. Only Japan had done anything definite, and Japan had done little. Two years ago I warned Frenchmen not to be overhasty in expecting Japanese intervention. Acting upon information given me by my Japanese friends—men of rare insight—I said, "Have confidence, but don't be in too much of a hurry; Japan will bide her time."

Still, I do not doubt for one moment that that time will come if a separate peace concluded by the Russian extremists imperils the general situation. The Matin quotes Dr. Iyenaga, head of the Japanese propaganda in the United States, as saying: "If Russia concluded a separate peace, and if she thus exposes herself to the danger of German domination, then not only Japan but also China will be in danger and aware of it, in which case Japan will fight, bringing into play her entire strength and her utmost resources."

These declarations express a sentiment well nigh universal in Japan, as Americans know perfectly and as, so I believe, the Russians know. At any rate, when M. Ribot says he is in communication and in general accord with the Russian provisional government (the only Russian government recognized by the allies) he is in a position to give Prince Lvof and M. Kerensky the soundest of advice.

Between the world that is growing stronger and the Germany that is growing feebler, Russia cannot hesitate. She knows her duty, her interests, her honor. She will not permit herself to be seduced by a clique of agitators who owe their momentary power solely to the weakness of others.

In No-Man's Land With Night Patrol.

BY CAPT. J. H. KNIGHT-ADKIN.
Royal Gloucestershire Regiment.

[From the London Spectator.]

Five men over the parapet, with a one-star loot in charge,
Stumbling along through the litter and muck and cursing blind and large,— Hooking their gear in the clutching wire as they wriggle through the gap,
For an hour's patrol in No-Man's Land, and take what chance may hap.

From Misery Farm to Seven Trees it's safe enough to go,
But it's belly crawl down Dead Man's Ditch, half choked with grimy snow.
Then back again beside the grass grown road—Watch out! They've got it set!
To where B company's listening post lies shivering in the wet.

And I have failed at many a task, but this one thing I've learned:
It's the little things make paradise—like three hours' doss well earned,
A fire of coke in a battered pail, and a gulp of ration rum,
Or a gobbled meal of bully and mud, with the guns for a moment dumb.

And horror's not from terrible things—men torn to rags by a shell,
And the whole trench swimming in blood and slush, like a butcher's shop in hell;
It's silence and night and the smell of the dead that shake a man to the soul,
From Misery Farm to Dead Man's Ditch on a "nil report" patrol.

Five men back to the trench again, with a one-star loot in charge,
Stumbling over the rusty tins and cursing blind and large,
Enter the trench log up to date by a guttering candle's flare!
"No report" (save that hell is dark, and we have just been there).

Wisconsin Dells Incomparable for Long Motor Tour

By John De Long.

FOR the Chicagoan who on his motor tours likes to see something really worth while in the way of scenic attractions, the summer's schedule should not be considered complete without a trip to the Dells of the Wisconsin. It is none too long, provided you are willing to spend four or five days on the round trip, and you will be well repaid by viewing a unique district where nature has blended natural grandeur with a deformity that is weird and awe inspiring.

The trip to Kilbourn, near which the Dells are located, measures a little over 221 miles. Some make it in a single day, but the best way is to break the tour with an overnight stop at Madison, 160.6 miles from Chicago. This leaves 60.7 miles to be driven on the second day, which means that the tourist may still have left the better part of the day to begin his series of sightseeing boat trips through the waterworn gorges of the majestic Wisconsin river.

It would be difficult to map out any trip of the same distance anywhere in the central west that offers as uniformly good hard roads as the one shown on the accompanying map. Of the entire 221 miles, one does not encounter more than fifteen or twenty miles of dirt roads, none of which would be likely to give the motorist any trouble. Therefore, it may be termed an all weather route—one which may be safely driven at any time and under almost any conditions. It also has the advantage of good sized cities along the way, with excellent hotel and garage facilities. On the way to the Dells there are scenic attractions galore, including many famous lakes, rivers, and historic places.

Starting out of Chicago, the tour takes one out Lake street, and over the Grant highway with its black and yellow markings that run through Addison, Bloomingdale, and Ontarioville to Elgin, the famous watch factory city on the banks of the beautiful Fox river. Continuing from Elgin one goes north along the east bank of the Fox to Algonquin, whence the Dells trail leads through Crystal Lake, with its fine body of water bearing the same name, and on to Lake Geneva through Ridgefield, Greenwood, and Hebron. This route, while about ten miles longer than the one through Wheeling, Wauconda, and McHenry, is a very popular optional way of reaching the famous Wisconsin summer resort. It will be found particularly good as a wet weather route.

Continuing from Lake Geneva the route goes through Delavan, another Wisconsin town famed far and wide for its fine lake; through Janesville, situated on the Rock river and noted among other things for its natural beauty, its fine public institutions, and its great manufacturing industries; through Edgerton, one of the greatest tobacco growing centers in the west, and through Stoughton and McFarland, where are respectively located Lake Kegonsa and Lake Waubesa. A few miles farther on lies Madison, the state capital and the home of Wisconsin's great state university, beautifully situated on the shores of Lakes Mendota and Monona.

◆

Leaving Madison on the last stretch of the trip, the tourist goes through Waunakee, Dane, Lodi, Okee, and Merrimac, small villages, but possessing scenic charms; then on through Baraboo, the home of B. L. T.'s immortal "Bunn the Baker" and one of the wonder spots of the middle west. The city is built on a series of hills over one thousand feet above sea level, and it and the surrounding country are rich in scenic and historic interest. Near by is located Devil's lake, a unique body of inland water whose fame has spread over the entire country. This lake, sky blue and crystal clear, which is only one and one-half miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, lies in a bowl whose sides are formed by cliffs that rear their peaks five hundred feet above the surface of the water. An uncanny thing about Devil's lake, and the one from which it evidently derived its name, is the fact that it has no known inlet and scarcely any outlet. Baraboo, which is the headquarters of the Madison division of the Northwestern Railway system, with its great car shops, also is famed as the winter quarters of the Ringling Brothers, Forepaugh-Sells, and Barnum and Bailey shows.

◆

And Still They Come.

A novel type of automobile headlight lens, designed to comply with the new anti-glare laws, is announced by the Macbeth-Evans Glass company of Pittsburgh, known as the only American producer of coast lighthouse lenses. A distinctive feature of the device is a green enameled glass visor, by which all upward rays of light are redirected downward. The surface of the lens proper is divided into five horizontal prisms, designed to concentrate the light in front of the car, and concave sections on the inner surface provide for the side lighting needed in country driving and turning corners. Four years of experimental work are said to have preceded the finished design.

In China.

At the close of 1916 fifty-eight motor cars were registered in Hankow, China. All the cars in use there are exclusively for traffic within the concessions. This is an increase of fourteen over 1915. Of the cars registered thirty-five were American, eleven French, nine British, and three German makes.

Auto Men Here to Launch New National Body

MORE than 10,000 automobile dealers in the United States will be represented at a convention to be held in the Hotel La Salle on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week by 150 delegates appointed to organize the National Automobile Dealers' association. The delegates to the convention will represent thirty-two states and about 100 automobile trade associations. There will also be a number of delegates from unorganized territory.

George W. Browne and Bart J. Ruddle of Milwaukee are serving as chairman and secretary of the temporary convention, and the organization committee consists of Albert T. Clark of Kansas City, Kas.; G. A. Will of Minneapolis, Minn.; Edwin P. Bodley of Chicago, and Ernest T. Conlon of Grand Rapids, Mich.

It is the intention to make the national association the parent body of state and local associations and to handle through an executive the various questions affecting dealers that are at present uppermost in the motor world. The temporary organization took a leading part in eliminating the 5 per cent tax from the war revenue bill after it had reached the senate finance committee.

Motorcyclists Busy.

The Brighton Motorcycle club announces an endurance run to Rockford, Ill., and return, to be held next Sunday. The start will be made in the morning from the club's headquarters at Thirty-eighth street and Archer avenue, and there will be intermediate controls at Elgin and Marengo. The rules of the Federation of American Motorcyclists will govern the contest, a special regulation being that the use of open mufflers in passing through cities will subject riders to disqualification. Both "solos" and side cars are admitted to the entry list.

What Tourists Spend.

Replies from seventy-six tourists to letters sent out by the state highway commissioner of Colorado indicate that each car carries four persons as a rule, the average expenditure is $3.30 a person daily, and the average stay in the state is 28.6 days. The records of travel counts and other estimates indicate that during 1916 about 26,500 cars of non-residents passed through Colorado. The commissioner estimates, on the basis of his replies, that as a result of touring $10,000,000 was spent in the state.

Questions and Answers

Please advise me if the Higgins road, running from Jefferson Park to Dundee, is paved all the way, and also if it is in good condition for driving. X.

Bids have been let for the laying of concrete on the Higgins road and the contractor is likely to start work at almost any time. When work is started the road will be blocked for several months. If you wish to drive to Dundee, take the Lake street road through Addison, Bloomingdale, and Ontarioville to Elgin and then follow the river road up to Dundee. This is but little farther and makes an excellent route.

I recently had my car nicely painted and paid what I considered a good large price for a first class job. The work was only done a few weeks ago, but now the paint looks dull and bad and appears to be getting worse. I wrote to the firm that did the painting and they insisted that the work had been done all right and that I must have put something on the car that made the paint get dull. Can you offer any explanation? If so please tell me what to do. PUZZLED, Samoth, Ill.

Now you give me an opportunity for a little deduction, "my dear Watson." From your address I gather that you live in a farming community and likely reside outside of town. If so, and if you are like most of those who reside on farms, you probably keep your car in a barn and not in a garage. If I am right in this deduction it is more than likely that you keep horses or cows in the same barn. The varnish on an automobile will quickly lose its luster if it is kept in a place where there is any manure. The manure gives off nitrogen, which soon destroys the best varnish. Give your machine a coat or two of fresh varnish and then keep it in some place other than the barn.

BRISCOE WEEK

July 7th to July 14th (Inclusive)

COME SEE OUR EXHIBIT OF THE NEWEST BRISCOE CARS

THIS is Briscoe Week at our showrooms and at 1,000 others all over the United States. Make it the occasion for getting acquainted with the newest Briscoe models and with us. See the Half-Million Dollar Motor—it has inexhaustible power. Sit in the Briscoe with your family and note the unusual roominess—ample space for 6-foot men to stretch out—and its easy riding qualities.

Then there are mechanical superiorities for you to see that are usually ascribed to costly cars.

Building the Briscoe entirely in Briscoe factories makes possible the price of $725—on both touring and 4-passenger Roadster models.

Come today. You'll say the New Briscoe is the car you want.

Weekly Cruises from Chicago, Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland, Duluth or Georgian Bay Ports and Return

2,200 Miles of Beautiful Scenery, Shore Line, Islands, Rivers, Bays. Stops of several hours made at all principal points of interest—ample time to see the sights.

The Big, New Cruising Ships "North American" and "South American"—Passenger Service Exclusively—are magnificently equipped and especially built for long cruising trips and therefore naturally are the lake steamships equipped to give the very best service. They are so far superior to the average lake boat that they are comparable only with the big Atlantic Liners in appointments and facilities for comfort and service.

The "North American" and "South American" were planned and built for roominess in every quarter, with promenade and sun decks of unusual width. Large Grand Salon, commodious Lounging Rooms and dining and service rooms for perfect catering. The promenade and sun decks are ample for more than 3,000 persons, but as capacity is limited to about 1-6 that number who can be accommodated in state rooms, great latitude is provided in deck space. Steamer chairs are an added feature of comfort. The Grand Salon and Women's Lounging Room were planned to give ample room for holding concerts and other entertainments.

State Rooms and Parlors

Staterooms and parlor rooms are all outside (no inside rooms), have regular size windows or ports to insure perfect ventilation; have running water, call bells and electric lights. Parlors have brass beds, some with double beds, others with twin beds, baths and toilets.

Superiority of Dining Service

In this respect we have also made a radical departure from the usual rules for lake boats, and to make sure of a superior dining service we have "gone the limit" in employing a cafe manager, and chef, the best obtainable. Waitresses, neatly garbed in white, serve in the dining room. Other features new to lake boats are model bake shops with expert pastry cooks and bread bakers in charge. The commissary supplies are the best the market can supply.

Amusements and Playgrounds

To make the trip especially attractive while under way, on each ship there are various deck games. Orchestra concerts morning and afternoon, and dancing in the ballroom evenings for the grown-ups. For the amusement of the children each ship has an open air playground with toys of all kinds, games, sand boxes and swings. The playground is on the Promenade Deck, inclosed in woven wire for safety, and has a trained woman attendant in charge.

Exhaust Echoes

by Sheppard Butler

L. J. Ollier, director of sales of the Studebaker corporation, is back in South Bend after a swing through the eastern and New England states visiting Studebaker branch managers and dealers. It is his opinion, as confined to his publicity department for dissemination, that trade conditions are unusually bright and that "prosperity will overwhelm us within the next few months."

The Firestone Tire and Rubber company has set itself the task of finding homes and providing entertainment for its 13,000 employés. A large allotment of land has been opened by the company not far from its factory and lots are being sold to workers on easy payments. Houses are being built at cost and paid for 5 per cent down and 1 per cent a month. Recreation facilities are provided for in a $250,000 clubhouse.

An elaborate technical booklet describing in detail the new Westcott models has been prepared by the manufacturers for general distribution. The construction and functions of each unit in the car are outlined and explained to the last cotter pin.

A new edition of the Willys six is announced by the Willys-Overland company. The car is finished in light olive green, with lighter green wheels, set off by black fenders and nickel trimmings. Seven and four passenger touring cars—the latter designed on sport model lines—are offered.

WOOD DALE ACRES

Beautiful 5 Acre Tracts at

$200 Up Per Acre

Wood Dale acres, located at the front door of the station at Wood Dale, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, 19 miles northwest of the City Hall, comprises a vast tract of the richest soil to be found anywhere in the world. This is a broad claim, but investigation will prove it. The country is of a slightly rolling nature, wooded in spots and drains into the famous "Salt Creek," which is fed by numerous fresh water springs and lends beauty and charm to the landscape. No section within a similar radius of Chicago has an equal chance for appreciation in values in the next few years. Positively greatest bargain value of the year.

19 Miles from the "Loop" on C., M. & St. P. Ry.

The Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, with its splendid service, affords all the necessary advantages of transportation. Wood Dale is located on the Kansas City division of the road. The monthly commutation is $6.60 per month. The Elgin automobile road passes in front of this property.

All who see Wood Dale are enraptured with its beauty. A more picturesque, a more convenient and a more desirable home site could not be found. It is just the place for the busy business man or the worker employed in the downtown loop, who desires all the comforts of life and can now attain them at such small cost and without the slightest personal sacrifice. There has never before been a time when a home in the country offered as great inducements as today.

Perfect title guaranteed. 5 acre tracts at $200 per acre and up. 2, 3 and 4 acre tracts at $225 per acre and up. Large 107x453 feet lots [more than an acre] for as low as $275.

REAL ESTATE—SUMMER RESORTS.

FOR SALE—OTTAWATTAMIE PARK SUMMER HOMES.

We are developing what we believe to be the finest natural playground in Michigan—OTTAWATTAMIE PARK—on the beautifully wooded shores of Pentwater Lake, opening directly by deep boat channel into Lake Michigan, into summer homes for people who want the pleasure and recreation of resorting with nature without surrendering the conditions for health, cleanliness, morality, and culture of their own homes.

We are building substantially made, roomy cottages, with electric light, running water, bath, fireplace, telephone, etc., for sale or rent. These cottages are out in the woods, readily accessible by rail, auto, or boat, are served with immediate deliveries from all kinds of stores, and are close to as fine fishing, boating, and bathing as can be had anywhere.

The plats on which these homes are located are highly restricted. They are safeguarded much more carefully than the most desirable city residence districts. The whole development scheme is in no sense speculative, but is a high class service proposition controlled entirely by persons who believe in the philosophy of honest business, wholesome living, and cultural development.

If this appeals to you, write us. We shall be glad to tell you all the details and if Ottawattamie Park looks good to you we shall offer to rent or sell to you desirable lots or cottages, furnished or unfurnished, or to build for you according to your own plans for cash or on contract.

REAL ESTATE—SUMMER RESORTS.

FOR THE FAMILY SEEKING a Most Attractive Location, or for the Sportsman, Two Beautiful Islands in Northern Wisconsin.

Two islands in Lake Kawaguesaga, about three miles from Minocqua, Oneida county, Wisconsin, are offered for sale for $3,000; $1,500 may remain on mortgage at 6 per cent if desired.

One island contains about 16 acres and the other has about 2½ acres with a deep channel between.

The larger island stands up high and commands a magnificent view. It has a fine variety of timber, including considerable pine. About 4 or 5 acres were cleared a few years ago for a building site, but not used.

Lake Kawaguesaga connects with Minocqua Lake and this connects with Tomahawk Lake by the stream known as "Tomahawk Thoroughfare." There is no better fishing ground in Wisconsin, and the section is well supplied with a variety of game, including an abundance of deer.

The islands are only a night's ride from Chicago, either by the C., M. & St. Paul direct to Minocqua or by the Chicago and Northwestern to Woodruff, less than two miles from Minocqua.

The pure water and bracing pine air of northern Wisconsin render this spot as healthful as any on earth.

Help Wanted

Like thousands of others, believing farming is going to be the best business, I have decided to go back to the soil. I have closely inspected and walked over about 3,000 acres of railroad land in Louisiana and know that the water, soil, and climate are right. I am a German and want to get a number of German friends around me on this land. By taking an option on this whole tract I have been able to secure a good price and easy terms, but I haven't the money to handle more than 160 acres and want German friends to take up the other farms in such size tracts as they are able to handle. Until last few years have been thirteen years in South and made a success of farming. If you mean business let me hear from you, as my time is limited. Address O L 442, Tribune.

ARE You a Success?

[PRIVATE CAR EXCURSIONS, TUESDAY, JULY 10TH AND 24TH.]

THE TROUBLE with men who don't succeed is mostly that they do not get into step with some big movement. They don't realize they are living in a progressive period and yet are out of it. The big movement right now in this country is the occupation and development of the remaining unimproved lands.

THE DIFFERENCE between men who are successes or failures is principally mental habit. Men who think catch the spirit of the times and take advantage of continuance of progress in manufacturing, commerce, and agriculture. When human endeavor hesitates temporarily in one direction, it seeks another outlet. Just now the great tide of investment has turned to farm lands. Agriculture is uppermost in public interest and we are bracing ourselves as a nation to plow more furrows to help feed millions of people of other nations who have suddenly become dependent upon us.

YOU WHO HAVE BEEN hesitating: can't you see that now is the time to acquire farm land? Don't put it off until next year, but come on one of my excursions this month. It will be just a little harder to buy next year, as it is each succeeding year. Can't you apply the big tendency of the times to the direction of your own efforts and investment? The present impetus given to land values will be permanent. When peace comes to devastated Europe immigration to America will surpass all records.

AND WHY MICHIGAN? Because Michigan is one of the few undeveloped spots left in our country, is located here at the consuming center of population, near the world market of Chicago, also Milwaukee, Grand Rapids, and Detroit; tapped by the main arteries of rail and water transportation, and has the climate, soil, rainfall, water supply, and other conditions that produce every crop known to the temperate zone, including ambitious, energetic, healthy men and women, and happy, well fed children. What more in life?

OVER TWO THOUSAND strong [including our customers] we of the Swigart Tract are a part of the nation-wide land movement. We are doing our part in Michigan, backing our district with our united force of money, muscle, and brains. We do believe we are in the best part of Michigan and we do know that we are in the most rapidly developing part of the state, being a part, far more than any other, that is calling to itself substantial farmers from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa. Ours is a general farming country with conditions most favorable to fruit.

COME AND MAKE YOUR SUCCESS now! I have 50,000 acres available, with recent fine additions. How long will it be before immigration forces its occupancy? How quickly will these lands double, treble, and quadruple in price? I have lands from $15 to $35 per acre, and some of the very best of it can now be secured at $20 per acre, in 10, 20, 40, 80, and 160 acre tracts or more. My terms any one can meet. 10 acres, $5 to $25 down; 20 acres, $10 to $50 down; 40 acres, $25 to $100 down, balance small monthly or yearly payments. If you die before paying up fully your wife or children get the land without further payments.

GET MY FREE LITERATURE and map. Drop a postal or call for it. Study my proposition, then join an excursion to this district and see the crops growing. My next two PRIVATE CAR excursions will occur Tuesdays, July 10th and 24th, leaving my offices at 11:30 a. m. on each date. Round trip fare from Chicago, $11.75, from Toledo $10.89. Board and lodging $1.50 per day extra; gone two days; automobiles furnished free; accommodations for both men and women. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, near the Oklahoma line, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs, and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad like the Santa Fe would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

Farms and Acres.

WANTED—TO TRADE—280 ACRES FINE LAND FOR MERCHANDISE.

This farm is 4 miles from Carterville, Ill.; 7 miles from Carbondale, Ill.; 8 miles from Herrin, Ill.; 11 miles from Marion, Ill., which makes it near some of the best markets in the country. This farm lies gently rolling and is good rich land and highly improved. It has 3 miles of fence on it. Plenty of good water, all kinds. One 6 room house, one tenant house 3 rooms, one barn 40x100 feet, two big granaries, one 16x38 silo. There are 15 acres of timber, sowed in blue grass. There will be 50 acres in corn, 35 acres in peas, 40 acres in meadow, balance in tame grass pasture this year. Three-fourths of a mile to church and one-fourth mile to school. Good hard road part of the way to the farm. There is a mortgage on the farm to run 6 years at 5½ per cent. We want to trade our equity in this farm for merchandise because we are in the retail business and will give someone a bargain at $20,000, which is a cheap price. This farm has had from 75 to 125 head of cattle on it for several years. We put 300 to 400 loads of manure on it every year, which makes it a farm you cannot pick up every day. We raised 80 bushels of corn to the acre last year on this farm.

FINANCIAL.

BIG PROFITS IN WHEAT.

A number of responsible Chicago business men are raising $100,000 to plant 5,000 acres of what is conceded to be the best wheat land in Canada. Forty bushels per acre the last two years and over thirty the past six averages in this district. Four year lease at nominal rental with purchase option controls land on most favorable basis. Farming operations in charge of men of large experience and proven ability. All expenditures controlled by finance committee.

At present wheat prices, profits first year should double investment, with greater returns the second and third years, and a large profit the fourth.

The Canadian government, to encourage food production, exempts farming operations from war and income taxes.

With $60,000 now pledged, an additional $40,000 will cover all necessary expenditures, including tractors, plows, machinery, buildings, supplies, labor, etc. Breaking of land should start in July, hence additional $40,000 must be raised quickly.

We urge investigation and invite responsible parties to join in furnishing this balance in blocks of $5,000 or more.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A Rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

BIG PROFITS IN WHEAT.

A number of responsible Chicago business men are raising $100,000 to plant 8,000 acres of what is conceded to be the best wheat land in Canada. Forty bushels per acre the last two years and over thirty the past six averaged in this district. Four year lease at nominal rental with purchase option controls land on most favorable basis. Farming operations in charge of men of large experience and proven ability. All expenditures controlled by finance committee.

At present wheat prices, profits first year should double investment with greater returns the second and third years, and a large profit the fourth.

The Canadian Government, to encourage food production, exempts farming operations from war and income taxes.

With $60,000 now pledged, an additional $40,000 will cover all necessary expenditures, including tractors, plows, machinery, buildings, supplies, labor, etc. Breaking of land should start in July, hence additional $40,000 must be raised quickly.

We urge investigation and invite responsible parties to join in furnishing this balance in blocks of $5,000 or more.

Address D B 216, Tribune.

WAR TIME HYMNS FOR EVERY MAN DOING HIS BIT

Aviator, Surgeon, and Farmer Included in List.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

The soldier, sailor, aviator, surgeon, and the producer of food are having hymns written in their behalf, which will be sung in the churches.

This was cited yesterday as an evidence of the interest felt by the people and the democratic tendency of modern hymn writing by Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston university and formerly minister of music in the New First Congregational church, Chicago. He is one of the speakers at the training school of the International Sunday School association, which began its sessions Friday at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Some of the hymns mentioned by Prof. Smith were:

HYMN FOR AIRMEN.

Lord, guard and guide the men who fly
Through the great spaces of the sky;
Be with them traversing the air
In darkening storm or sunshine fair.

HYMN FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

When death flies swift on wave or field,
Be Thou a sure defense and shield!
Console and succor those who fall,
And help and hearten each and all!
O, hear a people's prayers for those
Who, fearless, face their country's foes.

HYMN FOR THOSE WHO FEED THE WORLD.

Shall you complain who feed the world?
Who clothe the world, who house the world?
Should you complain who are the world
Of what the world may do?
The world's life hangs on your right hand,
Your strong right hand, your skilled right hand;
You hold the whole world in your hand,
See to it what you do.

HYMN FOR THE ARMY SURGEON.

For those who minister and heal,
And spend themselves, their skill, their zeal,
Renew their hearts with Christlike faith,
And guard them from disease and death,
And in Thine own good time, Lord, send
Thy peace on earth till time shall end.

Prof. Smith said he favored the democratization of hymns, but was utterly opposed to ragtime music in Sunday school or church.

CITY THEATER FOR THE PEOPLE, PLAN FOR PIER

Place Where Ambitious May Have Their Fling Is the Idea.

BY MARGERY CURREY.

A people's playhouse, which will [illegible] the men and women and children [illegible] Chicago what her public parks [illegible] their gardens, lagoons, wooded [illegible] and playgrounds have been, seems [illegible] an approaching reality, after the entertainment staged Friday evening [illegible] auditorium of the municipal pier.

It was the second of the series of [illegible] summer entertainments to be given [illegible] the pier by the people of Chicago for the people of Chicago, in which those who take part may be, perhaps, singers from one of the settlement choruses, or [illegible] boys and girls who have [illegible] taking burlesque, or a lot of people gathered by the director from among the residents of fashionable districts, from among the clerks and shop workers of the city, or from the dramatic clubs of settlements.

It is to be the place where the [illegible] "has always been perishing to do some particular stunt" can come to try out his talent.

"Scottish Night."

It was Scottish night Friday evening at the pier auditorium, with the Scottish societies of the city furnishing the program, assisted by the California boys' band, which happened to be in town. A week ago the program was one which included plantation songs and dances, with all sorts of people having a good time together.

That Mrs. Eunice Tietjens, associate editor of Poetry and clever in amateur dramatics, and Mrs. Ernst Freund, a society woman, formerly Miss [illegible] Walton; Miss Rena Fox and her sister Bernice, aesthetic dancers; Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Henderson, Miss Alice [illegible], a young southerner, who loves to recite in Negro dialect; a number of young girls from the Three Arts club on North Dearborn street—that all these and many others less well known in the city who just wanted to be in a play were acting for all they were worth in these plantation stunts, shows what the people's playhouse is going to be.

Entertainments Weekly.

The weekly entertainments, which will take place Friday evenings of July and August, are being put on through the cooperation of the harbor board, which has charge of the pier; the department of public works and the Drama league of Chicago, and are under the direction of Mrs. Josephine Clement.

"This enterprise ought to develop into a great municipal theater," declared Mrs. Clement yesterday.

"With the elasticity of policy which those in charge of the entertainments have recommended, there is a chance for all kinds of the most diverting as well as most excellent amusements to be staged in the auditorium of the pier, which is a splendid place for such things.

"Everything that's good, from a boxing bout to grand opera, should be given to the people at a nominal price of admission. This admission should go to defraying necessary expenses. The people will go to things that are good, and they don't have to be 'high-brow' to be good."

Soldiers in Audience.

One of the entertainments planned for next month is a gigantic fiesta representing the tiller of the soil, with the sowing, the cultivating, and the harvesting shown in the light of patriotism.

Woman's Opinion on 'Art' May Prove Quite Costly

Because Sol Goldberg, a tailor in the Mallers building, had the wall decorations in his rooms changed, Mrs. Dorothy Gainsburg, who lives on Michigan avenue near Forty-seventh street, is alleged to have called him a "[illegible]" and a "shrimp." That is what Attorney William Feldman, who yesterday started a $10,000 damage suit against Mrs. Gainsburg in behalf of Goldberg, says. According to the attorney, Goldberg subrents the rooms in the Mallers building from Mrs. Gainsburg and she did not like the way they were redecorated.

He Took $1 Watch and It Hurt His Conscience

An anonymous letter received yesterday by City Custodian De Witt C. [illegible] said:

Dear sir—Find inclosed $1 [illegible] an unclaimed Ingersoll watch [illegible] a police station which should have been sent to the city custodian. [illegible] ue of watch is 85 cents. I wish to make restitution. Therefore place the value of the watch where it rightfully belongs. The dollar will [illegible] it.

It is presumed a policeman was conscience stricken.
